I have already explained to Your Lordship in my telegram under reference that this decision should be regarded as a political move to put the American merchant marine on an equal footing with its foreign competitors, rather than as a decision taken after full appreciation and consideration of all the international legal complications which it involves. Nevertheless, the fact remains that until December next, when Congress meets, this decision, which will come into force on 10th June next, will presumably hold good. It is further at least uncertain whether Congress will be prepared to annul it in favour of the present system of holding liquor on board ship under seal. It is therefore necessary, I think, at once to consider what attitude should be adopted to meet the present situation.

The serious results of the decision of the United States Supreme Court on the profitable operation of British vessels engaged in trade with the United States would alone, it seems to me, justify and require energetic action by His Majesty's Government with a view to its modification, and such action is, in my judgment, rendered all the more necessary by other recent attempts of the Government of the United States to project its sovereignty over British ships on the high seas, notably in relation to the conditions under which vessels belonging to the United States Shipping Board have been transferred to Canadian subjects. In that case also, as Your Lordship will remember, the American Government have shewn some inclination to regard the municipal laws and regulations of this country as superior to the established requirements of international comity. A quiet acceptance of the present decision would only tend to encourage similar efforts in the future and would throw the whole question of jurisdiction on the high seas into a state of bewildering confusion.

Retaliatory measures of various kinds spring at once to the mind as a possible means of inducing the United States Government to exempt British ships from the rigid operation of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution and the National Prohibition Act as they are now interpreted, but, apart from the bitter feelings and acrimonious controversies to which such acts would give rise, it would be extremely difficult to devise any measure of retaliation which could be made really effective against American shipping without at the same time inflicting serious damage on other foreign and even on British merchant vessels. For that reason all thought of retaliation must, I think, be abandoned as both useless and harmful. If this view be accepted by Your Lordship, His Majesty's Government must fall back upon the presentation to the United States Government of a Note, couched in friendly but firm terms, pointing out the grave injury which this constructive projection of American sovereignty is calculated to inflict on British subjects proceeding on their lawful errands on the high seas. The Note should also, in my opinion, define as clearly as may be the position of His Majesty's Government on the issues involved. By reason of our own practices and those of some of the British self-governing Dominions, we are precluded from taking exception to all projections of sovereignty. We cannot, for instance, deny to the United States the right to legislate effectually for the maintenance of good order and fair dealing on foreign vessels arriving within American territorial waters, nor can we oppose the enforcement of rules designed to establish conditions of health and safety, to prescribe the racial limitations of crews or the conditions under which immigrants shall be carried, etc. It is, however, possible for His Majesty's Government to lay down definitely and categorically the doctrine outlined in my Note to the Department of State, No. 893, of 30th November, 1922, copies of which were transmitted to the Foreign Office under cover of my despatch No. 1312 of 1st December, 1922. The language used in that Note was subsequently approved in full by Your Lordship. It laid stress on the clear distinction which can and should be drawn between "passive" substances which can be controlled by human agency and substances like unstable explosives, infected animals or articles, etc., which cannot with certainty be so controlled. The whole matter was summed up in the following question:—

"Is it wise that any State should set an example, and establish a precedent by declaring that some substances, not in themselves uncontrollably noxious or dangerous, cannot possibly exist legally, under perfect control in ships of foreign nationality entering its ports, in spite of the fact that the use of such substances is permitted under certain conditions to the citizens of the State which declares their passive existence on board ship to be illegal?"

Had the Supreme Court in its deliberations taken full account of the international consequences of its decision, it would have given consideration to the question here raised and its final judgment would probably have been based rather on international than on domestic expediencies. Even now, should His Majesty's Government reaffirm the same doctrine, it is difficult to see how the Government of the United States can reject it, especially if adhesion to it can previously be secured from the other principal maritime nations such as Japan, France, Italy, Holland, and the Scandinavian countries.

I venture, therefore, to recommend to Your Lordship that counsel should be taken immediately with the countries just mentioned and that, if possible, simultaneous notes of protest against the present decision and its implications should be addressed to the United States Government by all of them. The arrival of so many notes of protest at the same time would make plain to the American Government and people, as no isolated representation or acts of retaliation could, the international issues raised by the decision, and the obligation resting upon every nation to frame its municipal laws in such a manner as to respect the rights of other countries. If, in spite of such joint action by several foreign governments, the Administration of this country should fail to give effective heed to their protests, a demand might be made that the whole question should be submitted to the arbitration of an international tribunal.

I am sending copies of the Supreme Court decision also to Their Excellencies the Governors-General of Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and the Governor of Newfoundland.

TELEGRAM TO SIR A. GEDDES (WASHINGTON) FROM THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Sent 6.0 p.m., 21st May, 1923.)

(No. 170. (R).)

YOUR telegram No. 229 of 17th May. United States prohibition regulations His Majesty's Government do not contend that a ship entering the territorial waters of a country does not subject itself to the jurisdiction of that country, but the extent to which each country should compel the observance of its laws on the ships of another and the nationals on board those ships is of primary importance in the regulation of intercourse between nations. In the opinion of His Majesty's Government the jurisdiction should not be exercised except to restrain acts calculated to disturb public order. Upon this point the comity and practice of nations appear to be aptly defined in the judgment of the Supreme Court in the Wildenhuis case which reads, in part:—

"By comity it came to be generally understood among civilized nations that all matters of discipline and all things done on board which affected only the vessel or those belonging to her and did not involve the peace or dignity of the country or the tranquillity of the port, should by the government be left to be dealt with by the authorities of the nation to which the vessel belonged as the laws of that nation or the interests of its commerce should require."

The regulations proposed to be issued in accordance with the judgment of the Supreme Court afford an example of the kind of issue that may be raised all over the world if the existing comity and practice is abandoned. The vessels of all nations frequently pass through the jurisdiction of other nations even when not entering their ports; for example, to reach Antwerp a vessel must pass through Dutch territorial waters; to reach the Baltic, through Danish and Swedish waters; to reach the Black Sea, through Turkish waters.

National laws, though becoming more and more uniform are still in conflict on many points in so far as they regulate the rights and obligations of those on board national vessels, and an impossible position would be created in international voyages if the precedent now proposed were generalized, and conflicting national laws were imposed by each nation on the vessels of other nations within their territorial jurisdiction even though such vessels may enter the ports solely for the purpose of loading or discharging part cargoes, the export or import of which was permitted, or for the purpose of taking on board bunkers or stores, or even for receiving orders, and in the extreme case even though no port was entered at all.

The utmost importance is attached to this point as being one of principle. You should therefore urgently request the United States Government before departing so materially from the former common practice of all nations to discuss the matter with other maritime powers. The French, Spanish, Italian and Danish Governments have all been informed, in answer to their inquiries, of the above instructions to Your Excellency and you should ascertain from your colleagues of those countries what instructions they have received and concert with them in your representations to the United States Government in the way you think best.

TELEGRAM FROM SIR A. GEDDES (WASHINGTON) TO THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Received 8.30 a.m., 7th June, 1923.)

(No. 255. (R).) 6th June. My telegram of 4th June.

I have just received reply of Secretary of State to note despatched as instructed in your telegram No. 170 of 21st May.§ After usual acknowledgment, note proceeds as follows:

"You will of course understand that this Government cannot well discuss legality in an international sense of operation of an act of Congress, scope of which, within territorial limits of United States, has been authoritatively decided by Supreme Court of United States. While therefore I am not indisposed to consider in a friendly spirit views such as those expressed in your letter with regard to operation of Act upon vessels of foreign governments, I could not accept any suggestion questioning competency of Congress to enact the legislation to which you refer."

* i.e., enclosures in Nos. 420, 421 and 422 and other telegrams as to the attitude of foreign Powers. † No. 422. ‡ Enclosure 3: not printed; it contained the text of the draft treaty (see enclosure in No. 426). § Enclosure in No. 422.

With reference to Wildenhuis case, note quotes another extract from the same opinion declaring it to be part of law of civilized nations that when a merchant vessel of one country enters ports of another it subjects itself to law of place to which it goes. Quotation in question begins "No part of law" and ends "jurisdiction of country."

Secretary of State concludes as follows:—

"As question is one of exercising legislative discretion I assume operation of National Prohibition Act will receive attention of Congress when it next convenes and that all pertinent matters will have most careful consideration."
Ends.

Enclosure 2 in No. 424.

TELEGRAM FROM SIR A. GEDDES (WASHINGTON) TO THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(No. 259. (R).) 11th June. My telegram No. 255.

Secretary of State sent for counsellor to-day and said he was most anxious that inconvenience caused to maritime Powers by recently issued prohibition regulations should be overcome. With that end in view he had drafted a treaty which he suggests should be concluded between United States and the various maritime Powers, text of which is given in my immediately following telegram.

Secretary of State said that he was sure that Congress would not amend the law in so far as it relates to carriage of liquor in foreign vessels without some quid pro quo in view of the strong sentiment which still existed both in Congress and in the country in favour of prohibition. Main argument which would be used would be "why should we do anything to assist foreign Powers which will do nothing to assist us in preventing their ships from breaking our laws?" Whereas, if it could be shown by means of these treaties that foreign governments were assisting United States by consenting to right of search up to 12 miles, Mr. Hughes was convinced that a very favourable sentiment would be created and he was sure that treaties would be ratified by Senate.

Mr. Hughes begged that no publicity should be given to this scheme at present though he realized that Your Lordship would, of course, wish to discuss it with other maritime Powers to whom he is communicating draft text.

Mr. Chilton said he knew that His Majesty's Government had always been seriously averse to any interference with vessels outside the three-mile limit, but he could not say what view they would take with regard to Mr. Hughes' proposal.

Mr. Chilton added that he presumed that proposed scheme would not involve any further interference with vessels regularly plying to United States ports than took place at present.

Mr. Hughes assured him that it would not.

Enclosure 4 in No. 424.

(No. 410.)

SIR, British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 25th May, 1923.

IN your note of the 4th instant, you were good enough to communicate to me a copy of the Decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, dated the 30th ultimo, respecting the application to vessels entering American territorial waters of certain provisions of the National Prohibition Act.

The situation created by this decision has been engaging the earnest attention of His Majesty's Government. They do not contend that a ship entering the territorial waters of a country does not subject itself to the jurisdiction of that country, but the extent to which each country should compel observance of its laws on the ships of another, and the nationals on board of those ships, is of primary importance in the regular intercourse between nations. In the opinion of His Majesty's Government, jurisdiction should not be exercised except to restrain acts calculated to disturb public order and safety. Upon this point the comity and practice of nations appears to be aptly defined in the judgment of the Supreme Court in the "Wildenhuis" case, with which you are, no doubt, familiar. (See United States Reports, Volume No. 120, October term 1886, pages 1-19). In this case the jurisdiction of the United States was extended to cover an act committed on a foreign ship. Yet, even so, the Supreme Court recognized the existing international doctrine on the subject to be as follows:—

"And so by comity it came to be generally understood among civilized nations that all matters of discipline and all things done on board which affected only the vessel or those belonging to her, and did not involve the peace or dignity of the country, or the tranquillity of the port, should be left by the local government to be dealt with by the authorities of the nation to which the vessel belonged as the laws of that nation or the interests of its commerce should require."

The regulations proposed to be issued in accordance with the Supreme Court judgment afford an example of the kind of issue that may be raised all over the world if the existing comity and practice is abandoned. Ships of all nations frequently pass through the jurisdiction of other nations even when not entering their ports. For example, to reach Antwerp a vessel must pass through Dutch territorial waters, to reach the Baltic through Danish or Swedish waters, to reach the Black Sea through Turkish waters.

It is true that national laws, in so far as they regulate the rights and obligations of those on board national ships, are becoming more and more uniform. They do, however, still conflict on many points. It follows, therefore, that if the precedent now proposed were generalized, conflicting national laws could be imposed by each nation on foreign shipping within its territorial jurisdiction. This would create an impossible situation in international voyages, for interference might then be exercised on foreign ships entering ports:—

- (1) to load or discharge that part of their cargoes the export or import of which is permitted;
- (2) to take on board bunkers or stores;
- (3) to receive orders.

In extreme cases indeed such interference might even extend to ships which had not entered any port.

His Majesty's Government feel that such instances as those suggested above would be the occasion of an exercise of national authority, marking so great a departure from accepted custom as to amount to the adoption of a new principle. I have the honour, therefore, urgently to request that the United States Government, before departing so materially from the former common practice of all nations, will enter into a discussion of this matter with the other maritime Powers.

I have, &c.,

A. C. GEDDES.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 260 of the 11th instant, I have the honour to transmit to Your Lordship herewith copies of the draft Treaty in regard to the extension of the limit of territorial waters to twelve miles, which was handed to Mr. Chilton by Mr. Hughes on 11th June.

ARTICLE I.

THE High Contracting Parties, without attempting to extend as between themselves the limits of their respective territorial waters adjacent to the high seas, agree that the authorities of either High Contracting Party may, within the distance of twelve geographical miles from its coasts, board the private vessels of the other and make inquiry of the masters thereof as to whether such vessels or the person or persons controlling them are engaged in any attempt, either with or without the co-operation of other vessels, or persons on board the same, to violate the laws of the High Contracting Party making the inquiry, and prohibiting or regulating the unloading near, or importation into, its territories of any articles.

An officer of one High Contracting Party boarding a private vessel of the other may examine the manifest of the vessel and make inquiry of the master with respect to the cargo and destination thereof. If such officer has reason to believe from the statements of the master or from documents exhibited by him or otherwise, that the vessel or the person or persons controlling it, either with or without the co-operation of other vessels, or persons on board the same, is or are engaged in the wilful commission of acts which constitute a violation of the laws of the State of which such boarding officer is an official, with respect to the unloading or importation of any article or articles, he shall impart his belief to the master of the vessel, and thereupon may, with the aid of the master, institute a search of the vessel and an examination of any articles on board. The search shall be conducted with the courtesy and consideration which ought to be observed between friendly nations.

If there is reasonable cause for belief that the vessel or the person or persons controlling it is or are wilfully engaged, with or without the co-operation of other vessels or persons on board the same, in the commission of acts which constitute a violation of the laws of the State whose officer has conducted the search, forbidding or regulating the unloading near, or importation into its territories of any article or articles, the vessel, cargo and the person or persons controlling it or them may be seized and brought in for an adjudication, and subjected to the imposition of the penalties established by law by the Party whose laws and regulations are found to have been violated.

ARTICLE II.

Any article or articles the importation of which into the territories of either High Contracting Party is or are for any purposes prohibited by its laws, but which is or are listed as sea stores, or as cargo destined for a port foreign to either High Contracting Party, on board a private vessel of either High Contracting Party destined for a port of the other High Contracting Party, may be brought within the territorial waters of such other High Contracting Party on condition that upon arrival of the vessel so destined within twelve geographical miles of the coasts of such High Contracting Party whose territorial waters are about to be entered, such article or articles may be placed under seal by the appropriate officer of that Party and shall be kept sealed continuously thereafter until the vessel enters and during the entire stay of the vessel within those waters, and no part of such article or articles shall, during that period, be removed from under seal for any purposes whatsoever. Upon the departure of the vessel from such territorial waters destined for a foreign port, such article or articles under seal may be released therefrom either by an officer of the vessel or by an officer of the Party affixing the seal.

AIDE-MEMOIRE.

HIS Britannic Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires has received a telegraphic communication from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs pointing out that theoretically the international validity of the three-mile limit would be strengthened by the conclusion of a treaty making an exception for a special purpose. Practically, however, such a treaty would weaken the principle because it would form a precedent for the conclusion of further similar treaties until finally the principle would become a dead letter. For this reason Lord Curzon felt bound to state when questioned in Parliament that His Majesty's Government could not accept the proposal of the Secretary of State of the United States.

In the opinion of Lord Curzon, Mr. Hughes' proposed treaty would not provide for any immediate remedy for the present difficulties, seeing that it could not be ratified until Congress meets, when an amendment to the Volstead Act could equally well be introduced if the United States Government so desired. Moreover, even if the twelve-mile limit were accepted, cases would inevitably occur liable to cause serious friction between two countries, owing to the difficulty of deciding with any certainty the position of a limit usually out of sight of land, at any rate on the Atlantic coast.

Lord Curzon adds that the Hovering Acts in the United Kingdom were entirely superseded by the Customs Consolidation Act, 1876, by which British municipal legislation is made to conform with international law.

14th July, 1923.

[39795]

Enclosure 2 in No. 427.

COPY OF NOTE COMMUNICATED TO THE BRITISH EMBASSY IN WASHINGTON ON 19TH JULY, 1923.

THE Secretary of State presents his compliments to the Chargé d'Affaires ad interim of Great Britain and acknowledges the receipt of the memorandum under date of the 14th instant, expressing the views of His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs with respect to the proposed Treaty relating to visit and search of vessels within twelve miles of the coasts of the parties respectively, for the purpose of preventing the illegal introduction of articles into their territories, and also relating to the carriage within territorial waters of certain sealed stores and cargo destined for foreign ports.

Preliminarily it should be observed that a draft treaty was submitted informally simply for the purpose of avoiding misunderstanding and of making a concrete suggestion which could form the basis of discussion. It should also be said that it was not the purpose of the Secretary of State to propose an extension of the limits of territorial waters and the draft proposal specifically negated such an intention.

It is noted that Lord Curzon points out that the theory of the international validity of the three-mile limit would be strengthened by the conclusion of a treaty making an exception for a special purpose, but that he is of the opinion that such a treaty would weaken the principle because it would form a precedent the following of which would ultimately deprive the principle of force. It is not perceived that this would be the result, as no Power would be under obligation to make any other agreements unless it saw fit to do so, or to treat the special agreement as a precedent except in a precisely analogous case and there could be inserted in the special agreement any statement or qualification that might be deemed to be desirable to show that it was definitely limited to the particular situation in view.

In relation to Lord Curzon's further suggestion it may be stated that, while the proposed treaty could not be ratified until the Senate convenes, and while the Secretary of State is not in a position to give an assurance either with respect to the action of the Senate or with regard to the prospect of securing from it an amendment to the Volstead Act in relation to ship liquor and cargo liquor destined to foreign ports, it is believed that the solution of the present difficulty through the making of a fair and reasonable agreement such as is proposed would be the most promising method of securing early action. Therefore, Mr. Hughes trusts that the suggestion will not be put aside upon the supposition that another course is equally feasible.

With respect to Lord Curzon's suggestion that, even if the twelve-mile limit were accepted, cases would inevitably occur liable to cause serious friction between the two countries owing to the difficulty of deciding with any certainty the position of a vessel usually out of sight of land, at any rate on the Atlantic coast, it is believed by this Government that the proposed special agreement would do much to reduce, if indeed it would not wholly eliminate, the causes of friction due to the present efforts to evade the laws of the United States. In this connexion it must be emphasized that the proposed agreement would not interfere with British vessels engaged in legitimate commerce and bound for American ports. Such vessels will necessarily come not only within twelve miles but within three miles of the American coast and will hence in any event be subject to examination by American authorities and will of course comply with the applicable laws of the United States. The proposed special agreement would bear only upon those vessels which come within twelve miles, but hover off the three-mile limit for the purpose of aiding in the smuggling of intoxicating liquor or other prohibited articles into the territory of the United States.

It is impossible for this Government not to take all proper and lawful measures to prevent this illicit traffic from being carried on. An illustration is afforded by the case of the schooner "Henry L. Marshall," the conduct of which recently came under the scrutiny of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit, as stated in the memorandum of the Secretary of State delivered to the British Embassy on the 16th instant. While it is understood that this vessel is not regarded as a British vessel for the reason which His Majesty's Government has stated, reference may be made to the practice of the vessel as showing the conditions with which the American Government is required to deal. The vessel did not come within the three-mile limit, but she made her arrangements for the carriage of her illicit cargo to the shore of the United States in violation of its laws, and, as the Court found, while the unloading was begun outside the three-mile limit, it was continued within the territorial waters of the United States, and the vessel was engaged contrary to the laws of the United States in introducing her cargo of intoxicating liquors within the commerce of the United States.

This Government has already expressed the hope that the British Government will interpose no obstacles in such cases to the enforcement of the laws of the United States, but it is believed that an appropriate agreement which would not injure bona fide trade but would facilitate the enforcement of the laws of the United States in preventing the smuggling of liquor would remove occasions for misunderstanding and eliminate the serious friction to which the memorandum under consideration refers.

It may confidently be asserted that there would be no disposition on the part of the American authorities, and the special agreement would not justify any attempt to seize a British vessel save within the limits proposed, and when it was clear that the vessel concerned was directly involved in an attempt to introduce its illicit cargo into the territory of the United States. British vessels bound for the ports of the United States would encounter no additional obstacles to their trade, and vessels destined for foreign ports which happened to pass on legitimate errands within twelve miles of the American coast would suffer no inconvenience, while such vessels as were engaged in the unlawful conduct above described would not be able to create difficulties between the two countries, much less serious friction, by attempts to secure immunity for their operations by invoking the protection of the British flag.

Although the Government of the United States regards the proposed agreement as an appropriate setting forth of the proposal, it would cordially welcome the co-operation of the British Government in moulding the form of an arrangement which would reasonably serve a purpose which it is firmly believed may be found to be common to both countries.

(No. 1308.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 22nd August, 1923.

I HAVE had under careful consideration, in consultation with the other Departments of His Majesty's Government concerned, Mr. Hughes' proposals for an extension of territorial jurisdiction in connexion with the liquor traffic from the ordinary three mile limit of territorial waters to a distance of twelve miles from the coast, as embodied in the draft Treaty enclosed in Sir A. Geddes' despatch No. 751 of 14th June last.†

2. The object of the United States Government in making these proposals is to secure the right to search and arrest ships from which spirituous liquors are sold just outside the present limit of territorial jurisdiction. The extent of this traffic seems, however, to have been exaggerated, judging from the following statement published by Mr. Haynes, the United States Prohibition Commissioner, in the New York Times of 18th July last.

"The moonshine-still is the bootleggers' chief source of supply. From what other place can he get his liquor in quantity? Surely not from the rigidly controlled bonded warehouses—they are eliminated at once. As to smuggled liquor, some it is true is brought into the country, but not one-tenth as much as the illegal traffic would have us believe.

When reports of huge smuggling operations are circulated, it should be remembered that the illicit liquor interests are conducting a great and elaborate propaganda campaign to discredit law enforcement, and that the spreading of such reports is part and parcel of that campaign. No bootlegger, of course, is willing to admit that he can obtain only adulterated moonshine. Hence, fanciful tales of the wet wave sweeping in on our coasts and other related falsehoods pass from mouth to mouth to hide the real and dangerous origin of what the bootlegger has to sell."

3. In face of this authoritative pronouncement, I feel additional hesitation in accepting proposals which, with all due respect to Mr. Hughes, cannot, in my opinion, fail to weaken the authority of the general rule of international law, whereby three miles is regarded as the limit of territorial jurisdiction. Moreover, the Atlantic coast line of the United States, except the small part between Portland (Maine), and the Bay of Fundy, is so low, that it is not as a rule visible twelve miles out at sea; the difficulty of deciding the exact position of the proposed new limit would, in consequence, be much increased, and there would be a constant risk of disputes arising between the two countries whenever a British ship was boarded or arrested by the United States preventive service on or near the new line. In this connexion, I should observe that the ancient British Hovering Acts were modified in 1876 to bring them into harmony with the principles of international law, and His Majesty's Government cannot admit that the municipal legislation of any country can override those principles.

4. No spirituous liquors are cleared direct from this country to United States ports, and so far as British subjects are concerned, there is no violation of any law, British or international, in the sale of such liquors on the high seas to purchasers of any nationality; therefore, there is no obligation upon His Majesty's Government to interfere with the prosecution of a perfectly legitimate trade. Nevertheless, the whole question has been carefully examined with an earnest desire to afford the United States Government any proper assistance in the difficulties which they are encountering in the enforcement of the Volstead Act. In this spirit, legislation was considered with a view to prohibiting the export of spirituous liquors to destinations adjacent to the United States except under licence, or to rendering illegal the discharge of such liquors at ports other than those to which they were originally consigned. It became apparent, however, that such legislation would necessitate, and could indeed only be made effective by, rationing supplies not merely to countries adjacent to the United States, but to all countries, for which purpose powers would be required similar to those exercised for the control of trade during the War. The United States Government will probably agree that His Majesty's Government could hardly be expected to revive such powers, seeing that the United States Government themselves (in March, 1920), explained their inability to ratify the Convention for the control of the arms traffic on the very ground that they were not prepared to revive the war Regulations by which alone a private trade could be regulated.

5. Assuming, however, that measures could be devised for stopping the export from this country of spirituous liquors which might ultimately reach the United States, and that all other countries were prepared to take similar action so that the traffic would not merely be diverted into other channels, His Majesty's Government would still feel great hesitation in proposing such measures to Parliament so long as British ships are prevented from carrying liquor under seal in transit through United States waters. As far as I am aware, it has never been alleged that any liquor at all has made its way into the United States from the stores of British ships calling at United States ports, so that this restriction, besides constituting in effect an interference with the liberty of British ships on the high seas, appears to be entirely superfluous.

6. His Majesty's Government do not deny the strictly legal right of the United States or any other country to impose its jurisdiction on all ships whether national or foreign within its territorial waters. His Majesty's Government themselves claim that right, and it is even the case that some of the provisions of the British Merchant Shipping Acts are such that ships visiting ports in the United Kingdom must comply with them before entering and after leaving the jurisdiction. These provisions, however, relate solely to the safety and welfare of the ship, crew and passengers. Similar provisions exist in the legislation of the United States and other countries, and they are generally recognized as reasonable.

7. It is, however, equally well recognized that the circumstances of ships, travelling as they do from port to port in many different countries, are peculiar, and that to subject them to all the different and often conflicting requirements of the various jurisdictions which they may enter, would create an impossible situation. Consequently, as a matter of international comity and practice, the maritime Powers refrain from imposing their jurisdiction on foreign ships except for the purposes stated above, namely, the safety and welfare of the ships, crews and passengers. The principle was well stated in the despatch of 28th October, 1852 from Mr. Conrad, when Acting Secretary of State, to the United States Minister at Madrid, wherein he writes:—

"You will state that this Government does not question the right of every nation to prescribe the conditions on which the vessels of other nations may be admitted into her ports. That nevertheless those conditions ought not to conflict with the received usages which regulate the commercial intercourse between civilized nations. That those usages are well known and long established, and no nation can disregard them without giving just cause of complaint to all other nations whose interests would be affected by their violation."

8. The United States Government have indeed given recent proof of their fidelity to the same principle, in exempting ships trading between the United States and Italy from the strict application of the Volstead Act, on the ground that Italian law requires the provision of a certain amount of liquor on such ships. You should, therefore, make a representation to the United States Government in the sense of this despatch and express the earnest hope that means may be found to modify the present application of the Volstead Act to British ships, and thus to remedy what is, in effect, an unwarrantable interference with the domestic concerns of British ships on the high seas.

9. You should suspend action on the instructions contained in this despatch until you receive my further authority to act upon them.

19TH SEPTEMBER. Your despatch No. 1308, and your telegram No. 283.

Acting Secretary of State told me last night that he was continually receiving inquiries from Press, as to whether anything further had been received from His Majesty's Government with regard to twelve mile limit proposal, and that now that he had received my Note, he would have to tell them something.

He asked whether there would be any objection to issuing a statement to Press, giving the gist of Your Lordship's arguments. I said that I saw no reason for this, and that it should certainly not be done without Your Lordship's consent. If he must publish something on the subject, I suggested that he should confine himself to saying that he had received a communication from His Majesty's Government stating that they were not disposed to agree to Mr. Hughes' proposal (which Your Lordship had already stated in the House of Lords), but that the matter would be discussed at forthcoming Imperial Conference (which had already been announced in the Press).

Mr. Phillips agreed to this, and statements on these lines appear in to-night's Press.

I have replied similarly to representatives of Press who have called here.

Enclosure 1 in No. 429.

(No. 1679.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 7th November, 1923.

You were informed by my despatch No. 1308 of 22nd August last* that some difficulty was felt in agreeing to the proposals embodied in Mr. Hughes' draft Treaty for the regulation of the liquor traffic, because the provisions of that Treaty tended to weaken the authority of the three-mile limit rule, and because the prohibition of the carriage of liquor under seal by British ships constituted a violation of the generally accepted canons of international comity.

2. You were further informed that the whole question would be referred to the Imperial Conference, and for that purpose a treaty was drafted (copy, with explanatory note, enclosed), which concedes to the United States Government an even wider area of search than that defined in Mr. Hughes' Treaty, and at the same time assures to British ships the right to carry liquor under seal in transit through United States territorial waters.

3. The draft Treaty was about to be submitted to the Conference for consideration when I was advised of the danger that this concession, though sanctioned by a Treaty and therefore legal, might be regarded by the United States Courts as unconstitutional, and that British ships might in consequence, notwithstanding the Treaty, be deprived of that privilege by legal proceedings over which the administration could exercise no control.

4. Reference to the judgment of the Supreme Court of 23rd April last (enclosed in Sir A. Geddes' despatch No. 578)† seems to show that the danger is not one to be disregarded. In delivering that judgment Mr. Justice Devanter said:—

"While the construction and application of the National Prohibition Act is the ultimate matter in controversy, the Act is so closely related to the eighteenth Amendment, to enforce which it was enacted, that a right understanding of it involves an examination and interpretation of the Amendment. The first section of the latter declares:

"Section 1.—After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from, the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof, for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited."

He then proceeded to show that the Volstead Act correctly carries out the intention of the eighteenth Amendment, and then that the proper interpretation of the Act is that no ship, domestic or foreign, can carry liquor in transit within United States territorial waters. That is to say, such carriage of liquor appears to be not merely illegal but unconstitutional.

5. I have not overlooked the President's statement to the Press, reported in your telegram No. 434,‡ to the effect that as Congress specifically exempted from the operation of the Act liquor in transit through the Panama Canal, it thereby recognized that the right of foreign ships to transport liquor in United States waters is not prohibited by the Constitution but merely by the Act, which latter can be modified by the Treaty. I am, however, not aware that the right to carry liquor through the Panama Canal has ever been challenged and confirmed in the United States Courts, nor can I regard the precedent as altogether reassuring.

6. In the case of the Canal it is obviously to the interest of the United States not to enforce a prohibition which would tend to divert shipping to other routes and thus impair the profitable operation of the waterway. Whereas in the case of the carriage of liquor in transit by British ships in United States territorial waters generally, the shipping interests of the United States have already shown signs of opposition to a concession calculated to place them in a position of inferiority as compared with their British competitors.

* Enclosure 1 in No. 428.

† Enclosure in No. 421.

‡ Enclosure 3 in No. 429.

7. There is in consequence no guarantee that the constitutional validity of the concession may not be challenged in the Courts, irrespective of any assurance or opinion expressed by the President or by any other member of the administration. Should it be so challenged and not confirmed by the Courts, His Majesty's Government would lose the privilege in return for which they are making what appears to them to be a very important concession about the right of arrest and search.

8. As at present advised, it appears to me impossible to proceed with the Treaty or any similar arrangement until His Majesty's Government have been favoured with authoritative assurances of the United States Government on this point.

DRAFT TREATY.

1. The High Contracting Parties declare that it is their firm intention to uphold the principle that three marine miles measured from low water mark constitute the proper limits of territorial waters.

2. (1) His Britannic Majesty agrees that he will raise no objection to the boarding of private vessels under the British flag outside the limits of territorial waters by the authorities of the United States in order that inquiries may be addressed to those on board and an examination be made of the ship's papers for the purpose of ascertaining whether the vessel or those on board are endeavouring to import or have imported alcoholic beverages into the United States in violation of the laws in force in that country. When such inquiries and examination show a reasonable ground for suspicion, a search of the vessel may be instituted.

(2) If there is reasonable cause for belief that the vessel has committed or is committing or attempting to commit an offence against the laws of the United States prohibiting the importation of alcoholic beverages, the vessel may be seized and taken into a port of the United States for adjudication in accordance with such laws.

(3) The rights conferred by this article shall not be exercised at a greater distance from the coast of the United States than can be traversed in one hour by the vessel suspected of endeavouring to commit the offence. In cases, however, in which the liquor is intended to be conveyed to the United States by a vessel other than the one boarded and searched, it shall be the speed of such other vessel and not the speed of the vessel boarded, which shall determine the distance from the coast at which the right under this article can be exercised.

3. The United States agrees to allow British vessels voyaging to or from the ports or passing through the waters of the United States to have on board alcoholic liquors listed as sea stores or as cargo destined for a foreign port, provided that such liquor is kept under seal while within the jurisdiction of the United States.

4. Any claim by a British vessel for compensation on the ground that it has suffered loss or injury through the improper or unreasonable exercise of the rights conferred by Article 2 of this treaty or on the ground that it has not been given the benefit of Article 3 shall be referred for the joint consideration of two persons, one of whom shall be nominated by each of the High Contracting Parties.

Effect shall be given to the recommendations contained in any such joint report. If no joint report can be agreed upon, the claim shall be referred to the Claims Commission established under the provisions of the Agreement for the Settlement of Outstanding Pecuniary Claims signed at Washington on 18th August, 1910, but the claim shall not, before submission to the Tribunal, require to be included in a schedule of claims confirmed in the manner therein provided.

5. This treaty shall be subject to ratification and shall remain in force for a period of one year from the date of the exchange of ratifications.

Three months before the expiration of the said period of one year, either of the High Contracting Parties may give notice of its desire to propose modifications in the terms of the treaty.

If such modifications have not been agreed upon before the expiration of the term of one year mentioned above, the treaty shall lapse.

If no notice is given on either side of the desire to propose modifications, the treaty shall remain in force for another year, and so on automatically, but subject always in respect of each such period of a year to the right on either side to propose, as provided above, three months before its expiration modifications in the treaty, and to the provision that, if such modifications are not agreed upon before the close of the period of one year, the treaty shall lapse.

DRAFT TREATY WITH THE UNITED STATES FOR THE SEIZURE OF BRITISH VESSELS OUTSIDE THE THREE-MILE LIMIT.

THE following explanations may serve to remove the misapprehensions which are felt with regard to the wording of paragraph 3 of Article 2.

The conditions which have to be met are those of fishing schooners or other slow sailing vessels being used as depot ships and lying outside the three-mile limit but employed as part of an organization under which the actual transporting of the liquor into the United States is carried out on fast motor boats. These depot ships would move so slowly that it would be no use to the Americans to be able to search and if necessary seize such vessels only at a distance which the depot ships themselves could travel in the space of an hour. The wording of paragraph 3 was, therefore, chosen so as to make the computation of the distance from the shore determined by the speed of the vessel transporting the liquor (i.e., in the case under consideration the fast motor boat) and not the vessel on which the liquor may be found or which is suspected of taking part in the importation and is searched accordingly.

It may be that the wording of paragraph 3 of Article 2 is not sufficiently explicit, and if it is thought necessary to make it clearer, I would suggest the following wording:—

"(3) The rights conferred by this article shall not be exercised at a greater distance from the coast of the United States than can be traversed in one hour by the vessel suspected of endeavouring to commit the offence. In cases, however, in which the liquor is intended to be conveyed to the United States by a vessel other than the one boarded and searched, it shall be the speed of such other vessel and not the speed of the vessel boarded which shall determine the distance from the coast at which the rights under this article can be exercised."

TELEGRAM FROM MR. CHILTON (WASHINGTON) TO THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Received 10.40 p.m., 1st November, 1923.)

(No. 430. (R.)) 1st November. My telegram No. 426.

Press to-day announces that His Majesty's Government have agreed to negotiate a treaty with United States Government regarding right of search and seizure which will not be confined to a twelve-mile limit but will probably embrace distance covered by broad term "an hour's sailing distance from American shore," which is reckoned roughly at from ten to fifteen miles. Treaty is stated to give Great Britain America's formal affirmation of three-mile limit as governing British maritime rights generally.

Secretary of State informed me to-day that he had no information on the subject from United States Ambassador in London, who is stated by Press to have settled the question with Your Lordship.

(No. 434. (R.)) 4th November. My telegram No. 430.

Some days ago Department of Justice raised question in Press as to whether a treaty extending right of search to twelve miles could be made under Supreme Court decision because apparently Supreme Court had stood upon constitution in denying right of foreign steamship lines to bring liquor into American waters.

President announced yesterday to representatives of Press that he agrees with Secretary of State that treaty-making power of Government can negotiate such a treaty without violating constitution. Treaty would be supreme over Prohibition Act. White House view is stated to be that act specifically exempted from its provisions ships operating through Panama Canal. Therefore Congress recognized that constitution did not deny right of foreign ships to transport liquor in American waters. Therefore (inhibition) must lie in Prohibition Act and a treaty approved by treaty-making powers which are executive and legislative branches of Government is supreme over a domestic law.

LIQUOR Traffic. When, in conversation with United States Ambassador, I referred in general terms to the agreement with the United States, which I was about to recommend to the Imperial Conference, it had been urged by Mr. Harvey that it should not be in the form of an exchange of notes, as we had contemplated, but should be embodied in a treaty. This he urged for technical and juridical reasons. I had made it perfectly clear to His Excellency that the whole question had still to be submitted to and debated by the Imperial Conference and, therefore, nothing definite could, as yet, be said about the proposed treaty. Pending the receipt of your views on a number of points which I am embodying in a despatch, in view of the doubt which has now been raised in the United States as to whether a treaty can over-ride an article of the American constitution, the discussion of the treaty in the Imperial Conference must now be deferred.

I saw Mr. Hughes this morning and spoke to him in the sense of Your Lordship's telegram of 5th November and he said that he would await further communications from me on the subjects mentioned.

Mr. Hughes told me, regarding the liquor traffic question, that when Mr. Harvey had returned from London recently he had instructed him to communicate to Your Lordship the text of a clause which he was to suggest could be embodied in the treaty and which he thought would make everything perfectly safe. The Secretary of State repeated to me the reasons why there was no danger of the proposed treaty violating the constitution, which are the same as those given by President Coolidge to the Press, as reported in my telegram of 3rd November, and he expressed himself confidently that the treaty would pass the Senate.

Enclosure 1 in No. 430.

MY LORD, British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 9th November, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to report that great prominence has been given of late to telegrams emanating from London and reporting that not only have His Majesty's Government accepted in principle Mr. Hughes' proposals for allowing the competent American authorities to search, and if necessary to seize, within a limit of twelve miles from the United States coast, vessels flying the British flag and suspected of being engaged in the illicit liquor traffic, but that they are even about to go a little further and to allow such action as is described above to be taken within a distance of one hour's sail from the American shore.

The press generally evinces great satisfaction that at last an agreement is about to be reached between the two countries which will both assist in the enforcement of the prohibition law and at the same time remove a cause of possible friction between the United States and Great Britain. It is thought that the wider powers about to be conferred upon the anti-smuggling forces will reduce the illegal importation of liquor very considerably and that in time rum-running will become so precarious an occupation that it will lose its savour.

The credit for having brought about this happy state of affairs is fairly evenly divided between the late American Ambassador in London and the Secretary of State. It is hinted that, although Colonel Harvey's work, while accredited to the Court of St. James, was thorough rather than brilliant, his career in London has come to an end in a blaze of glory. There is also a tendency to assume that His Majesty's Government have been persuaded to agree to Mr. Hughes' proposals through moral pressure exerted by the Dominion Prime Ministers, who are credited with being interested in the outcome of the prohibition experiment in the United States with a view perhaps to the future enactment of similar legislation in their own countries.

It is, however, when the question of the quid pro quo required by His Majesty's Government in return for their concession respecting the right of search, etc., comes to be discussed, that the first danger signals are to be seen. While most of the more responsible organs are confident that Congress will not object to the treaty clause permitting British vessels to enter American ports with liquor supplies under seal, the New York World adopts the attitude that any such concession would be unconstitutional. The Anti-Saloon League, jubilant over the twelve-mile limit, roundly condemns the entry of even securely sealed liquor into American waters. Lastly, the private shipping interests frankly admit they will oppose a bargain which they feel will attract passengers to British lines in preference to American. They take no interest whatever in the question of smuggling, but are reported to be preparing to fight the whole treaty to prevent American shipping from being subjected once more to "wet" competition which proved very irritating until the Supreme Court decision.

My despatch No. 1679* of 7th November instructs you to take up negotiations with United States Government about the proposed liquor treaty. Meanwhile, I notice press reports that the President has approved Treasury proposals for extension of the preventive service, on the assumption that the treaty conceding a wider zone of search is certain to be concluded.

You should lose no time in acting on the above instructions if received. If not, you should inform State Department unofficially that they are on the way and suggest propriety of deferring publicity about action to be taken on the strength of the treaty until its conclusion and ratification are more assured.

(No. 474. (R).) 26th November. Your despatch No. 1679* and my telegram No. 472.†

Following is text of note handed to me by Secretary of State to-day.

Begins: I am gratified to observe sympathetic consideration that His Majesty's Government is giving proposals embodied in draft treaty.

It is hardly necessary to say that in these proposals there has been no intention to violate eighteenth amendment of Federal Constitution. On the contrary the purpose is to aid their enforcement.

In the case of Cunard Line Steamship Company Limited et al., versus Mellon, Secretary of Treasury et al. (decided 30th April, 1923) to which you refer (Justice

† Enclosure 4.

Van Devaners' judgment) question of validity of an act of Congress or a treaty excepting from penalty or forfeiture intoxicating liquor carried as cargo or sealed stores not destined for delivery or consumption within territory of United States, but carried under seal while in transit through territorial waters, was not involved and that decision cannot be regarded as determining that question. In that case it was held that Congress acting within its authority had actually imposed penalties upon such carriage, and an injunction restraining officers of Government from proceeding against complaining steamship companies and their ships under act of Congress as thus construed, was denied.

While precise question raised in your note has not been decided there are certain applicable principles which are deemed to be controlling. Eighteenth amendment provides:—

1. After one year from ratification of this article, the manufacture, sale or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, importation thereof into, or exportation thereof from United States and all territory subject to jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.

2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

It is apparent that first section provides no penalties and that these are reserved to appropriate legislation. As Supreme Court of United States has recognized, a constitutional provision "is self-executing only so far as it is susceptible of execution." (Davis versus Burke, 179 U.S., 399, 403). As no penalties or forfeitures are prescribed in eighteenth amendment itself and Congress is empowered to enforce that amendment by appropriate legislation, it is manifest that to the sole discretion of Congress is confided determining of what are appropriate penalties and forfeitures. In judgment of this Government there is no reason to doubt that in exercise of this authority Congress may consider all pertinent circumstances and best means of enforcing constitutional provision, and may thus consider it entirely appropriate not to impose penalties or forfeitures with regard to intoxicating liquor which is not destined for consumption or delivery within United States of America but is simply carried in transit through territorial waters.

The authority which is thus deemed to be possessed by Congress has already been exercised with regard to transit of intoxicating liquors through Panama Canal. There is a special provision in Volstead Act dealing with Canal Zone which excepts "liquor in transit through Panama Canal or on Panama railroads." It is true that validity of this exception has not been subject of precise adjudication but it is believed to have been fully recognized by Supreme Court in decision which you have cited in your note. Supreme Court there said "much has been said at the bar and in briefs about Canal Zone exception, various deductions are sought to be drawn from it respecting applicability of Act elsewhere. Of course the exception shows that Congress for reasons appealing to its judgment has refrained from attaching any penalty or forfeiture to transportation of liquor while 'in transit through Panama Canal or on Panama railroads.' Beyond this it has no bearing here save as it serves to show that where in other provisions no exception is made in respect of merchant ships either domestic or foreign within waters of United States none is intended.

Examining Act as a whole, we think it shows very plainly, first, that it is intended to be operative throughout territorial limits of United States with single exception stated in Canal Zone provision, second, that it is not intended to apply to domestic vessels when outside territorial waters of United States, and third, that it is intended to apply to all merchant vessels whether foreign or domestic when within those waters, save as Panama Canal Zone exception provides otherwise."

It will be observed that exception is not criticized nor is it said to lie beyond power of Congress, but it is stated that exception shows "that Congress for reasons appealing to its judgment has refrained from attaching any penalty or forfeiture" to transportation described.

It is view of this Government that Congress has same authority to except from penalties or forfeitures intoxicating liquor in transit through territorial waters not destined for delivery or consumption within the United States, that it has excepted from penalty or forfeiture intoxicating liquor in transit through the Panama Canal.

Moreover, if Congress made such an exception it is manifest that there would be no penalty or forfeiture attaching to such transit.

It is also view of this Government that as constitution does not deal with penalties or forfeitures and these remain within law-making power, this subject cannot be regarded as having already been withdrawn from treaty-making power. The treaty-making power is deemed to be quite as broad in this respect as legislative power. As was said by Supreme Court of United States in the case of Missouri versus Holland 252 U.S., 416, 433, "acts of Congress are supreme law of the land only when made in pursuance of constitution, while treaties are declared to be so when made under authority of United States. It is open question whether authority of United States means more than the formal acts prescribed to make convention. We do not mean to imply that there are no qualifications to treaty-making power; but they must be ascertained in a different way. It is obvious that there may be matters of exigency for national well-being that an act of Congress could not deal with but that a treaty followed by such an act could, and it is not lightly to be assumed, in matters requiring national action, 'a power which must belong to and somewhere reside in every civilized government' is not to be found." You will not fail to observe that part of proposed treaty above-mentioned relates only to exception from penalties and forfeitures in particular circumstances described in treaty, treaty as a whole is clearly intended to secure better enforcement of eighteenth amendment by enforcing measures to prevent operations which have seriously interfered with that enforcement. The provisions with regard to arrest and search are to be considered in connexion with exception from penalty and forfeiture in case of liquors merely in transit.

I have, therefore, no hesitation in saying that while this Government is clearly of opinion that proposed treaty would have constitutional validity, there would be no attempt on the part of Congress to insist upon the provisions as to arrest and search in opposition to desires of His Majesty's Government to abrogate treaty in case proposed exception from penalty and forfeiture should either by final judicial decision or by act of Congress become inoperative.

Such abrogation would of course not be deemed to impair any rights possessed by this Government irrespective of treaty.

13TH DECEMBER. Secret. My despatch 16th November, Secret, Dominions 425,* proposed Liquor Treaty with United States. His Majesty's representative at Washington has presented draft Treaty to United States Government. United States Government have suggested certain minor modifications, and, in particular, revised draft of Article 3 providing that position of liquors carried on British ships under seal shall be same as now provided in regard to liquors in transit through Panama Canal.

Before draft Treaty presented, clause added providing for its automatic lapsing in event of parties being prevented from carrying out Treaty by difficulties of constitutional nature. United States Government, while preferring that Treaty should be subject to denouncement in such event, are prepared to agree to provision for automatic lapsing in event of either party being prevented by judicial decision or legislative action from giving full effect to provisions of Treaty.

17TH DECEMBER. Secret. My telegram 13th December,* Liquor Treaty with United States. Following is revised text incorporating amendments proposed by United States Government which His Majesty's Government are prepared to accept. Before authorizing His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington to sign treaty His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn whether your Government concur in its terms. Contemplated that Parliament here should be given opportunity of discussing treaty prior to ratification.

Draft Treaty begins:—

1. High contracting parties declare that it is their firm intention to uphold principle that three marine miles extending from coastline outwards and measured from low-water mark constitute proper limit of territorial waters.

2. (1) His Britannic Majesty agrees that he will raise no objection to the boarding of private vessels under the British flag outside the limits of territorial waters by the authorities of the United States in order that enquiries may be addressed to those on board and an examination be made of the ship's papers for the purpose of ascertaining whether the vessel or those on board are endeavouring to import or have imported alcoholic beverages into the United States its territories or possessions in violation of the laws there in force. When such inquiries and examination show reasonable ground for suspicion, search of the vessel may be instituted.

‡ 52647: not printed; it contained a summary of the proceedings of the Imperial Conference. § See page 12 of Cmd. 1987.

(2) If there is reasonable cause for belief that the vessel has committed or is committing or attempting to commit an offence against the laws of the United States prohibiting the importation of alcoholic beverages, vessel may be seized and taken into a port of the United States its territories or possessions for adjudication in accordance with such laws.

(3) The rights conferred by this article shall not be exercised at a greater distance from the coast of the United States its territories or possessions than can be traversed in one hour by the vessel suspected of endeavouring to commit the offence. In cases, however, in which the liquor is intended to be conveyed to the United States its territories or possessions by a vessel other than the one boarded and searched, it shall be the speed of such other vessel and not the speed of the vessel boarded, which shall determine distance from the coast at which the right under this article can be exercised.

3. No penalty or forfeit under laws of United States shall be applicable or attach to alcoholic liquors or to vessels or persons by reason of carriage of such liquors, when such liquors are listed as sea stores or cargo destined for port foreign to United States of America its territories or possessions on board British vessels voyaging to or from ports of United States of America or its territories or possessions or passing through territorial waters thereof, and such carriage shall be as now provided by law with regard to transit of such liquors through Panama Canal provided such liquors shall be kept under seal continuously while vessel on which they are carried remains within said territorial waters and that no part of such liquors shall at any time or place be unladen within United States, its territories or possessions.

4. Any claim by a British vessel for compensation on the ground that it has suffered loss or injury through the improper or unreasonable exercise of the rights conferred by Article 2 or on the ground that it has not been given the benefit of Article 3 shall be referred for the joint consideration of two persons, one of whom shall be nominated by each of the high contracting parties.

Effect shall be given to the recommendations contained in any such joint report. If no joint report can be agreed upon, claim shall be referred to the Claims Commission established under the provisions of the agreement for the Settlement of Outstanding Pecuniary Claims signed Washington 18th August, 1910, but the claim shall not, before submission to the tribunal, require to be included in schedule of claims confirmed in the manner therein provided.

5. Treaty shall be subject to ratification and shall remain in force for one year from the date of the exchange of ratifications.

Three months before the expiration of the said period of one year, either of the high contracting parties may give notice of desire to propose modifications in the terms of the treaty.

If such modifications have not been agreed upon before the expiration of the term of one year mentioned above, treaty shall lapse.

If no notice is given on either side of the desire to propose modifications, treaty shall remain in force for another year, and so on automatically, but subject always in respect of each such period of a year to the right on either side to propose, as provided above, three months before its expiration, modifications in the treaty, and to the provision that if such modifications not agreed upon before the close of the period of one year, treaty shall lapse.

6. In the event that either of high contracting parties shall be prevented either by judicial decision or legislative action from giving full effect to provisions of present treaty the said treaty shall automatically lapse and, on such lapse or whenever this treaty shall cease to be in force, each high contracting party shall enjoy all rights which it would have possessed had this treaty not been concluded.—Ends.

TELEGRAM FROM LORD CURZON (Foreign Office) to MR. CHILTON (Washington).

(No. 369.) Proposed Liquor Treaty with United States.

I quite see that it would hardly be possible for us to ask Mr. Hughes to go further than he does in the note, the text of which you transmitted in your telegram of 26th November,§ but at the same time there is nothing in that note which gives a definite guarantee that a decision in the Supreme Court may not render the Treaty unworkable. I am, therefore, of opinion that we should try to secure the addition of a further clause (No. 6) on the following lines:—

"In the event of either of the High Contracting Parties being prevented by difficulties of a constitutional nature from giving full effect to the provisions of the present Treaty, the said Treaty shall automatically lapse."

I should be glad to receive your views as to whether it is advisable to propose such a clause and, if you think it desirable, I am quite ready that you should discuss it first informally with Mr. Hughes. The object of it, of course, is to render it unnecessary for His Majesty's Government positively to denounce the Treaty or take any action tantamount to denunciation, should the constitutional difficulties referred to arise.

You have full discretion as to the best means of approaching the United States Government on this point, and you may first consult Mr. Hughes or not as it seems best to you. In any case you are authorized to propose to the United States Government the Treaty of which the text accompanied my despatch No. 1679.¶

TELEGRAM FROM MR. CHILTON (Washington) to LORD CURZON (Foreign Office).
(3rd December.)

Liquor Treaty with United States of America.

I decided after careful consideration of Your Lordship's telegram of 1st December that for the following reasons it would be better to insert Clause 6 in the draft Treaty to be submitted to the United States Government:—

(1) If I first discussed it with the Secretary of State and he raised objections to it, it would be more difficult for us to insist on its being put in the Treaty.

(2) If it were once inserted in the draft, it would render it less easy for Mr. Hughes to ask for it to be cut out.

I therefore inserted it in the draft which I handed to Mr. Hughes to-day and explained the reasons why His Majesty's Government desired its inclusion. He replied by saying he would prefer to examine the draft carefully before commenting upon it.

[60283]

Enclosure 3 in No. 434.

TELEGRAM FROM MR. CHILTON (Washington) to FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Received 9.0 a.m., 8th December, 1923.)

7TH DECEMBER. (No. 490. (R.)) My telegram No. 483.

Secretary of State has carefully considered draft proposed by His Majesty's Government and has handed me an aide-memoire embodying his views and certain proposed alterations.

While United States Government would have preferred that distance for the purpose of search and seizure be more definitely delimited, it has been concluded, in view of evident desire of His Majesty's Government to attain object in view, and of importance of an early disposition of the matter, not to raise objections to provisions contained in articles 2, 4 and 5 of draft except to add words "its territories or possessions" after words "United States" in article 2.

Article 1.—In order to avoid a detailed statement with regard to ports, bays, harbours, etc., Mr. Hughes desires that after words "three marine miles" there should be inserted words "extending from coast-line outwards and measured," etc.

Article 3.—In Secretary of State's communication of 26th November* (my telegram No. 474) question of constitutional validity of proposed treaty was considered and it was pointed out that law-making power of Congress and treaty-making power were deemed to extend, under eighteenth amendment of Federal Constitution, to determination of penalties or forfeits and such exceptions thereto as might be deemed to be appropriate in view of all pertinent circumstances and after consideration of best means of enforcing constitutional provision. Mr. Hughes thinks it is important, however, that provision of treaty on this point should clearly reflect this view and should relate to an exception from penalties and forfeits. (He laid considerable stress on this.) In order to leave no room for question as to intent he considers it advisable to refer to existing exception in the case of Panama Canal. For these reasons he proposes that article 3 shall be amended to read as follows:—

"3. No penalty or forfeit under laws of United States shall be applicable or attach to alcoholic liquors or to vessels or persons by reason of carriage of such liquors, when such liquors are listed as sea stores or cargo destined for a port foreign to United States of America its territories or possessions on board British vessels voyaging to or from ports of United States of America or its territories or possessions or passing through territorial waters thereof, and such transit through such waters shall be as now provided by law with regard to transit of such liquors through Panama Canal provided such liquors shall be kept under seal continuously while vessel on which they are carried remains within said territorial waters and that no part of such liquors shall at any time or place be unladen within United States, its territories or possessions."

While United States Government would have preferred that treaty should be subject to denouncement in the event under consideration they understand that

* Enclosure 6 in No. 430.

His Majesty's Government strongly desire not to have a provision for denouncement but instead to have a provision for automatic lapsing of treaty in the event described. United States Government will not oppose this view, but they consider that there should be a modification of text of proposed article in following particulars. Expression "difficulties of a constitutional nature" is in their opinion too indefinite. Such difficulties if they arose would be presented by a judicial decision upon the question and Secretary of State desires that reference should be not to "constitutional difficulties" but to "judicial decision" which would prevent giving full effect to provisions of treaty. Moreover, there is also question of legislation subsequently enacted by Congress and while Mr. Hughes thinks this contingency to be remote he considers it should be covered by article. He also thinks it desirable to have a specific statement as to full retention of rights on termination of treaty. For these reasons Secretary of State suggests that article 6 should read as follows:—

"6. In the event that either of high contracting parties shall be prevented either by judicial decision or legislative action from giving full effect to provisions of present treaty the said treaty shall automatically lapse and, on such lapse or whenever this treaty shall cease to be in force, each high contracting party shall enjoy all rights which it would have possessed had this treaty not been concluded."

Secretary of State said he sincerely hoped that His Majesty's Government would agree to these modifications and that treaty might be concluded at early date. Copy of aide-memoire and draft as amended by Mr. Hughes by bag to-night.

My LORD, British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 10th November, 1923.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 454 of the 10th instant,* I have the honour to inform you that President Coolidge authorized a statement yesterday to the effect that there would be no change in relation to the prohibition against American ships carrying liquor within or outside the three-mile limit, regardless of any treaty that might be made with Great Britain or other countries.

It was also stated that the President did not intend to change the Harding order, which barred the carrying of liquor on vessels flying the American flag outside the three-mile limit. As to the carrying of liquor within the three-mile limit, that was prohibited under the decision of the Supreme Court.

16TH JANUARY. Private and Personal. With reference to my telegram of to-day's date* on the subject of Pacific Halibut Fishery, I understand that object of request for full powers for Mr. Lapointe is that the Ambassador's signature may be dispensed with in order that the Convention may be a direct treaty concluded between Canada and the United States. I do not know if there is any precedent for this. 2. Subject to the concurrence of the Duke of Devonshire, the Secretary of State would propose to reply to Sir Auckland Geddes that the difficulty referred to in the first [?fourth] paragraph of his telegram should be met by omitting any title whatsoever from the Convention. I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 24th January,* regarding the proposed Convention with the United States for the regulation of the Pacific Halibut Fishery, and to transmit to you, to be laid before the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, a copy of a telegram† on the subject from the Governor-General of Canada. The Secretary of State would be glad if steps could be taken for the issue of the necessary full power to Mr. Lapointe, as desired by the Government of Canada.

2. As regards the title of the Convention, I am to invite reference to the recent Commercial Convention between Canada and France, the title of which is "Convention of Commerce between Canada and France": vide Foreign Office letter of the 21st December, 1922,‡ and connected correspondence. I am also to invite reference to [Cmd. 1514] (Treaty Series No. 16, of 1921), which is headed "Trade Agreement between France and Canada." In view of these precedents, the Secretary of State considers that it would be difficult to question the heading proposed by the Government of Canada.

3. The Duke of Devonshire has no observations to offer on the proposed Convention, as amended by the Government of Canada, and it is presumed from the third paragraph of your letter that the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs also has no observations to make.

SIR, Foreign Office, 10th February, 1923.
WITH reference to your letters of the 30th ultimo§ and of the 7th instant|| I am directed by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to state that His Lordship concurs in the amendments numbered 2, 3 and 4 to the Halibut Fishery Convention, proposed in the minute of the Canadian Privy Council dated the 11th ultimo.¶ As regards amendment numbered 1, however, neither the present wording of the title, nor of the preamble of the Convention, nor that proposed by the Canadian Government is correct. The Convention is not between Canada, or any other part of the Empire, and the United States, but between the King and the United States of America. This should be expressed in the preamble in the usual form "The United States of America, and His Majesty The King of the United Kingdom, . . . etc."

2. A title is indeed superfluous, seeing that the object of the Convention is clearly set out in the preamble, and, as it in no way forms an integral part of the Convention, it may be omitted altogether. It is, however, noted that erroneous titles were given to the agreements with France mentioned in your letter of 30th January, and the present Convention when published in the treaty series could be called "Convention with the United States for the Regulation of the Halibut Fishery on the Pacific coasts of Canada and the United States."

3. As regards signature, His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, who conducted the final negotiations with the United States Government, will be instructed to sign first in accordance with the usual practice (see, e.g., the Sockeye Salmon Fishery Treaty of 1919, and the Canadian-French and Canadian-Italian commercial agreements of 1922). Mr. Lapointe should be associated with His Excellency as signatory on behalf of the Dominion of Canada.

Method of signature of Halibut Fishery Convention.

As the preamble to the Convention unequivocally states the intention thereof, no title should be shown upon the Convention when same is signed.

Foreign Office will subsequently allocate a title so that the Convention can readily be recognized in the treaty series.

In accordance with usage, you, in your capacity of Representative of His Majesty, should append your signature first, because the parties to this Convention are the United States of America and His Majesty, and not the United States of America and the Government of Canada or any other Government bearing allegiance to His Majesty. 20TH FEBRUARY. Private and Personal. Your telegram, Private and Personal, of 16th February,† regarding the Pacific Halibut Treaty. My Prime Minister is most anxious that the Treaty should be signed by Mr. Lapointe alone. He has told me privately that great importance is attached by him to this because, in a purely Canadian matter in connexion with the United States, he would like to be able to say that full powers had been given by His Majesty the King to a Canadian Minister to sign on behalf of Canada. He intimated also that by this his position would be made much easier as regards the proposal to appoint a Canadian Plenipotentiary at Washington, though he did not say that the matter would be dropped; but it is evidently in his mind that need for this appointment would disappear if Ministers could go to Washington and negotiate and sign any necessary Conventions or Treaties that were purely Canadian.

I am informing His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, that my Prime Minister would like the Treaty to be signed by Mr. Lapointe alone.—BYNG.

Canada and the United States" is intended, as stated in the letter from this Department of 10th February,* to be used only in connexion with the reproduction of the Convention (e.g., in the Treaty series in Great Britain), and not for insertion in the original copy to be signed by His Majesty's Representatives and by the Representatives of the United States, as it is not in accordance with the usual practice that signature copies of treaties should have any title at all.

2. I am to add that the Secretary of State earnestly hopes that the Canadian Government will not avail themselves of the opportunity, offered by the private and personal telegram addressed by the Duke of Devonshire to Lord Byng on the 16th instant,† to raise any objection to the proposal to associate His Majesty's Ambassador with the Canadian Minister in the signature of the Convention. The Secretary of State considers it essential that, in this respect also, the procedure laid down in my letter of 10th February should be strictly adhered to.

28TH FEBRUARY. Secret. Following is sent at the request of my Prime Minister:—

Begins.—Halibut Treaty. Full powers for Mr. Lapointe have been received. He is now on his way to Washington.

My Ministers consider that, as respects Canada, it would be sufficient if the Treaty is signed by Mr. Lapointe alone. In asking for full powers for Mr. Lapointe they proceeded on this assumption. Having so informed His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, it was with some surprise that we received information from him to the effect that His Majesty's Government had instructed him to sign the Treaty in association with Mr. Lapointe. It has evidently been assumed by His Majesty's Government that such was the wish of the Canadian Government. My Ministers' view, however, is that, as the Treaty is one of concern solely for Canada and the United States and does not affect in any particular any Imperial interests, signature of Canadian Minister should be sufficient, and they respectfully request that instructions be sent to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington accordingly.

The Government of the United States have expressed a desire that the Treaty should be signed on the afternoon of Thursday, 1st March, in order that ratification may be obtained before the Senate rises on 4th March, and it is therefore most important that instructions should be cabled to Washington with least possible delay. Ambassador has been informed of the above request.

Please inform me as soon as possible after this message is received of action His Majesty's Government propose to take.—Ends.

No. 86. Private and Confidential. The Prime Minister of Canada is most anxious that the recently negotiated Pacific Halibut Fishery Treaty should be signed by Lapointe alone under the King's full powers. He attached great importance to a treaty of this kind governing an essentially Canadian matter being signed by a Canadian Minister figuring as the King's Representative. At the same time he hints that, if this concession to Canadian sentiment were made, his hands would be strengthened in resisting or at least combating the proposal to appoint at Washington a permanent separate Canadian plenipotentiary. Without in any way abandoning the general principle that British treaties with the United States must be signed by plenipotentiary representing the King as Sovereign of the whole British Empire, and without derogating from your supreme authority as general and permanent King's plenipotentiary at Washington, we are disposed in this particular instance to make the concession desired if this will assist in overcoming the grave difficulties involved in the proposal for separate Canadian representation at Washington which you agree with us in desiring to escape. In the circumstances, do you agree to letting Lapointe sign alone?

The Prime Minister: As regards the first part of the question, it does not appear necessary to lay any correspondence. As regards the second part, the Plenipotentiary who signs a Treaty does so on behalf of the King by whom his full powers are issued, and the Canadian Minister acted in that capacity on the present occasion.

Note.—The Treaty was submitted for approval to the United States Senate, which on the 4th March gave its consent to ratification subject to the understanding, which was made a part of its resolution of ratification, that none of the nationals and inhabitants and vessels and boats of any other part of Great Britain should engage in halibut fishery contrary to any of the provisions of the Treaty. The United States Secretary of State explained to His Majesty's Ambassador that the expression "Great Britain" was intended to mean "the British Empire." WITH reference to the letter from this Department of 14th May last,* I am directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to transmit to you herewith copies of two telegrams from His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington regarding proposed legislation in the Canadian Parliament to give effect to the Pacific Halibut Fishery Convention signed at Washington on 2nd March last.

2. As the Secretary of State for the Colonies will observe, the Canadian Government have requested Mr. Chilton to express to the United States Government the hope that they will re-submit the Convention to the Senate with a view to securing its ratification without the rider added by the Senate, and Mr. Chilton feels some doubt as to the advisability of acting on this request (1) because the constitutional points involved are still unsettled; (2) because it might lead to an undesirable debate in the United States Senate.

3. As Congress will not meet again until next December, the various questions arising out of the conclusion of this Convention will have been considered by the Imperial Conference before a debate in Congress can take place, and the Secretary of State proposes, therefore, subject to the Duke of Devonshire's concurrence, to instruct Mr. Chilton to act as desired by the Canadian Government.

It is understood that Congress does not meet until November, but Government will be grateful if Your Excellency will inform United States Government in the sense of foregoing in order that desired object may be attained with all convenient speed.

You will understand that in the event of Senate refusing to reconsider their rider to Treaty, legislation and regulations which are to be passed by Canadian Parliament will not be put into effect.

Halibut Treaty.

THE words "Great Britain" do not appear in the Convention as signed except in the preamble where they occur as part of His Majesty the King's title. On the other hand, they are to be found in the letters (see my despatch of 18th April) in which the Convention was transmitted to the Senate.

I am in doubt as to whether you concur in the view held by the Government of Canada, namely, that the convention is only between Canada and the United States.

If you concur in that view, it might still be possible for us to ask for the cancellation of the Senate resolution as the Government of Canada suggest, on the ground that it arose from a misunderstanding, and that in fact the Treaty only applies to Canada and the United States.

There is, however, always a possibility that it might meet with a refusal, and furthermore an undesirable debate might thus be occasioned in the Senate (see my despatch of 28th March, paragraphs 3 and 4). I am not myself very hopeful as to the prospect of obtaining the desired modification, but, if you think it wise, I will ask Mr. Hughes personally, putting the idea as a possibility which I myself have thought of, whether he thinks it practicable to obtain cancellation and whether his Government would be prepared to accede to a request for re-submission to the Senate.

I should be grateful for immediate and definite instructions, since I ought either to take the desired action or at least send a reply to the Governor-General before the end of the session of the Canadian Parliament, which is, I understand, fixed for 30th June or thereabouts.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 29th June,* regarding the Pacific Halibut Fishery Convention of the 2nd March, and to request you to inform the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston that he concurs in the proposal that His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington should be instructed to act in the manner desired by the Canadian Government.

* No. 459.

2. The request of the Canadian Government would appear to be justified by the terms of the Report of the Canadian-American Fisheries Conference of 1918, which formed the starting point of the negotiations leading up to the Convention. It will be observed that on page 25 of the Report, of which a copy was enclosed in the letter from this Department of the 27th May, 1919,* it was stated that the Pacific halibut fishery "has not been participated in by any other countries than the United States and Canada, and, in view of the great distance of the Asiatic coasts, there seems no reason to anticipate that the fishery will be prosecuted from the ports of that coast, so that an arrangement between the United States and Canada is all that is now needed."

3. It is not clear precisely how far the rider of the United States Senate is intended to extend. It purports merely to prohibit from engaging in the halibut fishery contrary to the Treaty "the nationals and inhabitants and vessels and boats of any other part of Great Britain" and does not refer to the seizure of such inhabitants or vessels on the high seas. From the terms of the Report of the 1918 Fisheries Conference quoted above, it would appear possible, in fact, to deny participation in the fishery merely by prohibiting the use of Canadian and United States ports for the purpose.

MY LORD DUKE,

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith, for Your Grace's information, a copy of a letter from the Department of the Secretary of State for External Affairs on the subject of the Halibut Treaty. I have to-day telegraphed† to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington in the sense indicated in this letter.

Your Grace will understand that, while this Treaty is being submitted for approval to the Canadian Parliament, and while legislation is to be enacted and regulations formulated thereunder, such legislation is not to take effect unless, or until, the United States Senate approves of the Treaty as it was signed, and withdraws the rider they attached to it.

I have, &c.,

FROM DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

SIR,

Ottawa, 26th June, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to represent that the Halibut Treaty, signed on behalf of Canada by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and on behalf of the United States Government by the Secretary of State, on the 2nd of March, 1923, is about to be submitted to the Parliament of Canada for approval. It is also proposed to ask Parliament to enact the legislation contemplated by Article IV of the Treaty and also providing that the ports and territorial waters of Canada shall be closed to the fishermen, vessels and boats of all nations for the purpose of fishing for halibut during the closed season prescribed by the Treaty, in the waters designed to be protected.

In view of the importance both to Canada and to the United States of the provisions of this Treaty becoming effective at the earliest possible date, it is hoped that the United States Government will, as soon after the opening of the next session of Congress as possible, re-submit the Treaty to the Senate with a view to securing approval of the same as it has been signed.

* 30523/19: not printed; it enclosed copies of the Report referred to. † See enclosure 1 in No. 459.

I am to request that His Excellency the Governor-General may be humbly moved so to inform the United States Government, by telegraph, in the sense of the foregoing, and to ask they be good enough to cause the necessary steps to be taken with that object in view with all convenient speed.

[Answered by No. 464.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 31st July, 1923.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th July|| relative to the rider attached by the United States Senate to its assent to the ratification of the Pacific Halibut Fishery Treaty, and to transmit to you, to be laid before the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston, copies of the debates¶ on the Treaty in the Canadian Parliament, in the course of which this rider was discussed. A copy of the Bill passed on the subject of the Treaty is also enclosed.

2. It will be observed that in the course of the debate in the House of Commons Mr. Mackenzie King stated, with reference to the rider of the United States Senate, "We feel satisfied that under these circumstances the reservation will be withdrawn and the Treaty assented to and ratified as it stood at the time it was signed" (page 4610), and again "We have submitted the Treaty for approval because we have reasonable expectation that the Senate of the United States will withdraw that reservation at the next session of Congress" (page 4615).

3. In view of these definite statements, His Grace feels that a very embarrassing position would be created if His Majesty's Government were to decline to authorize His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington to act in accordance with the request of the Canadian Government until after the Imperial Conference. The question proposed by His Majesty's Government for discussion at the Conference is

* No. 460. † No. 459. ‡ See enclosure 1 in No. 459. § Enclosure 2 in No. 459. || No. 462.

¶ Not reprinted (see Canadian House of Commons Debates, Vol. LVIII, No. 95 of 27th June, and Senate Debates, Vol. LVIII, No. 61 of 28th June).  For the Act as passed, see Chapter 61. of 1923.

"The position of the Dominions and India in relation to the signature of Treaties." It is gathered from your letter that Lord Curzon expects this discussion to develop into a discussion of the general question of the treaty-making power of the Dominions. It may, however, be observed that this general question does not arise in connexion with the Pacific Halibut Fishery Treaty, since it was negotiated through His Majesty's Embassy at Washington with the full knowledge and approval of His Majesty's Government, and was signed by a plenipotentiary duly appointed by the King. The action desired by the Canadian Government is merely designed to restore the Treaty to the form in which it was approved by His Majesty's Government. Further, there appears to be definite advantage in taking the action desired by the Canadian Government, in order to determine whether or not the Treaty will have to be considered on the basis that the rider is to stand.

4. In the circumstances the Secretary of State hopes that Lord Curzon will, on reconsideration, be prepared to authorize Mr. Chilton to act in the manner desired by the Canadian Government.

2. Copies of the bill and of the proceedings in the Canadian Parliament had already been received from His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington prior to the date of the letter from this Department of the 11th ultimo.† Consequently, there appear to be no new facts calling for any reconsideration of the view expressed in that letter.

3. As regards paragraph 3 of your letter,* it is certainly the understanding of the Secretary of State that the treaty-making power of the Dominions will be discussed and defined at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, and his object in suggesting such a discussion was, precisely, to avoid the recurrence of incidents such as those which attended the signature of the Halibut Treaty.

It would appear that, in view of the last sentence of the telegram from the Governor-General of Canada, repeated in my telegram No. 290,* of 27th June, the words quoted in my telegram of even date imply that the Canadian Government are again insisting that the Senate resolution must be modified. I should be glad if I might receive instructions as soon as possible as to what action I should take. Not having received any reply to my telegram of 27th June, I have not raised the matter with the United States Government, as I am not aware of the attitude of His Majesty's Government.

TELEGRAM FROM LORD CURZON to MR. CHILTON.

Foreign Office, 25th August, 1923.

Halibut Treaty.

It was assumed that Congress would not meet again until December and that, therefore, no modification of the Senate's ratification could be secured before the middle of November.

Meanwhile, the Imperial Conference will consider the question of the treaty-making power of the Dominions, and we do not wish any action which may be taken in regard to the Halibut Treaty to prejudice the decision of the Conference.

This is the chief reason why you were not instructed to make any representations to the United States Government in the terms desired by the Canadian Government.

An inquiry in the sense of the last paragraph of your telegram of 21st August, may, however, be made.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 3rd September, 1923.

I AM directed by the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to refer to my letter of 15th August,† and to transmit herewith copies in paraphrase of telegraphic correspondence‡ with His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington, concerning the Pacific Halibut Fisheries Treaty. A draft of the proposed reply§ to Mr. Chilton's telegram 372 is enclosed for the concurrence of the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

2. In view of the last paragraph of Mr. Chilton's telegram No. 372, I am to suggest that the Secretary of State for the Colonies should cause the Canadian Government to be sent urgently such explanation as His Grace may deem convenient at this stage of the reasons for which Mr. Chilton has not been instructed to comply with their request to make representations to the United States Government, with a view to the cancellation of the United States Senate's rider to the Treaty.

Halibut Treaty.

I LEARN that Mr. Hughes will visit Montreal for the meeting of the Canadian Bar Association on the 4th September, and I think it is quite likely that he may be approached by the Canadian authorities on the subject of the Treaty. The matter has, therefore, become one of urgency.

It appears that unless the Senate resolution is cancelled it is impossible for the Canadian Government to execute the Treaty, and, therefore, it would be misleading only to ask the United States Government whether they can put the Treaty into force this year, unless, at the same time, I asked that the Senate resolution may be reconsidered and cancelled. Moreover, I assume that I cannot make such a request without giving reasons for so doing, namely, that, since the Treaty applies only to Canada and the United States, it is obvious that the Senate resolution was passed under a misapprehension.

I should be grateful if I might receive instructions by telegraph, because I hesitate to take action in the sense suggested in the preceding paragraph without Your Lordship's sanction in view of the penultimate paragraph of your telegram of 25th August, 1923.*

Note.—The matter was discussed verbally with the Foreign Office, and the terms of a telegram to be sent to His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires were agreed upon. (See enclosure in No. 467). No reply was therefore sent to the Foreign Office letters of the 15th August and the 3rd September.

Halibut Treaty.

It appears unlikely that it will be possible to introduce the Close Season this year seeing that the Canadian Government state that, unless the Treaty is re-submitted to the United States Senate for approval, as it was signed, and unless it is ratified in this way before the middle of November, it will be impossible to make the Close Season effective this year, and I gather that (a) the rider cannot be withdrawn unless the Senate gives its explicit consent, and (b) that that body does not meet until December.

2. It would, therefore, appear to be undesirable to make representations to the United States Government in the exact sense which the Canadian Government wished, but you should ask whether there is any likelihood that the United States Senate would consent to the withdrawal of the rider, adding that the Canadian Government would be glad to know whether the United States Government would be prepared to make a simultaneous public announcement, as suggested in your telegram of 21st August,‡ if it is impossible to put the Treaty into effect this year. SIR, British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 6th September, 1923.
WITH reference to my Note No. 618 of 27th July last, relative to the Northern Pacific Halibut Fishery Convention, I have the honour to inform you that, in view of the terms of the Resolution passed by the Senate at the time of the ratification of this Convention, the Government of Canada find it difficult to put into force the Act recently passed by the Canadian Parliament in execution of the Convention.

In these circumstances, and under instructions from my Government, I have the honour to ask you to be so good as to inform me whether there is any prospect of the United States Senate, when it reassembles in December, being willing to withdraw the Resolution attached to the ratification, and to ratify the Convention in the form in which it was signed.

I understand from the Dominion Government that, unless such ratification could be obtained before the middle of November, it would be impossible for the Close Season provided for by the Convention to become effective this year. As, however, the Senate will not meet until December, it seems clear that it will not be possible to put the Treaty into effect this year. In these circumstances, I have further the honour to inquire whether the United States Government would agree to a simultaneous public announcement by the United States Government and the Government of Canada, on a date to be agreed upon between them, that the Close Season shall not be effective during the 1923-1924 season.

I should be most grateful to receive an expression of the views of the United States Government on these two points at your early convenience for communication to the Dominion Government.

Pacific Halibut Fishery Treaty.

I HAVE received a despatch from the Government of Canada in which they state that it is extremely unlikely that the Close Season can be brought into being this year, since the Senate do not assemble until December.

In the circumstances, and having especial regard to the hardship arising from the uncertainty of the position, they express their readiness pending ratification of the Convention to prohibit the landing of Pacific-caught halibut in Canadian ports for a period of three months dating from the 16th November, if the United States Government will agree to issue a similar prohibition.

The despatch requests that I should so inform this Government and ask whether they would be willing and able to take the necessary steps.

In the event of a negative reply, the Canadian Government inquire whether they will consent to an announcement to the effect that the Close Season will not become effective this year being made in both countries on the first proximo.

I should be glad to be informed urgently whether I am authorized to make a communication in the sense desired.

SIR, British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 28th September, 1923.
WITH reference to my Note No. 764 of 6th September,† relative to the Northern Pacific Halibut Fishery Convention, I have the honour, at the request of His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada, to draw your attention to the difficulties arising out of the present uncertainty whether the Close Season provided for by the Convention will, or will not, be effective this year.

The Governor-General of Canada points out that preparations for continuing fishery throughout the winter have to be made a considerable time beforehand. It will thus be appreciated that, if there is to be a Close Season this year—which would presumably begin on 16th November, the date specified in the Convention—it is important that fishermen and others have reasonable warning before the closing actually takes place, so that they may avoid incurring much expense in needless preparatory arrangements for winter fishing.

On the other hand, if there is to be no Close Season in the coming winter, fishermen and buyers are equally embarrassed as, owing to the uncertainty that now exists, they cannot make their usual contracts for obtaining and delivering supplies of halibut. Further, I understand that all those directly connected with the industry both in the United States and in Canada are agreed not only as to the great need for the protection prescribed in the Convention, but as to the desirability of such protection becoming effective this year.

But, as far as I am aware, the United States Senate will not meet until sometime in December, so that, even if the Senate were then to withdraw their previous resolution and to ratify the Convention in the form in which it was signed, it would appear impossible to put the Convention into effect this year. If this is so, the Dominion Government feel strongly that some immediate action is necessary in order that some measure of protection may be afforded during the coming winter. The Governor-General has, therefore, informed me that if the Government of the United States will be prepared immediately to take such action as may be within their power to prohibit the landing in United States ports of halibut taken in the Pacific during the three months beginning 16th November next, pending ratification of the Treaty by the United States Senate, the Government of Canada will likewise be prepared, on their part, to prohibit the landing in Canada of halibut caught in the Pacific during the said three months.

In these circumstances, I have the honour to ask you to be so good as to inform me, at the earliest possible moment, whether the United States Government are in a position to take the action suggested by the Dominion Government and, if so, whether they would be good enough to do so with the least possible delay in order to avoid further embarrassment to the Pacific halibut fishing industry.

On the other hand, should the United States Government find it impossible to take such action as a measure of temporary relief, and in the event of there being no likelihood of the Convention being re-submitted to the Senate in time to make it effective this year, the Governor-General of Canada requests me to inquire whether the United States Government would agree to an intimation being sent out to the Pacific halibut fishing industry from Ottawa and Washington simultaneously on 1st October next to the effect that there will be no Close Season this year.

SIR, Department of State, Washington, 4th October, 1923.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Notes No. 764 of 6th September,‡ and No. 822 of 28th September, 1923,§ with reference to the Convention concluded between the United States and Great Britain on 2nd March, 1923, for the protection of the halibut fishery of the Northern Pacific Ocean.

With reference to the situation as presented in your Notes, I have the honour to advise you for the confidential information of the Canadian Government that the President has expressed his readiness to re-submit the Convention to the Senate with a view to obtaining the advice and consent of the Senate to the ratification of the Convention as signed. Since it appears to be improbable that the Senate will convene before the first week in December, there does not seem to be any probability of obtaining reconsideration of the Convention by the Senate in time to bring its provisions for the establishment of a Close Season into operation during the winter of 1923-1924.

With reference to the proposal of the Government of Canada to afford temporary protection to the Pacific halibut fishery by prohibiting the landing of halibut taken during the three months beginning 16th November, 1923, on condition that the United States is prepared to take similar action, I have the honour to inform you that the Executive is without authority to make and enforce regulations of the character necessary to accomplish the plan suggested by the Government of Canada.

In view of the foregoing, I have the honour to inform you that the Government of the United States is prepared to join the Government of Canada in a public announcement to be made simultaneously from Washington and Ottawa to the effect that the Close Season provided by the Convention will not be effective during the season 1923-1924.

I should be pleased to receive a draft of the statement which the Canadian Government proposes to make public. It is suggested that the announcement might be made on 15th October, 1923, if that date be agreeable to the Government of Canada.

WITH reference to my Note No. 869 of the 8th instant, regarding the Halibut Fishery Convention between the United States and Great Britain, I have the honour to state that I have now received a telegraphic communication from His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada stating that the Dominion Government will be glad to issue on the 15th instant, simultaneously with the United States Government, a statement on the lines indicated in the Note which you were so good as to address to me on the 4th instant.

The Canadian Government propose the following as the draft of this statement:—

"Northern Pacific Halibut Convention.

As the time when the Closed Season provided for by the above-named Convention should commence is now quite near, the question of whether or not such a season could be made effective this year has formed the subject of a series of Notes which has recently passed between the Government of the Dominion of Canada and the United States Government. As a result of this exchange of Notes, and in order to avoid any embarrassment to the halibut fishing industry by reason of the continued uncertainty as to the extent to which its business would be affected this year by the Convention, it has been decided to intimate to those engaged in the industry, both in Canada and in the United States, that there will be no closed time for halibut during the winter season of 1923-1924."

I have the honour to request that you will be so good as to inform me at your earliest convenience whether the above draft is acceptable to the United States Government.

I would suggest that the reference to the Notes which have been exchanged in regard to the establishment of the Close Season during the year 1923-1924 be omitted from the public statement which it is proposed to make, and that the statement be modified to read as follows:—

"Northern Pacific Halibut Convention.

No. 1.

CANADA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 1st January, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 8.]

(Secret.)

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Ottawa, 19th December, 1922.

WITH reference to Mr. Churchill's Secret despatch of the 18th August, 1921,* I have the honour to transmit, herewith, copies of an Approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada, relative to the proposed amendment of the British North America Act respecting extra-territorial legislation.

I have, &c.,

BYNG OF VIMY.

Enclosure in No. 1.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 11TH DECEMBER, 1922.

(P. C. 2494.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 16th November, 1922, from the Minister of Justice, representing that he has had under consideration the despatch (Secret) of the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies of 18th August, 1921, with regard to the proposed amendment to the British North America Act, 1867, respecting extra-territorial legislation. Mr. Churchill states that he has been in communication with the Law Officers of the Crown with a view to the advisability of submitting an alternative form of enactment, and that after careful consideration they propose the substitution of the following, viz. :—

"An enactment of the Parliament of Canada may operate extra-territorially, provided that, and in so far as such extra-territorial operation is ancillary to, and necessary for, its enforcement as a law for the peace, order, and good government of Canada."

The Minister, therefore, while expressing his preference for the form of enactment in the Order-in-Council of 5th February, 1920, is expressed as follows :—

"An enactment of the Parliament of Canada otherwise intra vires, shall operate, and be deemed to have operated, extra-territorially according to its intention in the like manner and to the same extent as if enacted by the Parliament of the United Kingdom."

The Minister, upon careful consideration, finds himself unable to realize the force of the objection to the last quoted draft which was entertained by the Law Officers of the Crown, and, moreover, he considers the alternative form submitted by Mr. Churchill's despatch unacceptable, principally because the validity of the legislation under a power so expressed may be said to depend upon whether the judicial tribunals would consider the legislation necessary; but, adopting the outline of the draft submitted by the Law Officers of the Crown, it would appear to answer the purpose if modified to read as follows :—

* No. 47 in Dominions No. 66.

"An enactment of the Parliament of Canada if expressed to operate extra-territorially shall have, and be deemed to have had, that operation if and in so far as it is a law for or ancillary to the peace, order and good government of Canada."

The Minister observes that the amendment originally proposed, and as set out ment as originally framed, submits by way of compromise, and in order to avoid further discussion, that the draft last herein quoted may be adopted as giving sufficient legislative expression to the extra-territorial authority of the Dominion.

The Committee concur in the foregoing, and submit the same for Your Excellency's approval.

Clerk of the Privy Council

GENTLEMEN,

Downing Street, 26th January, 1923.

WITH reference to your predecessor's Report of the 5th August, 1921,* regarding the proposed amendment of the British North America Act, respecting extra-territorial legislation, I am directed by the Duke of Devonshire to transmit to you a copy of a despatch† on the subject from the Governor-General of Canada.

The Duke of Devonshire would be obliged if you would advise him whether, in your opinion, the modifications suggested by the Canadian Government in the formula proposed in your predecessor's Report are such as to render the formula open to the objection that it goes beyond the expressed wishes and intentions of the Canadian Government, and, if so, in what respects.

COLONIAL OFFICE TO LAW OFFICERS, AND LAW OFFICERS' REPORT.

GENTLEMEN,

Downing Street, 29th June, 1923.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to request you to take into your consideration the position resulting from Article 73 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State, which is set out in the Schedule to the Irish Free State Constitution Act, 1922 (Session 2), with regard to the extra-territorial effect of existing Imperial legislation which is thereby continued in force, and in particular with regard to the Steam Trawling (Ireland) Act, 1889, and the Fisheries (Ireland) Act, 1901.

2. Under the Steam Trawling (Ireland) Act, 1889, by-laws might be made, and have in fact been made by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction for Ireland prohibiting steam trawling within areas specified in such by-laws outside the three mile limit, and the landing in Ireland of any fish caught in contravention of any such by-laws was made an offence; and under the Fisheries (Ireland) Act, 1901, penalties were imposed for the contravention of any such by-laws, irrespective of whether the fish was landed in Ireland, and summonses in respect of offences against the by-laws might be served anywhere within the United Kingdom.

3. These Acts and the by-laws made thereunder were in force in the Irish Free State at the date of the coming into operation of the Constitution and, therefore, in accordance with Article 73 of the Constitution, until they have been repealed or amended by the Free State Parliament, they remain of full force and effect in that State to the extent to which they are not inconsistent with the Constitution.

4. Section 2 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) Act, 1922, which is set forth in the Schedule to the Irish Free State Constitution Act, 1922 (Session 2), provides that the Constitution shall be construed with reference to the Articles of Agreement for a Treaty between Great Britain and Ireland and that, if any provision of the Constitution, or of any law made thereunder, is in any respect repugnant to any of the provisions of the Treaty, it shall, to the extent only of such repugnancy, be absolutely void and inoperative.

5. The Articles of Agreement referred to provide that Ireland shall have the same constitutional status as the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand and the Union of South Africa, and that the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government and otherwise shall be that of the Dominion of Canada.

6. I am to enclose a memorandum which has been prepared in this Department as to various points which arise in the present connexion, and to ask for the favour of your report at your early convenience on the following questions:—

(I) Whether the Act of 1889 together with the by-laws made thereunder before December, 1922, and the Act of 1901, are continued in force in the Irish Free State under Article 73 of the Constitution with the same extra-territorial effect as before the establishment of the Irish Free State.

(II) If the answer to the preceding question is in the affirmative

(a) Whether the Ministry of Agriculture of the Irish Free State (to which Department the functions of the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instructions have been transferred), has power under the Act of 1889 to make further by-laws with extra-territorial effect.

(b) Whether the Irish Free State Parliament can either amend the Acts of 1889 and 1901, or pass any new legislation in pari materia, in either case with extra-territorial effect.

(III) If the answer to question number (1) is in the negative, what is the present position with regard to the Acts and by-laws in question.

(IV) Generally as to the power (if any) of the Irish Free State Parliament under the Articles of Agreement and the Constitution to legislate with extra-territorial effect.

7. In this connexion, I am to refer to your Report of 11th April,* regarding the proposed amendment of the British North America Act, respecting extra-territorial legislation, and to inquire what bearing in your opinion the proposed concession to Canada would, in view of the terms of the Articles of Agreement, have upon the powers of the Parliament of the Irish Free State.

Enclosure in No. 4.

THE STEAM TRAWLING (IRELAND) ACT, 1889, AND THE FISHERIES (IRELAND) ACT, 1901.

AN important general question is raised in connexion with these Acts as to the position with regard to existing Imperial legislation having extra-territorial effect which is continued in force in the Irish Free State by Article 73 of the Irish Free State Constitution.

It seems difficult to contend that the Irish Free State Courts would not have jurisdiction to administer that existing legislation (including by-laws already made thereunder) with the same extra-territorial effect as before the establishment of the Irish Free State.

But two other questions then arise.

(a) Can the Irish Free State executive authority which has replaced or will replace the "Inspectors of Irish Fisheries" continue to make by-laws with extra-territorial effect under the first of the two Fishery Acts in question?

(b) Can the Irish Free State Parliament either amend these Acts or pass any new legislation in pari materia, in either case with extra-territorial effect?

It is submitted that the Irish Free State Parliament has only the Powers of a Dominion Legislature and that it would be contrary to the Treaty that that Parliament should deal with Imperial legislation continued in force in the Irish Free State under Article 73 of the Constitution as if it possessed the powers of the Imperial Parliament, and that if it passed any legislation of such a character, it would be void under section 2 of the "Constituent Act."

It would, however, be difficult to conceive a more extraordinary anomaly than that the Statute Law which the Irish Free State takes over under Article 73 of the Constitution should continue to have the same "Imperial" effect, whilst if the Irish Free State wishes to repeal or amend it, it can only substitute Statute Law having "Dominion" effect.

It might perhaps be contended that the executive of the Irish Free State cannot have wider power as to the issue of future statutory rules and orders under the continued legislation than the Irish Free State Legislature could give them by fresh legislation of its own, so that the answer to both questions (a) and (b) is in the negative, but if the answer to question (a) were held to be "yes" and the answer to question (b) to be "no" the anomaly would be even more glaring.

It may be that questions (a) and (b) are unlikely to arise with regard to the Fisheries Acts and by-laws, and that the Irish Free State will be content to carry on with them as they stand subject to any necessary adaptations, but similar questions seem bound to arise sooner or later with regard to other Acts or rules which are continued in force in the Irish Free State under Article 73 of the Constitution, and it would appear expedient for the Secretary of State to consult the Law Officers on the subject.

REPORT.

We have taken the matter into our consideration and in obedience to Your Grace's commands have the honour to Report:—

1. Our answer is in the affirmative. The Acts in question were enacted by the Imperial Parliament; and there is nothing in the creation of the Irish Free State which prevents their remaining as part of the law of that country.

2. (a) This question has given us considerable difficulty. It may be contended that since the Imperial Parliament conferred the power to make by-laws in respect of extra-territorial waters on the Department of Agriculture for Ireland, and since the powers of that Department have now been transferred to the Ministry of Agriculture of the Irish Free State, that Ministry has now by virtue of the Imperial enactment the power to make such by-laws; and that if the Imperial Parliament does not desire those powers to continue the remedy is to repeal or modify the Act conferring them. We have, however, come to the conclusion that this is not the true view and that the answer to this question is in the negative. The Irish Free State Executive has only authority to act within the limits of that Dominion, and we think that the only powers transferred to the Irish Free State Ministry must be powers to make by-laws within the limits of the Irish Free State.

2. (b) Our answer to this question is in the negative. Dominion Parliaments have only jurisdiction to legislate for matters occurring within the territorial limits of the Dominion (see A.G.-v-McLeod, 1891, A.C. 455).

3. This does not arise.

4. In our opinion there is at present no such power.

5. The proposed concession to Canada would alter our answer to question 2 (b). If the proposed concession were made the Canadian Parliament would have the right to legislate with extra-territorial effect, so long as the particular enactment was a law for, or ancillary to, the peace, order, and good Government of Canada. Since the position of the Irish Free State is that of the Dominion of Canada, the Irish Free State would be entitled to claim that it had the same power.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 9.]

(No. 495.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 17th August, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to communicate to your Ministers the following observations on the position which has arisen in consequence of the transfer to them of powers formerly exercised by the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction in Dublin.

2. Your Ministers will be aware that, prior to this transfer, by-laws were made under the Steam Trawling (Ireland) Act, 1889, and the Fisheries (Ireland) Act, 1901, directed against the prevention of steam trawling in certain areas outside the three-mile limit. These Acts and the by-laws made thereunder were in force in the Free State at the date of the coming into operation of the Constitution, and, therefore, in accordance with Article 73 of the Constitution, until they are repealed or amended by the Oireachtas, they remain in full force and effect in the Irish Free State to the extent to which they are not inconsistent with the Constitution.

3. The Articles of Agreement for a Treaty, however, in accordance with which the Constitution is to be construed, provide that Ireland shall have the same constitutional status as the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, and the other self-governing Dominions, and that the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government, and otherwise, shall be that of the Dominion of Canada.

4. It may be within the knowledge of your Ministers that, as a matter of history and constitutional development, it has hitherto been universally recognised that Dominion Parliaments have only jurisdiction to legislate for matters occurring within the territorial limits of the Dominion. Your Ministers will readily appreciate the importance of this principle, which has been affirmed in the Courts upon several occasions, and to which no exception has hitherto occurred.

5. Representations having been made to His Majesty's Government on the subject of the by-laws already referred to by representatives of the trawling industry in this country, the opinion of His Majesty's Law Officers has been taken on the matter, and His Majesty's Government are now advised while on the one hand the Acts referred to and all by-laws made thereunder which were unrepealed on the date on which the Constitution came into force, undoubtedly, in virtue of Article 73 of the Constitution, remain in full force and effect, the powers conferred on your Ministers and the Oireachtas respectively are not such as to enable them to make new by-laws or pass further legislation having extra-territorial effect.

6. His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn whether your Ministers concur in this view.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

[Answered by No. 7.]

GENTLEMEN,

Downing Street, 13th November, 1923.

I AM directed by the Duke of Devonshire to refer to the letter from this Department of the 29th of June last,* and your Report of the 21st of July last,* with reference to the extra-territorial effect of certain Imperial Statutes in their present application to the Irish Free State, in paragraph 5 of which Report you expressed the view that if the proposal to confer power on the Canadian Parliament to legislate with extra-territorial effect were carried out, the Irish Free State, since its position under the Articles of Agreement for a Treaty between Great Britain and Ireland (which may for convenience be called the Treaty) is that of the Dominion of Canada, would be entitled to claim that it had the same power.

I am to say that the question which was raised by implication in paragraph 7 of the Reference from this Department of the 29th of June, and which the Secretary of State would now desire to put in an express form is whether under Article 2 of the Treaty the constitutional position of the Irish Free State is to be that of Canada at the date when the Treaty was signed (6th December, 1921), or whether the constitutional relations between the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State are to be affected legally and constitutionally by every change taking place after that date in the constitutional relations between the United Kingdom and Canada.

I am to explain that His Grace is informed that at the time when the negotiations for the Treaty were being carried on, it was a fundamental part of the intended settlement that the constitutional relations between the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State should be those actually at that time existing between the United Kingdom and Canada.

It was for this reason, to give one illustration, that with the concurrence of Lord Hewart (then Attorney-General) the British delegates did not press for any provision in the Treaty as to appeals to the Privy Council, since in Lord Hewart's opinion there was no doubt that the then existing position as to appeals from Canada to the Privy Council would be maintained with regard to the Irish Free State, even if appeal to the Privy Council from Canada should at any future time be abolished.

It is true that this particular point does not arise on the construction of Article 2 of the Treaty, since the prerogative of the Crown to grant special leave to appeal to the Privy Council has been expressly provided by the proviso to Article 66 of the Irish Free State Constitution, but the question of construction does arise with regard to the proposed extension of the power of the Canadian Parliament and may arise from time to time with other changes in the constitutional relations between the United Kingdom and Canada.

It is, therefore, one of the greatest possible importance, and I am directed by the Secretary of State to request you to take the construction of the Treaty again into your consideration, and to report whether on such further consideration, you are able to modify the opinion expressed in paragraph 5 of your Report of the 21st of July.*

31st December, 1923.

MY LORD DUKE,

WE were honoured with Your Grace's commands signified to us in Sir James Masterton Smith's letter of the 13th ultimo* requesting us to furnish Your Grace with our opinion whether under Article 2 of the Treaty between Great Britain and Ireland the constitutional position of the Irish Free State is to be that of Canada at the date when the Treaty was signed (6th December, 1921), or whether the constitutional relations between the United Kingdom and the Irish Free State are to be affected legally and constitutionally by every change taking place after that date in the constitutional relations between the United Kingdom and Canada.

We have taken the matter into our consideration and in obedience to Your Grace's commands have the honour to REPORT:—

The question raised in the letter of the 13th November is one of great constitutional importance and also one of considerable difficulty.

We have, however, come to the conclusion, after carefully considering the problem, that the view expressed by Lord Hewart is the true one, and that the opinion expressed in paragraph 5 of our Report of the 21st July† should be altered accordingly.

The relevant words occur in Article 2 of the Treaty that "the law practice and constitutional usage governing the relationship of the Crown, or the representative of the Crown, and of the Imperial Parliament to the Dominion of Canada shall govern their relationship to the Irish Free State." It is of the essence of the British Constitution that the practice and constitutional usage governing the relationship of Great Britain to the self-governing Dominions are growing and developing from year to year; and at first sight it seems very startling to hold that in the case of Southern Ireland the practice and constitutional usage are stereotyped as if existing on a particular date, while with the rest of the Empire they are constantly altering.

We think, however, that the answer to this difficulty is to be found in the reflection that although the Treaty gives to Southern Ireland the practice and constitutional usage as existing between Great Britain and Canada at the date of the Treaty, there is nothing to prevent the development from time to time of that practice and constitutional usage in the same way as it has developed in the past, and will no doubt develop in the future, between Great Britain and the other self-governing Dominions.

The contrary view as to the construction of the Article would involve the difficulty that in theory at least Canada might hereafter surrender some of her present rights of self-government; and that it is very improbable that Southern Ireland can have agreed that her rights should depend upon arrangements made in the future between Great Britain and Canada with regard to which she might not be consulted at all.

2. His Majesty's Government are glad to be able to agree in the adoption of the modified wording suggested in the latter part of that Minute, viz., "An enactment of the Parliament of Canada, if expressed to operate extra-territorially, shall have, and be deemed to have had, that operation if and in so far as it is a law for, or ancillary to, the peace, order and good government of Canada." I HAVE the honour to advert to your despatch No. 295 of the 16th ultimo‡ and previous correspondence relative to the effect upon the Fishery By-laws made under the Steam Trawling (Ireland) Act, 1889, and the Fisheries (Ireland) Act, 1901, of the coming into operation of the Constitution of the Irish Free State, and to state that my Ministers see no reason to dissent from the view expressed by His Majesty's Law Officers that such By-laws as were in force when the Constitution came into operation continue to have full force and effect, but that any By-laws made subsequent to that date could not have extra-territorial effect.

23RD JUNE. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: You will probably have seen from Press reports of recent speeches of Secretary of State for the Colonies and myself in Parliament that we are concerned as to adequacy of present system of consultation with other self-governing parts of Empire on matters of foreign policy and general Imperial interest. We fully accept principle of necessity for effective arrangements for continuous consultation in all important matters of common Imperial concern, and for such necessary concerted action, founded on consultation, as the several Governments may determine (see Resolution IX of Imperial War Conference, 1917). We also realize that action to be taken as result of consultation whether at or between Imperial Conferences must be subject to constitutional requirements of each country. But we feel, as result of our experience since taking office, that system in practice has two main deficiencies.

First, it renders immediate action extremely difficult, more especially between Conferences, on occasions when such action is imperatively needed, particularly in sphere of foreign policy.

Secondly, when matters under discussion are subjects of political controversy, economic or otherwise, conclusions reached at and between Imperial Conferences are liable to be reversed through changes of Government.

Such a state of affairs inevitably leads to ineffectiveness; it also causes disappointment, and doubts are thrown on utility of whole Imperial Conference system.

What the remedy is, it is difficult to say. On the first point, i.e., the importance of securing, on occasion, rapid decisions, particularly on matters of foreign policy, it occurs to us that further examination of the Resolution on Negotiation, etc., of Treaties passed at last year's Imperial Conference might be worth while in order to consider how far that Resolution needs to be supplemented and interpreted, and whether principles embodied in it can usefully be extended to other matters affecting foreign relations.

On the second point, i.e., means of making Imperial Conference Resolutions, whether they relate to economic or other matters, more effective, what is wanted is, I think, as I indicated in a speech in Parliament on 18th June, "creation of some sort of workable machinery so that the public opinion of the whole of our Commonwealth of States should influence the policy for which the Commonwealth must be responsible."

We had in view desirability of avoiding party issues when proposing (see telegram from Secretary of State 19th June*) appointment of Economic Committee with a reference framed so as to exclude questions of tariff policy.

* No. 502 in Dominions No. 91.

One method of bringing about result desired which was mentioned by Secretary of State in recent speech in Parliament is that Imperial Conferences in future should not be confined to representatives of parties in office for time being. When it was contemplated some years ago that a special Constitutional Conference should be held, it was proposed from more than one quarter that such a Conference should be representative of Oppositions as well as Governments. On the other hand we realize that this suggestion is open to the criticism that it would tend to hamper the frank exchange of views and unrestricted inter-communication of confidential information on such matters as foreign policy and defence which have become so outstanding features of recent Conferences.

Another method might be to continue representation of Governments only but to arrange for each Government to obtain from its own Parliament beforehand a general approval, within sufficiently wide limits, of the attitude to be taken up by its representatives. Whilst avoiding the criticism of the first method, this might tend to diminish flexibility of Conference procedure.

We should like your views on these suggestions, and if you should be able to make any others they would be welcome. We ourselves have quite an open mind, and are merely exploring situation.

Our own feeling is that time has hardly come either to revive idea of Constitutional Conference or to call special meeting of Imperial Conference to consider problems outlined above. But we should like these problems given preliminary examination in near future and it has occurred to us that possible method might be to have a meeting of, say, two representatives of each country concerned who have had experience of constitutional working, to consider these problems and present a report as basis for further discussion. How would you view this idea, and, if it commends itself, what time would be most convenient for a meeting? Possibly October might be suitable as this would permit of some of Dominion delegates to next Assembly of League of Nations being amongst representatives if this were desired.

Similar telegram sent to other Prime Ministers. Ramsay MacDonald.

[Answered by No. 21.]

16TH JULY. Confidential. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram of 23rd June.§ My Government has noted the statements by the Secretary of State for the Colonies and yourself in Parliament affirming the principle of full consultation with the self-governing parts of the Empire on matters of foreign policy and general Imperial interest. We note also that you accept the principle of necessity for an effective arrangement for continuous consultations in important matters of common Imperial concern and for such concerted action as the several Governments may determine.

My Government has given a great deal of consideration to this most important question, and notes with pleasure your Government's acceptance of the basic principle.

It is, of course, obvious that in practice there are two main difficulties in establishment of an effective system of joint consultation and action, namely (a) the impossibility of full exchange of views when the Imperial Conference is not sitting, particularly in the sphere of foreign policy where immediate action is imperative, and (b) the possibility of conclusions of Imperial or Economic Conferences being reversed through change of government.

The problems which have to be considered appear to divide themselves into: (1) the manner in which an Imperial policy should be laid down in regard to matters of common Empire interest, such as foreign policy, defence, and inter-Empire trade. (2) How should consultations take place with regard to giving effect to such policy when determined upon and for its alteration where necessity arises? (3) What steps can be taken to ensure that any common policy arrived at will be given effect to irrespective of change of government in different parts of the Empire?

With regard to (1) it is now an established principle of Empire Government that Prime Minister Conferences shall take place at frequent intervals. At these Conferences a common Empire policy on questions of Imperial interest can be arrived at and submitted by the respective Prime Ministers to their individual Parliaments for their ratification and assent. (More follows.)

—FORSTER.

(Continuation received Colonial Office 4.5 p.m., 16th July, 1924.)

Following is continuation of my Confidential telegram of to-day. Consultation with the self-governing Dominions:—

The machinery for ensuring a common policy therefore already exists by holding of the Imperial Conferences, and no alteration of existing practice appears either necessary or desirable.

(2) It is unavoidable that questions of urgent foreign policy must be dealt with according to the circumstances in which they arise, and they are therefore in an entirely different category from other matters upon which a common policy may have been determined at an Imperial Conference. It appears to my Government therefore that no alteration in the underlying principle of consultation which at present exists is practicable, but considerable improvement could be effected in the operation of such machinery. These improvements should be on lines of (a) a closer liaison between the Foreign Office and Dominion Governments, which could be effected by the establishment by the Dominions of a Foreign Office Branch in their High Commissioners' Offices under the control of an officer of such standing and character as to enjoy the confidence of the Foreign Office; such a representative would be in a position to keep his Prime Minister informed in regard to current events and atmosphere in connexion with foreign policy, in addition to information which is conveyed by cable to the Prime Minister and by information at present sent from time to time by the Foreign Office. (b) Fuller and more regular advice in regard to all questions of foreign affairs, both by cable and mail, than is at present forwarded to the Prime Ministers of the self-governing Dominions. (c) Greater efforts to anticipate questions which are likely to arise and require urgent decision, with a view to ascertaining the views of the Dominions in advance in place of informing them of decisions after they have been arrived at and acted upon or when it is too late for any alternative action to be submitted.

With regard to questions other than foreign policy, my Government is of opinion that the establishment of a permanent Imperial Secretariat responsible to the Prime Ministers of all the self-governing parts of the Empire whose task would be to prepare the Imperial Conferences, carry out all Secretariat work during the sittings of such Conferences, follow up all Resolutions and decisions arrived at, and keep the Dominions constantly informed of developments between the Conferences, would go a long way towards solving the problem of effective and continuous consultation. This Secretariat would also embrace existing Imperial Committee(s) such as the War Graves and Shipping, and the Economic Committee when established. It would not merely be a connecting link between the individual Dominion Governments and the British Government, but also between the Governments of the different Dominions. At the present time the Secretariat for Imperial Conferences is provided by the British Government, together with representatives of the Dominions concerned, but immediately the Conference is over the Secretariat is broken up, and no effective machinery exists for keeping the Dominions continuously informed as to developments or alterations necessitated by changed circumstances. In the opinion of my Government a great improvement would be effected by the establishment of a permanent Imperial Secretariat.

With regard to ensuring that any common policy arrived at at Imperial Conferences will be given effect to irrespective of change of Government, this appears to my Government to be quite impossible of definite solution. It appears to us, however, that the (?) task of holding this great Empire together, which is so dependent on giving effect to a common policy arrived at at Imperial Conferences, should be raised above the ordinary level of domestic policy and not subordinated to local political issues. We are of opinion that the British Government should give greater consideration to the considered views of the Dominion Governments than in the past, otherwise all our efforts towards effective consultations and formulation of common policy will be futile.

Your suggestion that party issues might be avoided by inclusion in Imperial Conference delegations of representatives of all parliamentary parties is, in our opinion, not likely to achieve the result desired. As you state, it would tend to hamper that frank exchange of views and unrestricted inter-communication of confidential information on such matters as foreign policy and defence. Furthermore, it might easily lead to serious consequences on the return of the delegations to their respective countries. The leader of the Government and of the Opposition would respectively feel compelled to relate his version of the Conference and his reasons for agreement (or) disagreement with conclusions arrived at.

Secrecy in these circumstances would be impossible. Further, an atmosphere of political controversy would inevitably obtrude into the Conference itself, and present free and unfettered discussions between men who at the time are actually shouldering responsibilities of the Government in their respective countries would disappear. My Government does not believe this suggestion would effect the result desired, but, on the contrary, believes that it would tend to increase further the difficulties which are at present experienced.

Your second suggestion that each Government shall obtain from its own Parliament beforehand a general approval within sufficiently wide limits of the attitude to be taken up by its representative is one which the Commonwealth Government(s) have almost invariably followed. As, however, the conclusions of such Conferences must always be ratified by the respective Parliaments, my Government does not consider this suggestion material aid in finding a solution.

We appreciate your attempt to explore the situation and agree as to the importance of finding a solution. We feel, however, that solution will be gradually evolved and consider that our object is more likely to be defeated than attained by undue precipitance.

The existing arrangements for the formation of a common Imperial policy and for subsequent consultation form the basis of a system which in the future may well become effective.

In these circumstances we do not see that any advantage is to be gained by the appointment of representatives to consider this problem and present a report as a basis for further discussion. All points at present under discussion were present to the minds of the Prime Ministers at the Imperial Conference held last year, but it was unanimously felt that the best course to pursue was to allow the situation to solve itself by gradual evolution rather than by immediate definite action.

My Government therefore does not propose to send representative(s) to a conference to discuss these questions, but is prepared during the interval until the next Imperial Conference is held to explore further any suggestions that may be put forward, and also to offer for similar consideration by other governments concerned any improvements in the existing machinery which may occur to us. Ends.

7TH AUGUST. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Re preliminary meeting Inter-Imperial consultation, our Government has now considered proposals set out in your telegram of 23rd June.§ We agree as to the desirability of more definite understanding on matters therein referred to. Questions are not new and very marked progress has been made in their clarification and solution, particularly in recent years. Whilst finality is not possible in constantly changing situation, doubtless further steps can be taken. Difficulty is inherent in existence of several self-governing communities scattered over the globe with, in large part, different neighbours and different problems, and is increased by absence of precedent for the experiment in co-operation which members of British community of nations are working out. We believe with goodwill which has always prevailed, it can continue to be met.

As to first of specific proposals, we agree that it would be helpful to consider possibilities of further extension of principle embodied in Resolution on negotiation, etc., of treaties. Second proposal does not appear feasible. It is undoubtedly inconvenient to have reversal of policy, but this liberty must be assured so long as separate Parliaments exist and electors are to be free to have policy determined in accordance with their wishes. As a matter of fact even with change in Government there is very considerable measure of continuity of essential policy. Proposal to have all parties represented in the Imperial Conferences with a view to preventing policy agreed upon thereat being rejected by existing or future Parliaments would seem to imply setting up a new body supreme over the several Parliaments. We regard the Imperial Conference as Conference of Governments of which each is responsible to its own Parliament and ultimately to its own electorate and in no sense as Imperial Council determining the policy for the Empire as a whole. We would deem it most inadvisable to depart in any particular from this conception which is based on well established principles of Ministerial responsibility and the supremacy of Parliament. We consider that with respect to all Imperial Conference resolutions or proposals each Government must accept responsibility for its attitude and the Opposition or Oppositions be free to criticize; with Parliament(s) and if occasion arises people(s) deciding the issues.

As to approval by Parliament in advance of the attitude to be taken by our representative we feel that this could be given only where Parliament had knowledge in advance of specific questions to be considered and in the light of the then existing circumstances. We agree that even in such cases adoption of this method might tend to diminish the flexibility of Conference procedure.

We share the feeling expressed in your message that the time has hardly come either to revive the idea of constitutional Conference or to call a special meeting of the Imperial Conference to consider these problems. We would be prepared, however, to take part in the manner suggested in meeting in the near future for preliminary examination of these problems and preparation of Report as basis for further discussions provided that other parts of the Empire agree and date convenient for all can be found. Early in October would appear to us to be the most convenient time for such meeting. Ends.

Begins: Your telegram of 18th August,† with further reference to the suggested Conference for preliminary examination of and preparation of report on the question of representation of the British Empire at future International Conferences, consultations on foreign policy, etc., to hand.

I note that the Canadian Government is of opinion that the time has hardly come to revive the idea of Constitutional Conference or to call special meeting of Imperial Conference to consider these problems, and that, further, if a Conference is held it is to be regarded in no sense as an Imperial Council determining the policy for the Empire as a whole.

I note, too, that Canada is of opinion that representation of all political parties is open to objection.

Your telegram of 23rd June‡ indicates that your Government's suggestion is for a junior Conference to explore generally the problem of representation, etc., and that report of such Conference will entail no responsibility whatever on the Governments concerned, but will constitute merely an expression of opinion for the guidance of such Governments.

If this is the case and all other Dominions are agreeable, while still adhering to the views expressed in my telegram of 16th July,§ my Government is prepared to co-operate on the principle that anything which even remotely tends to improve the relations between the various Governments of the Empire is worthy of trial.

TELEGRAM.

26TH SEPTEMBER. Your telegram of 19th September.¶ Proposed Constitutional Inquiry. In view of your statement that there is no prospect of its being practicable to hold the inquiry as early as the middle of October, our Government favours indefinite postponement and that the matters which were to have been dealt with in the Conference be taken up by correspondence. In your telegram of 23rd June* you suggested holding preliminary meeting of, say, two representatives of each country possibly in October to permit of some of the Dominion delegates to League of Nations being amongst the representatives. With this in view we arranged for our Ministerial delegates at Geneva to take (part) in the Conference at London in October after the conclusion of the League of Nations Assembly. These Delegates have made unalterable engagements in Canada later in the year which will not permit of their remaining in London on into (sic) November.—BYNG.

SIR, Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 10th October, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch Dominions No. 398, Confidential, of the 20th August† and previous correspondence, on the subject of the present system of consultation on matters of foreign policy and general Commonwealth interest, and to express regret that a reply should have been so long delayed.

2. My Ministers have now carefully considered the suggestions set forth in the telegram transmitted with your Confidential despatch of the 25th June.‡ They would be prepared to take part in the manner suggested in a Conference for the preliminary examination of these problems and the preparation of a report as a basis for further discussion.

3. My Ministers are convinced that, while the proposed Conference cannot strictly be termed a Constitutional Conference, the suggested programme involves matters of grave constitutional importance which require long and serious consideration beforehand.

4. They will, therefore, be glad to learn as soon as possible whether a date can now be fixed for the Conference.

I have, &c.,
T. M. HEALY.

Note.—Copies sent to Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa and Newfoundland by despatch, 20th October.

Note.—The proposal to hold the inquiry was not pursued (see No. 25 in Cmd. 2301).

No. 37.

SIR MARK STURGIS (COLONIAL OFFICE) to MR. C. H. MONTGOMERY (FOREIGN OFFICE).

[Answered by No. 38.]

MY DEAR HUBERT,

Colonial Office, 23rd November, 1923.

WILL you please look at Section I (XI) of the enclosed Bill, which is now before the Free State Parliament. The Bill passed its second reading on 21st November, and the Committee stage is fixed for Wednesday of next week. The words to which we wish to call attention are "diplomatic and consular representation of Saorstát Eireann in any country or place."

2. The question arises whether it is desirable, from the point of view of the British Government, that representations should be made to the Dublin Government with a view to the omission of the words "diplomatic and consular," and, if such representations were made, how they would be received.

3. The words in question appear to be qualified by the words "the administration and business generally of public services in connexion with . . ." earlier in the sub-section, but they appear to assume either that diplomatic and consular representation of the Irish Free State already exists or that it will hereafter exist.

4. You will remember, of course, that as far back as 1920 His Majesty's Government committed themselves to the principle of the special diplomatic representation of Canadian interests at Washington (see statement* of Mr. Bonar Law in the House of Commons on 10th May, 1920). On various occasions His Majesty's Government have offered consular status to commercial representatives of the Dominions in foreign countries. Just recently, too, His Majesty's Government were prepared to include the more important Dominion Trade Commissioners in the diplomatic staffs abroad and thus give them precisely the same standing as the British commercial counsellors and Secretaries. It was, however, found unnecessary to pursue this offer since it was subsequently discovered that the Canadian Government, which had raised the question, did not desire more than that their Trade Commissioners should be formally accredited to foreign Governments. All these acts were of course conditional on the maintenance of the diplomatic unity of the Empire and the principle of a single diplomatic or consular service.

5. In the circumstances it seems difficult to contend that the contingency of the Irish Free State having diplomatic or consular representation within the limits outlined above, by agreement with His Majesty's Government, may not arise. If the words "diplomatic or consular" are retained, and if His Majesty's Government were challenged to explain in Parliament why they acquiesced in them, it would seem possible to justify them on the above lines.

* See No. 89 in Dominions No. 66.

6. If it was thought advisable to press for the exclusion of the three words quoted, it would only seem possible to do so on the following grounds:—

- (a) That no arrangements at present exist which can be described as diplomatic and consular representation of the Irish Free State in foreign countries;
- (b) That the inclusion of the words might be open to misinterpretation;
- (c) That their omission would still render it possible for the Free State Government to discuss with His Majesty's Government the whole question of the representation of the Irish Free State abroad.

7. Our present view is that on the whole such representation would not be advisable.

We do not think that the words in question were inserted with any ulterior motive, nor do we imagine that the Irish Free State Government are at present in a position to incur the cost of separate diplomatic or consular representation abroad on any considerable scale.

On the other hand, we have no expectation whatever that a suggestion on our part to the Minister of External Affairs that he shall move for the omission of these words in Committee would be accepted, or, if the suggestion were accepted by him, that the omission would be agreed to by the Dail.

8. For the reasons set out in paragraphs 3 and 5 of this letter the point is not one which, in our view, His Majesty's Government could well press, nor do we think that it could be contended that the words are incompatible with the provision of the 1921 Treaty.

9. On the whole we should propose to put the arguments in favour of exclusion of the three words as set out in paragraph 6 above to Mr. Loughnane, who is our representative in Dublin, but to authorize him, if, as we anticipate, he agrees that they are best not communicated to the Irish Free State Government, to carry the matter no further.

10. An additional consideration against making representations is that intervention by His Majesty's Government at the present moment may not only be ineffective but may precipitate the very thing we are desirous of avoiding—i.e., it may impel them to act upon the clause and actually attempt to appoint diplomatic representatives, a course which at present we have no reason to suppose they are likely to attempt. Incidentally we learn that the creation of a Department of External Affairs is being strongly criticized in the Dail; and in the absence of any representations from us, the offending clause may disappear.

11. Of course, the absence of any comment from us on a Bill does not mean that we approve of it, but simply that we do not regard it as inconsistent with the Treaty or as otherwise so objectionable as to demand intervention.

12. Will you please let us know as soon as possible whether the Foreign Office agree that we need not make representations to the Free State Government in the matter.

We apologise for not writing officially as we realize the importance of the matter but, as already explained, time is the essence in this case.

Yours, &c.,

MARK STURGIS.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE

(Received 26th November, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 39.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 26th November, 1923.

SIR Mark Sturgis's semi-official letter of the 23rd instant,* relative to Section I (XI) of the Bill now before the Parliament of the Irish Free State, has been submitted to the Secretary of State, who has had under consideration the question whether it is desirable that representations should be made to the Government of the Irish Free State with a view to the omission of the words "diplomatic and consular" from the text of that section.

2. According to the articles of agreement for a Treaty between Great Britain and Ireland of the 6th December, 1921, "the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government and otherwise shall be that of the Dominion of Canada," and, therefore, the Free State can only claim direct diplomatic or consular representation to the extent to which such a claim may have been established by Canada.

3. The special arrangement as regards the representation of the Dominion of Canada at Washington, which was made by agreement with the Canadian Government has, in point of fact, never been put into effect, because it was found in practice to be unsuitable and open to various objections. It does not, therefore, afford a good precedent. Even, however, if it were now desirable to appeal to its terms as a precedent for a similar concession to that which His Majesty's Government was at the time ready to contemplate, the possibility of separate Free State representation could only be considered subject to the following conditions:—

(a) A case must be made out justifying separate representation on the ground of particular circumstances applicable to the case in question;

(b) Such representation can only be arranged by previous agreement with His Majesty's Government.

4. It is understood from the third paragraph of the letter under reply that your department considers that the words "diplomatic and consular representation of the Saorstát Eireann in any country or place" are qualified by the words "the administration and business generally of public services in connexion with" earlier in the subsection, that is to say, that it will be the business of the Department of External Affairs to deal with any questions that may arise with the Imperial Government as to the representation of the Free State through the diplomatic and consular representatives of the Empire as a whole. Lord Curzon considers that, unless it is clear that the Free State Government accept this interpretation of the words, the position of His Majesty's Government in resisting in the future any general claim to separate diplomatic and consular representation might be prejudiced by a failure to make the position quite clear now.

5. It is, therefore, in his opinion, essential to establish the fact that the above interpretation is so accepted. His Lordship would be glad to hear in what way in the opinion of the Secretary of State for the Colonies this can best be done.

I am, &c.,

HUBERT MONTGOMERY.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 43.]

(No. 689.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 29th November, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acquaint Your Excellency, for the information of your Ministers, that my attention has been drawn to the "Ministers and Secretaries Bill, 1923," which is now before the Dail, and particularly to Clause I (XI) which sets out powers, duties and functions of the Department of External Affairs.

2. The Irish Free State Government will appreciate that, should any question arise in the future as to the diplomatic and consular representation of the interests of the Irish Free State abroad otherwise than through the diplomatic and consular services as at present maintained by His Majesty's Government, there will be need for consultation with the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs for the time being in regard to the particular circumstances applicable to any case which may occur. This procedure was followed when the question of special representation of Canadian interests at Washington arose, and it has also been adopted in cases where suggestion has been made that it will be convenient if consular status can be secured for commercial representatives of particular Dominions in foreign countries.

3. It is inferred, however, that the words in the earlier part of Clause I (XI) "the administration and business generally of public services in connexion . . . diplomatic and consular representation of Saorstát Eireann in any country or place" are intended to refer to the business conducted on behalf of the Irish Free State through the existing diplomatic and consular services.

I have, &c.,

No. 41.

SIR MARK STURGIS (COLONIAL OFFICE) TO MR. N. G. LOUGHNANE (DUBLIN).

[Answered by No. 42.]

(Personal and Confidential.)

MY DEAR LOUGHNANE,

29th November, 1923.

I ENCLOSE an official despatch* on the subject of the Ministers and Secretaries Bill, about which I telegraphed to you on the 22nd.

We were bound, of course, to call the attention both of the Dominions Department and of the Foreign Office to the provisions of Clause I (XI); and as you may imagine, bearing in mind how delicate the question of separate diplomatic representation of the Dominions has been for some time past, this clause has caused great searching of mind in both those Departments.

The difficulty of course is that, while on the one hand, in view of the fact that as far back as 1920 His Majesty's Government committed themselves to the principle of the special diplomatic representation of Canadian interests at Washington, we cannot now definitely say that the appointment of Irish Free State Ambassadors or Ministers to foreign countries would be a breach of the Treaty; on the other hand, any such appointments without prior consultation not only with this country, but with the other Dominions would be open to the gravest objection.

As the clause stands, it appears to be open to two interpretations—either that the Irish Free State can and will at any moment appoint diplomatic representatives abroad, or that "the administration and business generally of public services in connexion with" the existing diplomatic representation (i.e., representation through His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador) of Saorstát Eireann is to be entrusted to the Department of External Affairs.

* No. 40.

The latter interpretation would, of course, be quite unobjectionable; and a statement by the Free State Government that that was the intention of the clause would, of course, in no way debar them from subsequently raising with us and the Imperial Conference the question of separate diplomatic representation.

The object of the enclosed despatch is to elicit if possible an acceptance of this interpretation from the Free State Government; and the despatch has been carefully drafted with a view to encroaching as little as possible upon Free State susceptibilities. But I ought to let you know that the Foreign Office have only concurred in the despatch in its present form on condition that it does elicit such an acceptance: if it fails to do this, they will certainly press us (and we shall find it very difficult to refuse) to raise the question in a more specific form.

Will you therefore exercise all your diplomacy in getting a satisfactory despatch in reply to this, and getting it as soon as possible.

Yours, &c.,

MARK STURGIS.

MR. N. G. LOUGHNANE (DUBLIN) TO SIR MARK STURGIS (COLONIAL OFFICE).

MY DEAR STURGIS,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 1st December, 1923.

I SAW Mr. Cosgrave yesterday afternoon with reference to Section 1 (XI) of the Ministers and Secretaries Bill. Both he and Mr. Kennedy, to whom I mentioned the matter earlier in the day, took the same line, viz., that the real and only object of the sub-section was to define the functions of the Ministry of External Affairs as at present constituted, and it was not designed for the purpose of enabling the Government to set up separate Diplomatic and Consular Services. They mentioned, however, that, so far as the right to claim separate Diplomatic representation was concerned, the Free State, by virtue of the Treaty, was in the same position as Canada, and Mr. Cosgrave indicated that it is not unlikely that the Free State Government will decide to seek separate representation at Washington. He said that he would prefer—and he was sure that the Dail would also prefer—not to incur the expense of having a separate representative at Washington or elsewhere, but Ireland resembled Canada, and differed from all the other Dominions, in the fact that it had special interests in the United States of America, and the appointment of a separate Free State diplomatic representative in that country, if only as a temporary expedient, might be useful as a means of winning over to the Treaty the large body of Irish-Americans who are still pursuing a policy of hatred of everything British because they fail to realize that the quarrel between the Irish and British people is now closed, and that Irish self-government is now an accomplished fact. He assured me, however, and Mr. Kennedy was equally emphatic on this point, that there was no intention of using this Bill for the purpose of appointing foreign representatives without reference to the Foreign Office. If the Canadian example is to be followed as regards Washington, nothing will be done until the Foreign Office has been consulted, and the procedure of the Canadian precedent will be scrupulously adhered to in all respects. I left the despatch with Mr. Cosgrave who said that he would take it into the Cabinet which was then sitting, and that a reply would be sent as soon as possible.

Yours, &c.,

N. G. LOUGHNANE.

(Received 4th March, 1924.)

[Answered by No. 52.]

(No. 79.)

SIR,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 3rd March, 1924.

My Ministers desire me to inform you that they are convinced of the urgent necessity of appointing an Irish Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary to the United States of America.

2. They have decided that Mr. Timothy A. Smiddy would be a suitable person to assume that position, and they would be glad if His Majesty's Government would cause immediate inquiries to be made as to whether he would be persona grata to the President and to the Department of State at Washington.

3. In the event of a favourable reply, they would be glad to receive letters of credence from His Majesty the King for transmission to Mr. Smiddy.

4. They are confident that you will appreciate the considerations which have prompted them to arrive at this decision. The financial and commercial interests of the Free State in the United States are very considerable, and the pressing problem of Irish emigration to America has for a long time engaged the earnest attention of my Government. They have found, in dealing with these matters, that they are severely handicapped by reason of the fact that their representative at Washington has not been accredited to the Government of the United States. They feel sure, moreover, that nothing could be more effective in promoting amongst Irish people in America cordial relations with the Nations of the Commonwealth than the presence of an Irish Minister Plenipotentiary in the United States.

5. In view of the extreme urgency of finding a solution for the financial and immigration questions directly affecting them, my Ministers request that the British Ambassador at Washington be immediately instructed by telegraph to communicate with the United States Government in reference to Professor Smiddy's appointment.

(Secret.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 11th March, 1924.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Thomas to transmit to you, for the consideration of Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald, a copy of correspondence* with the Governor-General of the Irish Free State relative to the desire of the Free State Government that immediate steps should be taken with a view to the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister Plenipotentiary and Envoy Extraordinary to the United States of America.

2. As regards the main principle involved, Mr. Thomas is of opinion that as, under Articles I, II, and III of the Articles of Agreement of the 6th December, 1921, the Irish Free State is, subject to the later articles, placed on the same constitutional relation with His Majesty's Government as Canada, and as, on the date of the Articles of Agreement, arrangements had already been made between His Majesty's Government and the Canadian Government whereby the latter were placed in a position to advise His Majesty to appoint a Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington who would have charge of Canadian affairs, His Majesty's Government are bound to give every assistance to the Government of the Irish Free State in connexion with the present request. Quite apart from any question of the Articles of Agreement, Mr. Thomas feels that His Majesty's Government would be bound to give similar assistance to any Dominion Government which wished to appoint a diplomatic representative of its own at Washington.

3. In Mr. Thomas' opinion there are no grounds on which His Majesty's Government could justify postponing action on the request of the Free State Government until the Canadian Government have finally decided whether or not to appoint a Canadian representative at Washington. The Canadian Government, and also the Governments of the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa should, however, be informed at once of the Free State proposal, and of the action which His Majesty's Government propose to take on it.

4. Mr. Thomas will be glad to learn Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's views as to the form which that action should take. He presumes that there will be no question in the present case of arranging for the Irish Free State Minister to take charge of the Embassy at Washington in the absence of His Majesty's Ambassador. In this connexion it will be remembered that the Prime Minister of Canada, at the Imperial Conference of 1923, indicated that the present Canadian Government would probably suggest an alteration of the arrangements on this matter which were made in 1920. In other respects the proposals agreed to in 1920 in the case of the Canadian Minister at Washington would appear generally suitable, except on two points: (a) it would seem inadvisable to make special reference to the office accommodation of the Irish Free State Representative at Washington, particularly as Mr. T. A. Smiddy is already at work there; (b) on the question of precedence, it would seem desirable to safeguard the position of a Minister representing Canada, or indeed of a Minister representing the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, or the Union of South Africa, if such appointments should be made later than that of a Minister representing the Irish Free State.

* Nos. 45 and 9905: not printed; it stated that the matter was receiving immediate consideration, and that the Secretary of State hoped to discuss it with Mr. Cosgrave.

5. Mr. Thomas thinks that it might be well, if the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the Canadian Government agree, to communicate to the Government of the Irish Free State the relevant correspondence in 1919 and 1920, when the appointment of a Canadian Minister at Washington was under consideration. He would propose to send copies of the correspondence printed as Nos. 63 to 91 in the enclosed Secret Print, Dominions No. 66, including the telegrams to and from the Foreign Office printed among this correspondence. If Mr. Ramsay MacDonald concurs, Mr. Thomas will ascertain the views of the Government of Canada when communicating with them on the general question.

6. In view of the fact that Mr. Thomas proposes to discuss this question with the President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State at the end of this week he will be glad to receive a very early reply to this letter. It is also requested that the copy of the Secret Print enclosed herewith may be returned to this office in due course.

FOREIGN OFFICE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 21st March, 1924.)

[Answered by No. 48.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 20th March, 1924.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th instant,* enclosing copies of correspondence with the Governor-General of the Irish Free State relative to the desire of the Free State Government that immediate steps should be taken with a view to the appointment of an Irish Free State Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States of America.

2. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald considers that, in view of the decision reached in the case of Canada in 1920, it would not be possible to refuse to agree to the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington, with credentials from the King, and a letter of appointment from the Irish Free State Government. The present proposal for the appointment of an Irish "Envoy Extraordinary" must, however, be regarded as going beyond what was decided in the case of Canada, and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald regrets that he cannot agree to such a course. With regard to the relations between the Irish Free State Minister and His Majesty's Embassy at Washington, he feels that the former should be entirely independent of, and reside outside the Embassy, as it is clearly impossible for His Majesty's Government to accept responsibility for action over which they would, in fact, have no control. The Irish Free State Minister would, of course, be precluded, by the recommendations of the recent Imperial Conference, from negotiating or signing treaties with the United States without previous consultation with the governments of other parts of the Empire. With regard to the question of precedence, it would seem proper that Dominion Ministers should rank amongst themselves in accordance with the historic priority of their respective Dominions, and after His Majesty's Representative in charge of the British Embassy. In order to make this position clear and regular, the Counsellor to His Majesty's Embassy will receive credentials as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, which will ensure his having the necessary precedence as Imperial representative during the absence of the Ambassador. As regards the precedence of Dominion Representatives in the Diplomatic Body at Washington, while the matter is one for the consideration of the United States Government in the first instance, their proper status according to international usage would be after Envoys Extraordinary.

3. While Mr. Ramsay MacDonald sees no alternative to agreeing to the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister, he considers that His Majesty's Government are, in this and other respects, entering on a dangerous and difficult path as regards the Dominions, and that, if care be not taken, there is a possibility of serious misunderstandings and friction arising. In the particular case of the Irish Free State, for example, there seems to be little doubt from the last paragraph of Mr. Healy's letter to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that the immigration question has an important bearing on the desire of the Free State Government to be separately represented. It seems clear that any advantage which the Free State Government might gain in the matter of the immigration quota into the United States could only be at the expense of the United Kingdom.

4. In view of the difficulties of the case, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald considers that the other Dominions should be informed of the request put forward by the Irish Free State, with an intimation that there is no intention of placing any obstacles in the way of the separate representation of any Dominion at Washington, but that His Majesty's Government gravely fear it may, in practice, become increasingly difficult if not impossible for the British Empire to pursue a homogeneous policy in such conditions, and that they would be glad to be favoured with the considered views of the Dominions, before a step is taken which may be fraught with serious consequences to the unity of the Empire.

5. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald doubts the advisability of communicating to the Government of the Irish Free State the printed correspondence referred to in paragraph 5 of your letter under reply. There appears to be no necessity for it. In any case, the Foreign Office telegrams which contain records of confidential communications with the United States Government would have to be omitted. The print is returned herewith, in accordance with your request.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 2nd April, 1924.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 28th ultimo§ enclosing a draft despatch to the Governor-General of the Irish Free State respecting the proposed appointment of a representative of the Free State Government at Washington.

* No. 47. † See No. 52. ‡ See No. 51. § No. 48.

2. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald concurs in the terms of this despatch except as regards the passage in paragraph 6, which runs as follows: "and it was part of the understanding that the Canadian Government . . . so that there might be constant interchange of views on matters of common concern." As stated in the letter from this Department of the 20th ultimo,* the Secretary of State considers that any Irish Free State Minister at Washington should be entirely independent of His Majesty's Embassy, as it is clearly impossible for His Majesty's Government to accept responsibility for action over which they would in fact have no control. In the circumstances the passage referred to would convey to the Irish Free State Government a misleading impression of the relations which Mr. Ramsay MacDonald feels should exist between the Minister and the Embassy.

3. The Secretary of State further considers it very advisable that a paragraph should be added to the draft pointing out that the Irish Free State Minister would have the rank of a Minister Plenipotentiary and not that of an Envoy Extraordinary, and that he would be precluded by the recommendations of the recent Imperial Conference from negotiating or signing treaties with the United States without previous consultation with the governments of other parts of the Empire, such consultation taking place through the Government of the Irish Free State and His Majesty's Government and not between the Irish Free State Minister at Washington and His Majesty's Embassy.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 14th April, 1924.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald to refer to Mr. Curtis' conversation with Mr. Warner on the 9th instant respecting the question of the representation of the Irish Free State in Washington, when Mr. Curtis left for consideration a revised draft despatch to the Governor-General of the Irish Free State and a revised draft telegram to the Governments of the other Dominions in regard to the matter.

2. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald adheres to the view expressed in the letter of this Department of the 2nd instant† that the Irish Free State Minister at Washington should be entirely independent of His Majesty's Embassy, as it is clearly impossible for His Majesty's Government to accept responsibility for action over which they would in fact have no control. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald can, therefore, only concur in the terms of the revised draft despatch to Mr. Healy subject to the omission of the following passage in paragraph 5: "and it was part of the understanding . . . in the change of views of matters of common concern."

3. The draft despatch to Mr. Healy and the draft telegram to the Dominions, in which Mr. Ramsay MacDonald concurs, are returned herewith.

I am, &c.,

Having regard to arrangements made between His Majesty's Government and Canadian Government in 1920 with a view to special representation of Canadian interests at Washington, and to express provision in Article 2 of Irish Treaty specifically assimilating constitutional position of Irish Free State to that of Canada His Majesty's Government are ready to approach United States Government with a view to appointment of a Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington with credentials from His Majesty and a letter of appointment from Government of Irish Free State. They think it desirable, however, that, before communication is made to United States Government, Governments of the other Dominions should be made acquainted with contemplated action and should be given an opportunity of offering any observations if they wish to do so. SIR,

Downing Street, 24th April, 1924.

WITH further reference to Your Excellency's despatch No. 79 of the 3rd March* regarding the representation of the Irish Free State at Washington, I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have taken this matter into very careful consideration in the light of the arrangements made with the Canadian Government in 1920 for the special representation of Canadian interests at Washington, and of the discussions on the subject which have since taken place.

2. In view of the constitutional precedent established by the agreement with the Canadian Government, His Majesty's Government are ready to approach the United States Government with a view to the appointment of a Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington with credentials from His Majesty, and a letter of appointment from the Government of the Irish Free State.

3. His Majesty's Government feel, however, that, in view not only of the special interest of the Canadian Government in this matter but also of the interest of the Dominion Governments generally in matters connected with the representation of the interests of the Empire in foreign countries, it is important that the other Dominion Governments should be informed of the contemplated action and should be given an opportunity of offering any observations, if they wish to do so.

4. I have therefore addressed to the Governments of the other self-governing Dominions a telegram† of which a copy is enclosed herewith.

5. In this connexion I enclose, as showing the nature of the arrangement made with the Canadian Government, copies of a statement‡ made in the House of Commons on the 10th May, 1920, and of the Draft Credentials§ which it was contemplated would be issued to the Canadian Minister when appointed. It will be noted that it was contemplated that the Canadian representative should hold the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary but not of Envoy Extraordinary. It will also be observed that in the statement made in the House of Commons stress was laid on the fact that the new arrangement would not denote any departure from the principle of diplomatic unity of the Empire. It is assumed that it is your Ministers' intention that a similar position should obtain in the present case.

6. It is also assumed that it is your Ministers' intention that any questions which may arise as regards the negotiation and signature of Treaties with the United States will be dealt with in accordance with the Resolution on the subject adopted by the Imperial Conference of 1923 (pages 13 and 14 of Cmd. 1987).

My Prime Minister asks me to inform you in reply that he has always understood that the authority granted by His Majesty's Government for special representation of Canadian interests at Washington was consequent upon entirely exceptional conditions created by non-existence of any natural boundaries dividing Canada from the United States and was not to be admitted as a precedent in the future. The Prime Minister is strongly of opinion that if the present proposal is given effect to the first step towards disruption of the Empire will have been taken. It is essential that all territories of the Crown should be united in their relations to Foreign Powers, and he believes that union can only be maintained by a single representative of the Crown in every foreign capital. He is, therefore, unable to support the proposal.—JELlicoe.

9TH MAY. Confidential. Your telegram of 22nd April.* Representation of the Irish Free State in the United States of America. My Ministers represent that when special representation of Canada at Washington was agreed to it was stated in Colonial Office telegram of 10th May, 1920,† that the new arrangement would not denote any departure from the principle of diplomatic unity of the Empire, and that the need for this step arose out of the peculiarly close relations that had always existed between the people of Canada and those of the United States.

My Ministers are unaware of any special relations or interests between the Irish Free State and the United States. Consequently, while the step now proposed does not involve any new constitutional principle it does involve the question of expediency because the logical consequence would be for every Dominion to have Minister Plenipotentiary in every British Embassy. This, unless properly safeguarded, might have serious effect on diplomatic unity.

Proposed step, therefore, is important enough to deserve fuller discussion between Britain and the Dominions before effect is given to it. Recent Imperial Conference afforded opportunity for such discussion which was not availed of. It is difficult to carry on inter-Empire discussion by correspondence, and as no urgency is apparent my Ministers suggest that the matter might await the next Conference.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

SIR,

WITH reference to the letter from this Department of the 9th of May* and previous correspondence regarding the special representation of the Irish Free State at Washington, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Thomas to transmit to you, to be laid before Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald, the accompanying copy of a telegram† from the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia.

2. I am also to enclose draft replies‡ to this telegram and to the telegram from the Governor-General of New Zealand of the 3rd of May,§ together with the draft of a further despatch¶ to the Governor-General of the Irish Free State. Mr. Thomas would be glad to know as soon as possible whether Mr. Ramsay MacDonald concurs in the terms of the draft telegrams and of the draft despatch.

3. I am to take this opportunity of stating that whilst, in deference to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's wishes, Mr. Thomas agreed to the omissions proposed in your letter of the 14th of April,|| he did so on the assumption that, as the terms of the despatch to the Irish Free State would, even after the omissions, indicate the view of His Majesty's Government that the new departure should not affect the principle of the diplomatic unity of the Empire, the question how best that unity could be maintained would become mainly one of procedure. Mr. Thomas still feels that it would be undesirable, and indeed impossible in practice, for the Irish Free State Minister at Washington to be entirely independent of His Majesty's Embassy, and he is confirmed in this view by the replies to his telegram of the 22nd of April.¶ Mr. Thomas would be glad to have an opportunity of discussing the questions involved with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald personally, when the arrangements for the appointment of an Irish Free State representative at Washington have further advanced.

DRAFT TELEGRAM TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL, COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.*

CONFIDENTIAL. Your telegram of 9th May.*

His Majesty's Government would certainly not demur to suggestion of Commonwealth Government that general question arising out of proposal for special representation of Irish Free State at Washington should be discussed at next Imperial Conference. But they do not think it is possible to defer action on Irish Free State request pending opportunity for such discussion. There is close interrelation between Irish Free State and United States on account of number of American citizens (now estimated at some sixteen millions) who are of Irish origin. Existence of this population reinforces argument from commercial and financial relations referred to in my telegram of 22nd April.† On receipt of request of Free State Government, His Majesty's Government called their attention to stress laid in 1920 on fact that Canadian arrangement would not denote any departure from principle of diplomatic unity and stated that they assumed it was intention of Free State Government that similar position should obtain in present case.

Government of the Irish Free State have replied that they do not apprehend that the principle of diplomatic unity in the British Commonwealth will be affected inasmuch as the proposed Irish Minister will represent the Irish Free State for the purposes of its particular interests only. Free State Government further state that questions which may arise regarding the negotiation and signature of treaties with the United States will be dealt with in accordance with resolutions of Imperial Conference 1923.

I am sending by mail copies of correspondence with other Dominions, including Irish Free State, and will also let the Commonwealth Government know as soon as communication made to United States Government.

DRAFT TELEGRAM TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF NEW ZEALAND.

CONFIDENTIAL. Your telegram of 3rd May.‡ Representation of Irish Free State at Washington. It is quite true that increasing importance of Canadian interests in United States, due largely to geographical reasons, led to 1920 arrangements for special Canadian representation at Washington, but as indicated in my telegram of 22nd April† special interests of Irish Free State both commercial and financial in United States are also very considerable and in the circumstances His Majesty's Government felt that under Article 2 of Irish Treaty they would be bound to act on request of Irish Free State Government for representation at Washington similar to that contemplated in case of Canada.

As regards last part of your message would you please inform your Prime Minister that on receipt of request of Free State Government His Majesty's Government called their attention to fact that in statement made in House of Commons as to Canadian representation at Washington (see my telegram of 10th May, 1920§) stress was laid on fact that new arrangements did not denote any departure from principle of diplomatic unity of British Empire, and stated that they assumed it was intention of Irish Free State Government that a similar position should obtain in the present case. Government of the Irish Free State have replied that they do not apprehend that the principle of diplomatic unity in the British Commonwealth will be affected inasmuch as the proposed Irish Minister will represent the Irish Free State for the purposes of its particular interests only. 2. Your Ministers will observe from this correspondence that in replying to the telegrams from Australia and New Zealand, His Majesty's Government have alluded to the statement in the third paragraph of your despatch under acknowledgment that the proposed Irish Minister will represent the Irish Free State for the purpose of its particular interests only, and that they do not apprehend that the principle of diplomatic unity in the Empire will be affected. His Majesty's Government are glad to learn that it is common ground between themselves and your Ministers that this principle should be maintained.

3. His Majesty's Government also note that questions which may arise regarding negotiation and signature of treaties with the United States will be dealt with in accordance with the resolutions of the Imperial Conference.

4. His Majesty's Government have now under consideration the terms of the communication to be addressed to the Government of the United States. I hope to be in a position to send a further despatch to you on this subject at an early date.

SIR, Foreign Office, S.W.1, 28th May, 1924.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald to refer you to your letters of 17th May and 24th May,§ regarding the special representation of the Irish Free State at Washington.

2. I am to say that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald gladly concurs in the suggestion of the Secretary of State for the Colonies for a personal discussion of the questions involved. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald considers, however, it essential that the discussion should take place at the earliest possible moment, rather than, as proposed by Mr. Thomas, when the arrangements for the appointment of an Irish Free State representative have further advanced. Mr. Ramsay MacDonald would propose to be accompanied by the Permanent Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and would be glad if Mr. Thomas could arrange to be accompanied by the Permanent Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, or by the Assistant Under-Secretary acting for him. I am to request that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald may be informed of the earliest date at which it would be convenient for Mr. Thomas to arrange a meeting.

3. In the meantime, I am to transmit, for the consideration of Mr. Thomas, a memorandum prepared in this department as a first statement of the Foreign Office views on the subject.

4. In view of the present divergence between the two departments, and amongst the Governments of the Empire, on important points, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald regrets that he is unable to concur in the despatch of the draft telegrams to the Governments of New Zealand and Australia, and of the draft despatch to the Irish Free State Government which were enclosed in your letters, until he has had an opportunity of discussing this question with Mr. Thomas.

Enclosure in No. 60.

SEPARATE DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATION AT WASHINGTON OF THE IRISH FREE STATE.

By the Articles of Agreement 1, 2 and 3 of the Irish Free State Agreement, the status of the Irish Free State "in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government and otherwise shall be that of the Dominion of Canada."

The Canadian Government was granted the right of separate diplomatic representation at Washington in 1920, though for reasons known to Colonial Office they have not availed themselves of the arrangement offered them.

The right of the Irish Free State to separate representation has on these grounds been agreed to in principle by the Governments of Canada and South Africa as well as by His Majesty's Government, but objected to by that of New Zealand, which states that Canada's right was granted owing to special local conditions, and that it was not to be admitted as a precedent. The Australian Government emphasize the fact that His Majesty's Government informed them that the arrangement with regard to Canada would not denote departure from the principle of the diplomatic unity of the Empire, and that the peculiarly close relations between Canada and the United States were the grounds for the concession. They see no special relations or interests between the Irish Free State and the United States. The present proposal, while not in their eyes involving a new constitutional principle, involves a question of expediency, since logically it implies, in their opinion, special representation of every Dominion in every capital. And this they hold may seriously affect diplomatic unity unless properly safeguarded. They see no urgency for granting the Irish Free State request and desire discussion of the whole question at the next Imperial Conference.

It is true that the special interests and local geographical conditions as between Canada and the United States were the grounds given for granting her request to separate representation. It was, therefore, held that the Irish Free State was in principle entitled to a similar concession if it could be shown that she had special interests in the United States. These are given by the Irish Free State and the Colonial Office as (1) financial and commercial; (2) the question of emigration; and (3) the somewhat novel ground that there are in the United States 16,000,000 United States citizens of Irish extraction whose feelings towards the British Empire would, it is urged, be improved by the presence at Washington of an Irish Minister.

(1) and (2) have been accepted by His Majesty's Government as sufficient justification for granting the Irish Free State's demand, though these considerations are not "special" to Ireland. It has, therefore, been decided that His Majesty's Government would be ready to approach the United States Government with a view to the appointment of an Irish Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington.

There is divergency of opinion between the Foreign Office and Colonial Office, and amongst the Dominion Governments, on two main points.

- (1) The question of preservation of the diplomatic unity of the Empire.
- (2) The question of the urgency for granting the Irish Free State's request.

As regards (1) it was stated at the time that the arrangements for Canadian representation at Washington would not denote any departure either on the part of the British Government or of the Canadian Government from the principle of diplomatic unity in the British Empire, and the Colonial Office position is that "it was a part of the understanding with the Canadian Government that there should be the closest connexion between the Canadian Minister and His Majesty's Ambassador so that there might be constant interchange of views on matters of common concern." All departments and governments concerned agree as to the necessity of not in any way impairing the diplomatic unity of the Empire, but there is disagreement as to method. The Colonial Office view is given above, Canada probably, and South Africa possibly, concur.

The position of the Foreign Office, however, is that close connexion of the kind desired by the Colonial Office, especially in the case now under consideration, can only lead to friction and difficulties and produce a result opposite to that desired. It is felt that it is impossible for His Majesty's Government to accept responsibility for action over which they would have no control. For this reason the Colonial Office, at the Foreign Office request, omitted from their despatch to the Irish Free State any reference to a close connexion between His Majesty's Ambassador and a Free State Minister; but they now state that such a reference was only omitted on the assumption that the question how best diplomatic unity could be maintained would become mainly one of procedure, and they maintain their view that close communication is essential. They support their view by a reference to those expressed by the Dominion Governments, but from the telegrams it seems clear that any approval of the desirability for diplomatic unity expressed by the Dominions only refers to the general principle and not to the method of applying it. The New Zealand and Australian Governments in fact see in the very appointment of an Irish Minister a grave danger to diplomatic unity. The former do not refer to the question of the relationship of the Irish Free State representative to His Majesty's Ambassador; while the latter, in objecting to the proposal as involving special representation of every Dominion in every foreign country, specifically presume the presence of the Dominion Minister in the British Mission, i.e., they look on the close connexion desired by Colonial Office with disfavour. New Zealand refuses its support to the whole proposal on the ground that it would be the first step towards disruption of the Empire. Australia urges that the whole matter should be held over for discussion at the next Imperial Conference.

(2) The question of urgency is thus raised. The Irish Free State stated that the appointment of a Free State representative is a matter of great urgency, citing as questions which need immediate settlement a solution of the financial and immigration questions affecting them. Although the financial question may still be pressing, with regard to immigration there would appear to be no longer any urgency, since the matter has been taken out of the hands of the Irish Free State (or any foreign) Government by the passage of an Immigration Act which settles the United States regulations for three years—not to mention the jealousy with which Congress regards any representations on the subject. The question of urgency is thus disposed of, except from the purely internal Irish point of view, which is by no means the only factor in the case.

It was further urged in the earlier stages of the discussion of this question that Free State representation should not be granted till it was known what form Canadian representation would take, since the position should be maintained that what Ireland is entitled to is what Canada enjoys; what Canada, however, enjoys at the present time is ill-defined; as pointed out above she has not availed herself of the proposal made by His Majesty's Government because she has found it unworkable.

Attitude of the United States Government.

It is clear from the information in possession of the Foreign Office that the United States Government do not regard with any enthusiasm the appointment of an Irish Minister, entailing as it probably would the appointments of the Ministers of all the Dominions. In this connexion it may also be added that there has been recently considerable recrudescence of Irish Republican propaganda in the United States.

into the matter the Prime Minister, who, as you know, is also Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on the 28th May asked me to discuss with him at the earliest possible date certain details which required to be settled between the two Offices. Owing to my illness I was unable to take up the matter till I returned to this Office on Monday the 16th instant. On going into the papers we find that there are a number of points of detail which call for arrangement not only between your Government and ours but between various departments here. In these circumstances I am convinced that the only way of reaching the early settlement you desire, and to which you are entitled, is to adopt the procedure practised with so much success when complicated arrangements had to be made in the days of the Provisional Government. That procedure, as I am informed, was for representatives of the Irish Government, including Ministers, to thrash out all the details with representatives of the various departments concerned here in personal conference. The results as agreed were reduced to writing on the spot. Where agreement could not be reached the matter was at once taken up direct between British and Irish Ministers, brought to an issue, and the agreements arrived at remitted where necessary for immediate confirmation by both Cabinets.

The principle in this case is not at issue, for, as you will remember, I informed the Governor-General in my despatch of the 24th April* that "His Majesty's Government are ready to approach the United States Government with a view to the appointment of a Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington with credentials from His Majesty and a letter of appointment from the Government of the Irish Free State."

The practical points which require to be settled in approaching the Government of the United States can, I am sure, be disposed of by personal conference in fewer days than the weeks which will be taken if we proceed by correspondence.

If you agree to adopt this procedure, I shall be glad to arrange for the Conference at the earliest possible date. If you think it desirable to make a public statement on the matter, by all means do so at once.

Yours, &c.,
J. H. THOMAS.

On receipt of request of Free State Government, His Majesty's Government called their attention to stress laid in 1920 on fact that Canadian arrangement would not denote any departure from principle of diplomatic unity, and stated that they assumed it was intention of Free State Government that similar position should obtain in present case.

Government of the Irish Free State have replied that they do not apprehend that the principle of diplomatic unity in the British Commonwealth will be affected inasmuch as the proposed Irish Minister will represent the Irish Free State for the purposes of its particular interests only. TELEGRAM.

CONFIDENTIAL. Your telegram of 3rd May.‡ Representation of Irish Free State at Washington. It is quite true that increasing importance of Canadian interests in United States, due largely to geographical reasons, led to 1920 arrangements for special Canadian representation at Washington, but, as indicated in my telegram of 22nd April,* special interests of Irish Free State, both commercial and financial, in United States are also very considerable, and in the circumstances His Majesty's Government felt that under Article 2 of Irish Treaty they would be bound to act on request of Irish Free State Government for representation at Washington similar to that contemplated in case of Canada.

As regards last part of your message, would you please inform your Prime Minister that, on receipt of request of Free State Government, His Majesty's Government called their attention to fact that in statement made in House of Commons as to Canadian representation at Washington (see my telegram of 10th May, 1920§), stress was laid on fact that new arrangements did not denote any departure from principle of diplomatic unity of British Empire, and stated that they assumed it was intention of Irish Free State Government that a similar position should obtain in the present case. In continuation of my Confidential despatch of the 9th of June,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, copies of telegrams† which have now been sent to the Governments of the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand on the subject of the special representation of the Irish Free State at Washington.

2. You will observe that in these telegrams His Majesty's Government have alluded to the statement in the third paragraph of your Confidential despatch of the 16th of May,‡ that the proposed Irish Minister will represent the Irish Free State for the purpose of its particular interests only, and that they do not apprehend that the principle of diplomatic unity in the Empire will be affected. His Majesty's Government are glad to learn that it is common ground between themselves and your Ministers that this principle should be maintained.

3. His Majesty's Government also note that questions which may arise regarding negotiation and signature of treaties with the United States will be dealt with in accordance with the resolutions of the Imperial Conference.

4. In order to give effect to the undertakings of His Majesty's Government under the Treaty, in its public declarations and in the correspondence which has taken place, some important details require to be settled. For this purpose it has been agreed that personal conference would be the most expeditious and satisfactory procedure; and I am awaiting the visit of the Minister of External Affairs to-morrow morning, 21st June.

MR. C. W. DIXON.

It was made clear at the outset that, while the British Government had undertaken to approach the United States Government with a view to the appointment of a Free State Minister at Washington, and would use their best endeavours to obtain the concurrence of the United States Government, it was not possible to give any guarantee that the latter would accept the proposal. Mr. Fitzgerald stated that this was fully understood.

As regards the status of the Free State Representative the following conclusions were reached:—

1. While the Free State Minister would be the official channel of communication with the United States Government for dealing with matters exclusively affecting the Free State, the principles of the resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1923 as to the negotiation, signature and ratification of Treaties, and in particular of that part of the Resolution which relates to the conduct of matters affecting more than one part of the Empire would apply generally to all questions with which he dealt. The Ambassador would in the same way keep the Irish Free State Minister informed of any matters which might affect the Irish Free State. If any doubt should arise whether any particular question exclusively concerned the Free State, the point would, if possible, be settled by consultation between the Free State Minister and the British Ambassador. If the matter could not be settled by such consultation, it would be referred to the British Government and the Free State Government.

2. In order to meet the possibility that any particular question might in its initial stages be exclusively of concern to the Free State and might subsequently prove to be of concern to other parts of the Empire, the Free State Minister would keep in close contact with the British Ambassador.

* Nos. 63 and 65. † No. 68. ‡ Nos. 66 and 67.

3. While the Free State Minister would not purport to deal with matters affecting the Empire as a whole, the assistance of the British Ambassador and the Embassy staff would always be at his disposal, if desired. The Ambassador would not, however, be in any way responsible for action taken by the Free State Minister, nor would the latter be in any way subject to the Ambassador's control.

As regards the credentials to be issued (see draft furnished to the Free State Government in the Secretary of State's Confidential despatch of the 24th April*) Mr. Fitzgerald asked for consideration of the following points:—

(1) Whether in His Majesty's title in the heading to the draft credentials retention of the words "United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland" was essential whilst the law remains as at present.

(2) Whether some formula might be found in place of the words "to attach him to our Embassy" in the first paragraph of the draft.

(3) Whether in view of the practice as regards certain documents relating to the negotiation, signature and ratification of Treaties, the counter-signature of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was necessary.

Mr. Fitzgerald agreed that it was desirable that a copy of the letter of instructions issued to the Free State Minister at Washington should be communicated to the British Government. Sir C. Hurst expressed a similar opinion as regards any instructions sent to the British Ambassador.

As regards the method of raising the matter with the United States Government, Mr. Fitzgerald stated that the Free State Government would prefer that a formal communication should be made to the United States Government without any preliminary informal inquiry.

It was agreed that the draft of the necessary communication to the United States Government should be prepared for consideration at a further meeting to be held on Monday the 23rd June, at 5 p.m.

THE drafts of three telegrams from the Foreign Office to the British Ambassador at Washington (Annexures A,† B,‡ and C§) were communicated to Mr. Fitzgerald, who expressed his general concurrence in their terms. Mr. Fitzgerald circulated the draft of a proposed letter of instructions from the Irish Free State Government to Professor Smiddy (Annexure D§). Sir C. Hurst and Mr. Warner, on behalf of the Foreign Office, expressed general concurrence in its terms.

It was agreed that, in the event of publication of papers becoming necessary, there would be no objection to the publication of the text of the telegrams forming Annexures B and C, but that the text of the telegram forming Annexure A and the letter (Annexure D) should not be published. It was understood that, in the event of either Government desiring to publish the text of the telegrams, the other would be consulted before publication took place.

As regards the three questions raised by Mr. Fitzgerald at the meeting on the 21st June as to the form of the draft credentials, Sir C. Hurst stated the position as follows:—

(1) Whilst the law remains as at present the omission from the King's title of the words "United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland" would not be feasible.

(2) There would be no objection to the omission from the first paragraph of the draft credentials of the words "and to attach him to our Embassy." The paragraph would then read "We have judged it expedient to confer the rank of Minister Plenipotentiary upon . . . with the especial object of representing in the United States of America the interests of Our Irish Free State."

(3) The counter-signature of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was not considered necessary. It was proposed to alter the general practice in this respect.

In reply to an inquiry by Mr. Fitzgerald, Sir C. Hurst stated that the appointment of a Minister Plenipotentiary, who was not also Envoy Extraordinary, was not unusual.

No. 74.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES (LORD ARNOLD): My Lords, the noble Earl has put down on the Paper three specific Questions regarding the representation of the Irish Free State at Washington. In my reply I shall confine myself to the first two of these Questions, and the third, which falls more naturally within the purview of the Foreign Office, will be dealt with by my noble and learned friend, the Lord President of the Council.

The noble Earl's first Question is whether it is correct that a Minister representing the Irish Free State will shortly be appointed to Washington, and that His Majesty's Government has raised no objection to such an appointment. I am not yet in a position to say that the Irish Free State will be represented by a Minister at Washington, inasmuch as the views of the United States Government on this proposal have not yet been ascertained; but His Majesty's Government have instructed the British Ambassador at Washington to inform the United States Government that they have come to the conclusion that it is desirable that the conduct of matters at Washington exclusively relating to the Irish Free State should be confided to a Minister Plenipotentiary accredited to the United States, and they trust that this proposal will be found acceptable to the United States Government.

The noble Earl's second Question is under what clause of the Irish Treaty will this appointment be made. I am not prepared to admit that it is necessary that every development in the constitutional relations between the Irish Free State and this country should be specifically provided for in the Treaty; it is sufficient that any such development should not be contrary to the Treaty: but in fact this proposal is by implication clearly covered by Article 2 of the Treaty, which provides that the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government and otherwise shall be that of the Dominion of Canada. It will be within the recollection of your Lordships that on 10th May, 1920, the then Lord Privy Seal, Mr. Bonar Law, announced in another place that an arrangement had been concluded between the British and Canadian Governments to provide more complete representation at Washington of Canadian interests than had hitherto existed, and that it had been accordingly agreed that His Majesty, on the advice of His Canadian Ministers, should appoint a Minister Plenipotentiary who would have charge of Canadian affairs and would at all times be the ordinary channel of communication with the United States Government in matters of purely Canadian concern, acting upon instructions from, and reporting direct to, the Canadian Government. The principle of distinctive representation at Washington having been agreed to in 1920 in the case of Canada, it must clearly, under the terms of Article 2 of the Treaty, be regarded as inherent in the constitutional status of the Irish Free State; and even had His Majesty's Government not been convinced that the appointment of such a Minister was desirable in itself, they would have felt bound, in view of the Canadian precedent and the terms of the Treaty, to agree to make proposals to the United States Government in the sense desired by the Government of the Irish Free State.

But I should, as I have already suggested, be unwilling that your Lordships should suppose that this proposal has been made to the United States Government solely as an automatic result of the Treaty and without consideration of its intrinsic merits. The proposal for the distinctive representation of Canada at Washington was made in consideration of the great and special importance of Canadian interests in the United States; and this consideration applies with almost equal force to the case of the Irish Free State. It is true that the Canadian Government has not yet availed itself of the arrangement made in 1920, but this does not affect the principle. The direct and particular interests of the Irish Free State in the United States are such that His Majesty's Government concur with the Government of the Irish Free State in thinking that these interests can be most conveniently handled by a Minister of their own. It is clearly understood that the powers of the Irish Free State Minister are strictly limited to matters and interests relating exclusively to the Irish Free State.

LORD PARMOOR: My Lords, it will probably be convenient if I reply to the third Question asked by the noble Earl. It is one of great importance as regards our diplomatic relations in the future, and I have been asked to answer it directly on behalf of the Foreign Office. I appreciate the difficulties to which the noble Earl has referred, but I hope I shall be able to show by the answer that they have been provided against to a great extent. You can have no absolute provision against all possible complications, but in this case every possible provision will be made, and I do not think any difficulty will, in fact, arise. The noble Earl's third Question is:

"What steps His Majesty's Government propose to take to harmonize the representations of the British Ambassador and of the Free State Minister in respect of matters which concern both Great Britain and Ireland or the whole British Empire."

My noble friend who has just spoken has indicated in his reply that the powers of the Irish Free State Minister will be confined strictly to matters relating exclusively to the Irish Free State.

I desire to explain a little more fully, on behalf of the Foreign Office, the arrangements which it is proposed to make if the United States Government agree to the proposals made to them by His Majesty's Government in this matter and agrees to accept a Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington representing the interests of the Irish Free State. As the noble Lord has already pointed out, that step has not yet been taken on behalf of the United States. If, then, the United States Government concur in the proposals, the Irish Free State Minister will receive his credentials in the usual manner from His Majesty, his letter of appointment being issued by the Free State Government. Both documents will make it clear that his appointment is for the purpose of dealing with matters especially affecting the Irish Free State. The principle of the Resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1923 as to the negotiation, signature and ratification of Treaties, and in particular of that part of the Resolution which relates to the conduct of matters affecting more than one part of the Empire, will apply generally to all questions with which the Minister deals. If any doubt should arise whether any particular question exclusively concerned the Free State, the point would, if possible, be settled by consultation between the Free State Minister and the Ambassador, and, if the matter could not be settled by such consultation, it would be referred by the Ambassador and the Minister to their respective Governments.

In order to meet the possibility that any particular question might in its initial stages be exclusively of concern to the Free State and might subsequently prove to be of concern to other parts of the Empire, explicit instructions will be issued by the Free State Government to the Minister that he is to keep in close touch with the Ambassador, and corresponding instructions will be issued to the Ambassador by His Majesty's Government.

These arrangements are designed with the view of limiting the representative of the Free State to Irish questions only, and have been agreed as the result of personal consultation between the representatives of His Majesty's Government and Mr. Fitzgerald, the Minister for External Affairs of the Irish Free State, who has recently been in London for the purpose of such consultation.

Before I sit down I should wish to refer to a matter which has already been touched upon by my noble friend, Lord Arnold—namely, the effect which this proposal will have upon the very important principle of the diplomatic unity of the Empire. In the instructions issued to His Majesty's Ambassador it has been made clear that these proposals do not denote any departure from this principle. While, on the one hand, it should be understood that the Irish Free State Minister will take his instructions solely from his own Government, so that the Minister will not be under the control of the Ambassador nor will the Ambassador be responsible for what is done by the Minister, on the other hand, the Minister will not be concerned with Imperial questions. His Majesty's Government are confident that this appointment will strengthen cordial relations with the United States without in any way impairing the principle, to which His Majesty's Government attach the greatest importance, of the diplomatic unity of the whole of the British Empire.

(No. 181 (R).)

PLEASE make the communication contained in my immediately succeeding telegram to the United States Government and express the hope that they will concur in the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister at Washington on the footing therein indicated.

I must explain to Your Excellency that the close and peculiar relations between the people of the Irish Free State and those of the United States have convinced His Majesty's Government that the Irish Free State should be represented in some distinctive manner, and as you were informed in my despatch No. 764 of 8th May I promised the Irish Free State that His Majesty's Government would approach the United States Government with a view to securing the appointment of a Minister Plenipotentiary with credentials from the King and a letter of appointment from the Irish Free State.

It is confidently hoped that this step will promote the maintenance and development of cordial relations between the British Empire and the United States.

(Sent 10.45 p.m., 23rd June, 1924.)

(No. 182 (R).)

My immediately preceding telegram.

His Majesty's Government have come to the conclusion that it is desirable that the handling of matters at Washington exclusively relating to the Irish Free State should be confided to a Minister Plenipotentiary accredited to the United States Government. They hope that the latter will concur in the appointment of a Minister for this purpose. He would be accredited by His Majesty to the President and he would be furnished with credentials which would enable him to take charge of all affairs relating only to the Irish Free State. He would be the ordinary channel of communication with the United States Government on these matters.

Matters which are of Imperial concern or which affect other Dominions in common with the Irish Free State will continue to be handled as heretofore by the Embassy.

The proposed arrangement would not denote any departure from the principle of the diplomatic unity of the Empire. The Irish Free State Minister would at all times be in close touch with the Ambassador, and any question which may arise as to whether a matter falls within the category of those to be handled by the Irish Free State Minister or not would be settled by consultation between them. In matters falling within his sphere the Irish Free State Minister would not be subject to the Ambassador's control, nor would the Ambassador be responsible for the Minister's actions.

On questions such as the precedence to be attributed to the Irish Free State Minister, or on other points which they may desire to raise, His Majesty's Government will await the views of the United States Government.

Enclosure in No. 76.

TELEGRAM TO SIR E. HOWARD (WASHINGTON) FROM THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Sent 9.45 p.m., 23rd June, 1924.)

(No. 180. Confidential.)

FOR your confidential information.

It has been found necessary to instruct you to approach the United States Government at once with regard to the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister Plenipotentiary at Washington without prior informal conversations, because His Majesty's Government promised the Irish Free State Government that they would approach the United States Government on the subject and from the point of view of the stability of the Irish Free State this undertaking must be fulfilled. We cannot run the risk of the United States Government making it clear, when sounded unofficially, that the proposal would be rejected by them, as, if so, His Majesty's Government could not put the proposal forward officially.

It is hoped that the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister will strengthen and consolidate the position of the Irish Free State.

The basis on which the appointment will be made and which will control the future relations between you and the Irish Free State Minister will be the principle underlying the treaty resolutions of the Imperial Conference in October last. (See Lord Curzon's circular despatch of 26th December, 1923.) It would follow that:

(a) Matters exclusively affecting Irish affairs will be under the control of the Irish Free State Minister.

(b) The question whether a matter relates exclusively to Irish Free State or not will not be decided by the Irish Free State Minister alone, but will be decided in consultation with the Ambassador; if they are unable to come to an agreement, the point must be decided by the two Governments concerned in consultation.

(c) There must be no attempt by the Irish Free State Minister to deal with Imperial affairs or with affairs concerning some Dominion other than Irish Free State; on these matters the Ambassador will take the necessary action in accordance with the existing practice.

(d) The Irish Free State Minister will be entitled to the benefit of the help and advice of the Ambassador and of the staff of the Embassy, but the Ambassador will not be in any way responsible for what is done by the Irish Free State Minister, nor will the Irish Free State Minister be in any way under the control of the Ambassador.

The extent to which this help and advice can be given will depend very largely on the personal relations between the two men and upon their personal characteristics. It cannot be ensured by instructions conveyed in official documents. If the Irish Free State Minister plays the game, he may be quite certain of receiving all the help the Ambassador can give.

Close contact between the Ambassador and the Minister is essential. This can be achieved without the Minister being dependent on or controlled by the Ambassador. The instructions which will be issued to the Irish Free State Minister are intended to ensure this.

My telegrams Nos. 181 and 182 contain instructions regarding communication to be made to United States Government.

It is not proposed to give the Minister the rank of Envoy Extraordinary.

MR. BALDWIN (by Private Notice) asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether he has any statement to make on the question of the representation of the Irish Free State at Washington?

MR. THOMAS: As I informed the House on Monday, His Majesty's Government have been asked by the Irish Free State to request the Government of the United States to receive a Minister Plenipotentiary accredited by His Majesty to the President, and furnished with credentials enabling him to take charge of all affairs relating only to the Irish Free State. I must remind the House that His Majesty's Government agreed to a similar application from the Canadian Government in 1920. We are bound by the Treaty as made by our predecessors and ratified by Parliament to give the Irish Free State the same facilities which would be given to the other Dominions. The request from the Irish Free State was clearly within the terms of Article 2 of the Treaty, and His Majesty's Government had no hesitation in agreeing to the principle. A communication to that effect was sent to the Governments of the other Dominions.

A number of details remained to be settled, and as the Government of the Irish Free State, in view of the magnitude of interests of the Free State in the United States and of the urgency of certain questions, were anxious that the step should be taken at once, I suggested that the communication to be sent to His Majesty's Ambassador in Washington should be settled in personal consultation with the Free State Minister for External Affairs. As a result of these consultations, the Ambassador has been asked to approach the Government of the United States in the matter.

The proposal upon which we arrived at an agreement is that, while the Free State Minister would be the official channel of communication with the United States Government for dealing with matters exclusively affecting the Free State, the principle of the Resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1923 as to the negotiation, signature and ratification of Treaties and, in particular, of that part of the Resolution which relates to the conduct of matters affecting more than one part of the Empire, would apply generally to all questions with which he dealt. If any doubt should arise whether any particular question exclusively concerned the Free State, the point would, if possible, be settled by consultation between the Free State Minister and the Ambassador. If the matter could not be settled by such consultation, it would be referred to the British Government and the Free State Government.

In order to meet the possibility that any particular question might in its initial stages be exclusively of concern to the Free State, and might subsequently prove to be of concern to other parts of the Empire, the Free State Minister would keep in close contact with the Ambassador.

While the Free State Minister would not purport to deal with matters affecting the Empire as a whole, the assistance of the Ambassador and his staff would be at his disposal, if desired. The Ambassador would not, however, be in any way responsible for action taken by the Free State Minister, nor would the latter be in any way subject to the Ambassador's control.

In this, as in all other matters relating to Ireland, His Majesty's Government have been guided by the principles laid down by the Prime Minister in the first paragraph of the statement which he made to the House on the 4th June. As my right hon. Friend then said, the Irish question is no longer a matter at issue between parties in this House. To us on this side of the House, as to my hon. Friends opposite, the Treaty embodies a final settlement of Anglo-Irish relations, made once for all, with no ulterior purpose. I regret that the significance of these words has not been fully recognized.

There are people in both countries who continue to urge that demands for a Republic in Ireland, if made, should be conceded. Once for all, let it be understood that any such demand would receive from His Majesty's present advisers the same reply and no other than that which it would, I believe, have received from either of the two previous Governments which have been in office since the Treaty was signed. We shall carry out the letter and spirit of the Treaty ourselves as the Government of the Irish Free State has done in the past and as we look to all future Governments in the Free State to do in the future.

While the utterances to which I refer attract little attention in this country, they give rise to hopes and fears elsewhere which are not destined to be realized in fact. We believe that peace and friendship can be maintained with Ireland by the establishment of the Free State as a self-governing Dominion of the British Commonwealth and in no other way. It is for that reason that we are glad to see the Irish Free State assuming all the privileges to which she is entitled under the Treaty in common with Canada and the other Dominions.

TELEGRAM FROM SIR E. HOWARD (WASHINGTON) TO FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Received 9.0 a.m., 27th June, 1924.)

(No. (R).)

26TH JUNE. On the evening of 24th June, while at New York for the opening of democratic convention, I received a telegram from Mr. Brooks that a note to United States Government informing them that His Majesty's Government intended to appoint an Irish representative to Washington was on its way from Embassy summer quarters to Washington. I therefore left at once for Washington to present it personally.

As note had not arrived yesterday morning, I informed Mr. Hughes by telephone that it was on its way in order that he might not hear of it first by publication in press of statement made in Parliament. Note arrived this morning and I handed it to Secretary of State who authorized me to say that United States Government were quite in agreement with its contents and would receive Irish envoy with pleasure. I asked if he had any comments to make on question of precedence of envoy, and he said he presumed this would be settled by ordinary protocol. I pointed out that envoy would be minister plenipotentiary only, not envoy extraordinary. As regards question which might ultimately arise as to whether certain matters were within competence of Irish Legation or this Embassy he said these could only be settled as they arose, and it was no use to attempt to define them now. I agreed.

* No. 78. † No. 75. ‡ No. 78.

He inquired if United States Government could at once publish note and their agreement. I said it would be preferable not to publish text of note, but only a communiqué giving summary of important points. He agreed.

A CHARA,

Ministry of External Affairs, 25th June, 1924.

THE British Government has instructed His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington to present a formal request to the President of the United States to receive a Minister Plenipotentiary on behalf of the Irish Free State.

Should the American Government accede to this request, and agree to accept you in that capacity, Letters of Credence from His Majesty will be duly forwarded to you for presentation.

The Free State Minister will be the official channel of communication with the United States Government for matters exclusively affecting the interests of the Irish Free State.

Relations with His Majesty's Ambassador.

The Free State Minister shall not purport to deal with matters affecting the whole Commonwealth.

His Majesty's Ambassador shall be in no way responsible for action taken by the Free State Minister.

The Free State Minister shall not be in any way subject to His Majesty's Ambassador's control.

Instructions are being forwarded to His Majesty's Ambassador requesting him to afford his assistance and that of his staff to the Free State Minister.

In all matters affecting, or likely to affect, the other, or any other, States Members of the Commonwealth, the Irish Free State Minister shall consult with the Ambassador and inform him fully of the position.

If any doubt should arise as to whether any particular question exclusively concerned the Irish Free State the point should, if possible, be settled by consultation between the Irish Free State Minister and the British Ambassador. Failing settlement by such consultation it should be referred to the two Governments.

The Government desires that the frankest and most cordial relations should exist between the Free State Minister and His Majesty's Ambassador, and all steps should be taken to avoid any possible misunderstanding. For this reason, the instructions given above as to consultation should be interpreted in their widest sense. It may well happen that matters which in their initial stages appear to be of exclusively Irish interest may subsequently prove to be of concern to other parts of the Commonwealth. It would be well, therefore, to make it a general rule that it is better to inform the Ambassador of matters of apparently purely Irish concern rather than that he should not be consulted in a matter which might later have general interest.

Mise, le meas,

DESMOND FITZGERALD,

Minister for External Affairs.

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 24th June, 1924.

UNDER instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, I have the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government have come to the conclusion that it is desirable that the handling of matters at Washington exclusively relating to the Irish Free State should be confided to a Minister Plenipotentiary accredited to the United States Government. Such a Minister would be accredited by His Majesty The King to the President of the United States and he would be furnished with credentials which would enable him to take charge of all affairs relating only to the Irish Free State. He would be the ordinary channel of communication with the United States Government on these matters.

Matters which are of Imperial concern or which affect other Dominions in the Commonwealth in common with the Irish Free State will continue to be handled as heretofore by this Embassy.

The arrangements proposed by His Majesty's Government would not denote any departure from the principle of the diplomatic unity of the Empire. The Irish Minister would be at all times in the closest touch with His Majesty's Ambassador and any question which may arise as to whether a matter comes within the category of those to be handled by the Irish Minister or not would be settled by consultation between them. In matters falling within his sphere the Irish Minister would not be subject to the control of His Majesty's Ambassador nor would His Majesty's Ambassador be responsible for the Irish Minister's actions.

In communicating to you these proposals, which His Majesty's Government trust will promote the maintenance and development of cordial relations between the British Empire and the United States, I have been instructed to express the hope that the United States Government will concur in the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister at Washington on the footing I have indicated above. As regards questions such as the precedence to be attributed to the Irish Minister or any other points which the United States Government may desire to raise in connexion with the appointment, His Majesty's Government will await the views of the United States Government.

PRIVATE and Personal. I am being asked in House of Commons 6th July whether I can make any statement regarding the proposed appointment of a Canadian Minister at Washington, and propose to reply that I have seen the Press Report of your Prime Minister's statement in the Canadian House of Commons on 22nd June but that no official communication on the subject has yet been received by His Majesty's Government from the Canadian Government. Please let your Prime Minister know. Experience here in the case of the appointment of a Minister for the Irish Free State at Washington last year was that considerable time was needed for preparation of necessary communications to the United States Government and for completion of formalities on this side. (See Thomas's despatch Confidential (2) of 25th June, 1924,* and connected correspondence.) The Acting Prime Minister further submits that it is not in contemplation to adopt the provision of the Agreement effected in 1920 between the Government of Great Britain and the Government of Canada whereby the Canadian Minister was to be a Member of the British Embassy and to have charge, in the absence of the Ambassador, of the Embassy and of the representation of Imperial as well as of Canadian interests.

(No. 723.)

British Embassy, Washington, D.C.

SIR,

19th November, 1926.

UNDER instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, I have the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government have come to the conclusion that it is desirable that the handling of matters at Washington relating to Canada should be confided to an Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary accredited to the United States Government. Such a Minister would be accredited by His Majesty the King to the President of the United States and he would be furnished with credentials which would enable him to take charge of all affairs relating to Canada. He would be the ordinary channel of communication with the United States Government on these matters.

Matters which are of Imperial concern or which affect other Dominions in the Commonwealth in common with Canada will continue to be handled as heretofore by this Embassy.

The arrangements proposed by His Majesty's Government would not denote any departure from the principle of the diplomatic unity of the Empire. The Canadian Minister would be at all times in the closest touch with His Majesty's Ambassador and any question which may arise as to whether a matter comes within the category of those to be handled by the Canadian Minister or not would be settled by consultation between them. The Canadian Minister being responsible to the Canadian Government would not be subject to the control of His Majesty's Ambassador nor would His Majesty's Ambassador be responsible for the Canadian Minister's actions.

In communicating to you these proposals, which His Majesty's Government trust will promote the maintenance and development of cordial relations between the British Empire and the United States, I have been instructed to express the hope that the United States Government will concur in the appointment of a Canadian Minister at Washington on the footing I have indicated above. As regards questions such as the precedence to be attributed to the Canadian Minister or any other points which the United States Government may desire to raise in connexion with the appointment, His Majesty's Government will await the views of the United States Government.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your note No. 723 of 19th November, 1926, in which, under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, you advise me that His Majesty's Government have come to the conclusion that it is desirable that the handling of matters at Washington relating to Canada should be confided to an Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to be accredited by His Majesty the King to the President of the United States, and express the hope that the Government of the United States will concur in the appointment of a Canadian Minister at Washington on the footing indicated in your note.

In reply I take pleasure in saying that the appointment by His Majesty the King of an Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, who will be furnished with credentials which would enable him to take charge of all affairs relating to Canada, and who will be the ordinary channel of communication with the Government of the United States on these matters, is entirely acceptable to the Government of the United States, and that it will be agreeable to the President to accord him formal recognition at the convenience of His Majesty the King and the Government of Canada.

Note is taken of the arrangements outlined in your note under which the appointment would be made, as well as of your statement that as regards questions such as precedence to be attributed to the Minister or any other points which the Government of the United States may desire to raise in connexion with the appointment, His Majesty's Government will await the views of the Government of the United States.

Accept, &c.,

Begins: Following on conversation(s) which I had when in London with Mr. Macdonald and on more recent discussion(s) with Mr. Leeper of the British Foreign Office whose services were kindly placed at the disposal of the Commonwealth by the British Government, Mr. R. G. Casey has been appointed by the Commonwealth Government to act as Liaison Officer of the Commonwealth attached to the Foreign Office Staff.

Mr. Casey's duties will be to endeavour to supervise and accelerate the supply of information between the Foreign Office and the Commonwealth Government with a view to keeping the latter in closer touch with information which is normally available. For this purpose it is desirable that he be located in the Foreign Office and that he be given access to all papers relating to foreign affairs in which Australia may be directly or indirectly interested.

Mr. Casey will be in constant touch with the Prime Minister's Department and thus will be enabled to advise the officers of the Foreign Office from time to time what documents are likely to interest my Government. It is not proposed to interfere with the original channel of communication with the Foreign Office which is working quite satisfactorily and which there is no necessity to disturb. The Liaison Officer's work will be primarily to assist your officers in wider selection of material and to enable this Government to be kept fully informed with regard to matters in which it is interested.

It would be esteemed a favour if you would be so good as to render what assistance is possible in getting this scheme into smooth working order.

Begins: I have come to the conclusion that the existing organization of the Colonial Office is no longer in correspondence with the actual constitutional position in the Empire and is inadequate to the extent and variety of the work thrown upon it. It fails, more particularly, to give sufficiently clear recognition to the profound difference between the work of communication and consultation with the self-governing partner nations of the British Commonwealth and the administrative work of controlling and developing the Colonies and Protectorates for whose welfare this House is directly responsible. The following changes are therefore proposed:—

1. The conduct of affairs with the Dominions will be under a separate new Secretaryship of State for Dominion Affairs, with its own Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, who will also act as Chairman of the Oversea Settlement Committee, and Permanent Under-Secretary of State.

* No. 116.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

EXTRACT FROM THE DEBATES OF 27TH JULY, 1925.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES (Mr. Amery): I ask the indulgence of the Committee if on this, the last occasion when the Estimates are submitted in their present undivided form, I am compelled to make a somewhat longer statement than I hope will be necessary in the future. I think the Committee will wish, to begin with, for some explanation of the reasons which have led to the creation of a new Secretaryship of State and Office for Dominion Affairs separate from the Colonial Secretaryship and the Colonial Office, and of the exact nature and extent of the administrative changes involved. The step we have taken is a recognition justified, not only by the general sentiment of the Dominions, but also by urgent practical necessities of the profound transformation which the structure of the Empire has undergone in the last generation.

Of all the changes which the political complexion of the world has witnessed in our time, none has been more remarkable than the emergence of the younger nations of the British Commonwealth. The only event of comparable importance in its bearing on the future was the birth of the United States a century and a half ago. But whereas that great transaction took place in an atmosphere of strife, the scars of which have taken long to heal, and involved a complete separation, the birth of these new nations has come by a peaceful process of evolution based on mutual understanding and sympathy and on a growing intimacy of co-operation in maintaining the unity and strength of the whole Imperial fabric. That is a fact which only enhances the significance of the change, but which also has largely tended to conceal it from our own observation as well as from that of the outside world. Concurrently with this development there has been another, little less remarkable, in the growth of a new colonial Empire, mainly in South Africa, which, in view of its extent and resources, bids fair in course of time to vie with our Indian Empire in its economic and ultimately, perhaps, even in its political importance.

These developments have inevitably had their reaction upon our administrative machinery here at home. The work of the Colonial Office has had to develop progressively on two entirely different lines. There has been, on one side, the work of communication and consultation between the British Government and its partner Governments over the whole field of their mutual relations and of the common interests of the Empire as a whole. On the other hand, there has been the work of administration and development in that great Colonial area for which this House is directly responsible.

These two spheres of work differ, not merely in degree, but in kind. The one is political, consultative, and, if I may say so, quasi-diplomatic; the other is administrative and directive. They call for wholly different methods and qualities of mind. It is the consciousness of this difference, and the feeling that it was not always adequately recognized, which, much more than any mere sentimental objection to the word "Colonial," has always created a certain amount of resentment in the Dominions against the idea that their relations with the Mother Country should be dealt with by the Colonial Office. The demand for more definite differentiation was raised at the Imperial Conference of 1907 by Mr. Deakin, the then Prime Minister of Australia, and his eloquent and forcible appeal for a better arrangement of our work in dealing with the Dominions was at any rate partially met by Lord Elgin by the establishment within the Colonial Office of a separate Dominions Department under its Assistant Under-Secretary. I cannot say that this arrangement met the case in the view of the Dominions or in actual fact. The issue was raised again at the next Imperial Conference in 1911 by Sir Joseph Ward, the then Prime Minister of New Zealand, who, on behalf of his Dominion, brought forward a specific resolution which was endorsed by General Botha on behalf of South Africa urging—

"That it is essential that the Department of the Dominions be separated from that of the Crown Colonies, and that each Department be placed under a separate Permanent Under-Secretary."

This proposal was rejected, and the matter has remained there ever since, not so much because the position has been regarded as satisfactory, as because the Dominions have felt it hardly consistent with the principles on which inter-Imperial relations are based to go beyond a certain point in expressing their views as to the internal administration and organization of another part of the Empire. Meanwhile the constitutional case for separation has been reinforced by very practical considerations. The work of the Colonial Office has increased beyond all measure in recent years. On the Colonial side the standard of what is expected of our administration, not only in regard to ordinary good government and the promotion of trade, but in regard to transportation, the promotion of native agriculture and education, has risen out of all recognition. It is rising, and rightly rising, all the time, and all the time demands more attention and more consideration from headquarters. The addition of Tanganyika, of Palestine, and of Iraq to this side of the work of the Colonial Office has certainly not diminished the strain on the Department. On the Dominion side, the work of liaison, of keeping the Dominion Governments posted on the progress of foreign and Imperial affairs has been continually growing in volume and in importance. A new Dominion, the Irish Free State, with problems all its own, and not even historically connected like the others with our old Colonial Office, has been added to the work of the Department in the last two years. Last, and certainly not least, a whole additional Department, requiring not only a staff of its own but the constant supervision of a responsible Ministerial head, has come into being in connexion with Empire settlement. The development of that most important work has, I am sorry to say, suffered seriously owing to the fact that it has never been able to enlist more than the merest fraction of time of some overworked Junior Minister. My Right Hon. Friend opposite knows well how heavy, how unfairly heavy, has been the burden upon those at the head of the Colonial Office upon whom all these various aspects of the work has converged, and who have been responsible for the duty of advising and assisting the Secretary of State.

Under these circumstances, I felt it my duty to urge upon my colleagues the immediate necessity of a change which, personally, I have for the last twenty years regarded as desirable in principle. The change approved by the Cabinet is, constitutionally, as far reaching as any advocate of the recognition of the new status of the Dominions could desire. The Secretaryship of State for Dominion Affairs and the Dominions Office will be constitutionally separate entities from the Colonial Secretaryship and Colonial Office, and will as such, in future submit separate Estimates for the approval of Parliament. I think the House, when that time comes, will realize the great advantage of no longer mixing up in a single debate the great problems of our inter-Imperial relations with the no less but entirely different problem of administration in our Colonial dependencies. It is true that for reasons of practical convenience the new Dominions Office will for the present continue to be housed in the Colonial Office, and that the two Secretaryships of State will be combined in the same individual. But there is nothing to preclude the appointment of two different individuals for the two Secretaryships of State, if and when circumstances should warrant such a step, or the combination of the Secretaryship of State for the Dominions with some office other than the Colonial Secretaryship.

It has often been suggested in this connexion that the importance of consultation with the Dominions ought to be recognized by assigning the work to the Prime Minister. The suggestion is at first sight an attractive one, but I doubt if any one who realises the immense burden thrown upon a Prime Minister under modern conditions and the necessity for him keeping his hands free from Departmental work in order to be able to supervise all the Departments, or in a time of external or domestic crisis to be free to concentrate his whole endeavours upon a particular issue, would suggest that such an arrangement would secure either as full or as continuous an attention to inter-Imperial affairs as if they were made the specific responsibility of one of the Prime Minister's Cabinet colleagues. What is, I think essential is that the Prime Minister should regard Dominion affairs as a Department over which his supervision should be peculiarly intimate and constant. That object is, I think, secured by the practice which has developed since the War, and which will, of course, remain unaffected by the present changes, of direct communication between the Prime Ministers, a practice which does insure that the subject concerned is not merely dealt with Departmentally but does come directly under the Prime Minister's personal cognisance.

There is another objection, I think, to confining the work of dealing with inter-Imperial co-operation to the Prime Minister. That work—and I am sure my Right Hon. Friend opposite will agree with me in this—is very largely of a personal character. It requires a great deal of time, not only for full discussion with Dominion representatives and public men who come over here, but also, I venture to suggest, for visits to the Dominions themselves. It is hardly consistent, after all, with the much-talked-of equality of status between the Governments of the Empire, if all the travelling for purposes of personal consultation has to be done by Dominion statesmen, and if there is to be no reciprocity on our side. I know that my right hon. Friend opposite, who gave me such a good lead by his visits to South Africa last year, will not quarrel with me in that statement.

As regards the actual method of inaugurating the new system, we are advised that the creation of a new Secretaryship of State requires no legislation, but follows directly upon His Majesty's pleasure in conferring seals of office. There is, however, a small addition of expenditure involved in respect of the appointment of a new Under-Secretary of State and of a permanent Under-Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, and the token Supplementary Estimate for this is now in the hands of Members. I might, perhaps, add that these changes, though strictly speaking a purely internal matter for this country, were, of course, informally discussed with the Dominion Governments, and have been welcomed by them as well as by public opinion in the Dominions generally as evidence of our desire both to recognize the constitutional status of the Dominions and to improve the machinery of inter-Imperial consultation.

May I now, with apologies to the Committee for having kept them so long with this preliminary explanation, deal briefly with some of the actual subjects which will in future appear on the Dominions Estimates. One of the main and increasingly important problems before us is that of reconciling the equality and autonomy of the partner nations of the Empire and their right to an adequate voice in the common external policy of the Empire, as laid down in the well-known Constitutional Relations Resolution of the Imperial War Conference of 1917, with the effective and prompt conduct of foreign affairs. The problem is, I believe, essentially a practical one, calling, not for the devising of new constitutional machinery, but for the development of working methods to enable the existing constitutional system to work smoothly and continuously. It already works with complete efficacy whenever it is possible for the responsible representatives of the different Governments to meet for personal consultation round the same table. No one who has had the privilege, as I have had, of participating in any of the series of Imperial War Cabinets or Imperial Conferences since 1917, or of the meetings of the British Empire Delegations, whether at Paris, at Washington, or at Geneva, can really regard as insoluble that combination of constitutional autonomy with unity in policy and action which has invariably characterised those gatherings.

The real difficulty lies in the intervals when the principals cannot confer together in person. Our predecessors were confronted with it in relation to the conduct of foreign negotiations and also in relation to the problem of securing continuity in Imperial policy in spite of the changes of Government which are bound to occur in different parts of the Empire in the intervals between the Imperial Conferences, and which in their particular case made them feel unable to give effect to certain of the Resolutions of the Conferences of 1923. The late Prime Minister suggested to the Dominions last summer the holding, not of a full-dress Constitutional Conference, but of something in the nature of a sub-conference or an inquiry by expert representatives in order to study the problem, and himself put forward for consideration certain suggestions, more particularly one for the representation of opposition parties at Imperial Conferences. This proposal for an inquiry was, after very considerable hesitation on the part of some of the Dominion Governments, eventually accepted in principle, subject to finding a date which would suit all the Governments concerned; and this it was not possible to find before the last Dissolution. The conclusion to which we came in view of the correspondence, which had recently been published as a Parliamentary Paper, Command Paper 2301, and which will, I think, well repay study by anyone interested in Imperial affairs, was that on the whole the problem would be more usefully explored a stage further by actual day-by-day working, postponing the kind of inquiry proposed to the accumulation of a further volume of practical experience.

Well, of such experience we have had a good deal during the last eight months. In connection with the Geneva Protocol and still more in connexion with the problem of how to establish security and the atmosphere of peace on those frontiers of Western Europe which are of such immediate interest to ourselves, we were so anxious to secure a really united and common Empire policy that we endeavoured to ascertain whether it might be at all possible to hold a special Imperial Conference last March. We were not surprised, however, to find that such a Conference could not be conveniently arranged, and so we were, perforce, thrown back on to making a much fuller and freer use of the method of telegraphic communication and consultation than we had ever attempted before. How close and regular that method of consultation is to-day may be grasped by the Committee if I tell them that over and above the mass of information which is sent to the Dominions by every mail over 120 telegrams, many of them of great length, have been sent to the Dominions in the last eight months, fully a third of which have been directly concerned with the question of the Protocol or the problem of security in Europe. I think that does show, at any rate, a real effort on the part of the Government of this country to keep the Dominions fully informed of the progress of international events.

At the same time, I cannot help thinking that information circulated by the British Government to all the Dominions may not, however full and frank, always be exactly that which each particular Dominion Government wishes to have. It could, I am sure, be supplemented with advantage by information sent individually to each several Government by some representative directly under the orders of that Government, who had full and free access to all the sources of information upon which our communications are based, and who would know what his Government was particularly interested in and what it wanted to be kept posted about most closely. Australia has for the last six months had such a special liaison officer in this country, detailed from the Australian Department of External Affairs, who has the fullest access to all our Government Departments, and who will undoubtedly be able to be of great service to his Prime Minister in keeping him in touch with the progress of affairs. I need not, of course, say that we are equally willing to give the same facilities to any responsible representative whom any other Dominion may wish to appoint for a similar purpose.

MR. FISHER: Does that include access to Cabinet papers?

MR. AMERY: Yes, to a very large part of all the confidential papers, including Cabinet papers. He is, I may say, regarded as a personal representative of the Prime Minister of Australia, and in that capacity can see whatever the Prime Minister of Australia himself might wish to see or might wish to be informed about.

MR. J. H. THOMAS: What happens in case it is necessary to summon the High Commissioners? Does the gentleman referred to in the case of Australia attend with the High Commissioners from the other Dominions, or does the High Commissioner for Australia attend alone?

MR. AMERY: I am very glad my Right Hon. Friend has asked that question. This liaison officer is here to deal with those specific matters of high policy which are communicated directly to the Dominions, but which, at present at any rate, and until the Dominion Governments themselves decide otherwise, are not, as a matter of fact, dealt with by the High Commissioner, and, therefore, the particular occasion which my Right Hon. Friend suggests has not yet arisen. But I would add this: I would say that, valuable as this fuller and more individual information may be to a Dominion Government in the case of a relatively junior official like the one whom Australia has appointed, we should be equally willing to extend the same principal, if desired, to more senior and authoritative representatives, be they High Commissioners or any other representatives whom each Dominion Government may care to appoint—whomever they wish to depute for that purpose—not only for the purpose of securing first-hand information for their Government, but also for the purpose of confidential consultation with the British Government on any matters on which their Government might wish to be advised or might wish to have discussed.

There is one form of consultation, quite unofficial, I admit, but one which goes very far to meet the late Prime Minister's desire for a non-party discussion of Imperial problems and for continuity in the Imperial handling of these matters—a method which has developed greatly in recent years—and that is the direct intercourse, both here and overseas, between Members of the different Parliaments of the Empire, which has been so much stimulated by that most valuable organization, the Empire Parliamentary Association. I think all of us who have taken advantage of that organization, whether to make use of the opportunities which it affords us of meeting here in London men engaged in public life in other Dominions, or of visiting the Dominions themselves, realize how much we have gained both in knowledge and understanding of Imperial problems through those opportunities. In this respect there is one Member of Parliament—I think I am technically correct in describing him by that title—who has set a peculiarly good example to us all, and whose intercourse, not only with leaders of Governments and public men, but also with the masses of the people with whom he has been in contact, has been of immense value in bringing about a closer understanding and creating underlying conditions of effective co-operation. I mean, of course, the Prince of Wales. The wonderful scenes of enthusiasm with which he was welcomed everywhere in our West African Colonies are a striking testimony of the affection with which the natives of these Dependencies regard the Crown, which, to them, at any rate, personifies all that they have gained by British rule in the last generation—an affection which has only been quickened and deepened by the Prince's own personality. In South Africa he has, since then, successfully carried out, and has now almost concluded, a tour where he has been throughout received with a welcome truly royal in its universality, and, I think, truly democratic in the way in which all classes of the community have united together to welcome him.

VI. ISSUE OF EXEQUATURS TO FOREIGN CONSULS IN THE DOMINIONS.

25TH NOVEMBER. Question has been raised at Imperial Conference as to procedure regarding issue of Exequaturs to foreign Consuls in Dominions. General practice hitherto in the case of all appointments of Consuls de Carrière in any part of British Empire has been that foreign Government concerned has notified His Majesty's Government in Great Britain through diplomatic channel of proposed appointment and that provided that it was clear that person concerned was in fact Consul de Carrière steps have been taken without further formality for issue of His Majesty's Exequatur. In the case of Consuls other than those de Carrière it has been customary to consult Dominion Government concerned before issue of Exequatur.

His Majesty's Government have accepted suggestion that in future any application by a foreign Government for issue of Exequatur to any person who is to act as Consul in a Dominion should be referred to Dominion Government concerned for consideration. If Dominion Government agree to issue of Exequatur, document will be signed by His Majesty the King, but instead of being countersigned by Minister here it will be sent to Dominion Government with a view to countersignature by appropriate Dominion Minister and delivery to officer for whom it is intended together with his commission of appointment. Foreign Government will be informed that the King's Exequatur received His Majesty's signature on such and such a date and has been forwarded to the Dominion Government concerned for countersignature by the appropriate Minister of State and delivery to the officer for whom it is intended together with his commission of appointment.

It is presumed that in cases where application is made for Exequatur in respect of an appointment already provisionally recognized by a Dominion Government, or resulting from recommendation made by Dominion Government in response to request from foreign Government for name of suitable candidate, Dominion Governments would not wish to be consulted before Exequatur is prepared. Procedure as regards transmission of Exequatur to Dominion for countersignature would of course be followed in such cases. Similar telegram sent to other Dominions.—AMERY.

CONFIDENTIAL. My telegram of to-day.* Consuls. Presume that it would be in accordance with wishes of your Ministers that practice of consulting State Governments as well as Commonwealth Government with regard to proposed consular appointments in Australia should not be applied to proposed appointments of Consuls de Carrière. As regards future procedure for countersignature of Exequaturs, will act on principle that only signature to be appended will be that of Commonwealth Minister.—AMERY.

VII. INTERNATIONAL STATUS OF THE DOMINIONS—MEMORANDA AND STATEMENTS REGARDING—

D. 11047

No. 125.

MEMORANDUM BY GENERAL SMUTS ON CONSTITUTIONAL RELATIONS.

[NOTE.—The following Memorandum was communicated by General Smuts to Mr. Amery in 1921, as a basis for the discussion at the Imperial Conference of 1921 of questions which might come before the Constitutional Conference recommended by the Imperial War Conference of 1917.† It was returned by Mr. Amery with his comments on the 20th June, 1921.

The Memorandum was not in fact circulated to the Imperial Conference of 1921, and the proposed Constitutional Conference did not take place.‡]

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE BRITISH COMMONWEALTH.

ONE of the most important matters for discussion at this meeting of the Imperial Cabinet is the Agenda or Programme to be laid before the Constitutional Conference which will be held at an early date. That programme will include such important matters as:—

1. The status of the Dominions.
2. The relations of the King, as the common bond of unity, to the component parts of the Commonwealth.
3. The methods of conference and consultation between those parts in all matters of common Imperial concern, and
4. Several other subsidiary but still important matters.

Before dealing with these points I wish to make two preliminary observations:—

In the first place, I would emphasize the urgency of the subject and the necessity of as early a settlement as possible. Delay in the settlement of Dominion status is fraught with grave dangers. The British Commonwealth cannot escape the atmosphere of political unsettlement and change which is affecting most other countries. The national temperature of all young countries has been raised by the event of the great war. The national sense, the unconsciousness of nationhood of the Dominions has received a great impetus from their share in the great war and from the experiences of hundreds of thousands of Dominion troops in the campaigns of the great war. While these experiences have strengthened the common bonds, they have undoubtedly also deepened the Dominion sense of national separateness, of the Dominions as distinct nations in the Commonwealth and the world. And with this sense goes a feeling of legitimate pride and self respect which affect the rank and file of these young nations just as much as their political leaders. Unless Dominion status is settled soon in a way which will satisfy the legitimate aspirations of these young nations, we must look for separatist movements in the Commonwealth. Such movements already exist, notably in South Africa, but potentially in several of the other Dominions also. And the only way to deal with such movements is not to wait until they have become fully developed, and perhaps irresistible in their impetus, but to forestall them and make them unnecessary by the most generous satisfaction of the Dominion sense of nationhood and statehood. The warning against always being too late in coming to a proper settlement, which the example of Ireland gives to the whole Commonwealth, is one which we can only neglect at our peril.

My second observation is this: that it is not sufficient merely to lay down a formal agenda of points or topics for the consideration of the coming Conference. This Imperial Cabinet should give a definite lead to public opinion and to the Conference by drafting and provisionally approving a number of definite resolutions for the consideration of the Conference. If this is not done, there is every risk that the Conference may resolve itself into a series of academic discussions on some of the most difficult and intricate questions in the whole range of constitutional law. In that way the Conference might prove abortive and futile, and public opinion in the Dominions might become exasperated. From bitter experience in South Africa extending over about two years of public discussion, I feel that public opinion requires education—it requires a lead—it requires practical suggestions for its guidance through a maze of questions which even technical lawyers find it difficult to follow. If a series of resolutions were passed at this Cabinet, not as a definite and final settlement but as a programme for discussion at the Conference, and if these draft resolutions were published as soon as possible in order to guide the formation of public opinion all over the Commonwealth, we should go far in ensuring the success of the Conference and in making it the greatest landmark in the history of the Commonwealth. Nay, more: with such draft resolutions before it from the Imperial Cabinet, the Conference could be made a larger and more representative body and embrace representatives from other parties as well as from the Government. The issues to be settled are so important that it would be most desirable not to confine the Conference merely to the governing parties represented in the Cabinets of the Commonwealth. For every Dominion the settlement should not be a party one but a national settlement accepted if possible by all important sections of public opinion. I fear, however, that such a large Conference would prove abortive, unless it had before it the detailed proposals of the Imperial Cabinet. The Conference should be a sort of Legislative Assembly convened to consider definite motions placed before it. This enlarged Conference, if successful, could then become a precedent for the future and take the place of the present Imperial Conference which is not a very satisfactory body.

DOMINION STATUS.

I now proceed to discuss the matters which will be embraced by the draft resolutions, and, firstly, the definition of the future constitutional status of the Dominions in the Commonwealth group and in the world. After the evolution in the status of the Dominions, culminating in their signature of the Versailles Treaty and their membership in the League of Nations, what is their present position? What is clear in their present status, and what is still obscure or anomalous and requires further action? In general, the equal Statehood of the Dominions with the United Kingdom and with other Sovereign States has been affirmed both by Dominion and British statesmen, as following in principle from what has happened. Apart from general principle, however, it is most important to see what the position in actual practice is, for only in that way will it be possible to know what steps have still to be taken in order that the actualities of the situation may be brought to harmonize with theory or principle. The actual position may, I submit, be formulated as follows:—

1. As regards Legislative Sovereignty.

As a matter of strict law, the Parliament of the United Kingdom has sovereign power of legislation not only in respect of the United Kingdom but of the Empire as a whole, including the Dominions. Constitutionally, however, the Parliaments of the Dominions have exclusive legislative sovereignty in respect of their several Dominions, and any attempt of the Parliament of the United Kingdom to legislate for a Dominion would be unconstitutional and revolutionary.

Here two questions arise. Firstly, as the legislative sovereignty of the Parliament of the United Kingdom over the Dominions is constitutionally obsolete, is it worth while formally abolishing it; or had it better be left alone as a sort of symbolic reminder of the historic unity of the Commonwealth? I submit that it is an archaic form devoid of all substance in our unwritten constitution and may therefore be left alone.

Secondly, the legislative sovereignty of the Dominions is territorially restricted in their present constitutions. These give them power to legislate "for the peace, order and good government" of their respective Dominions. Extra-territorial legislation may be held to be ultra vires. I have contended successfully that the Dominions have power of legislation in respect of their mandated territories also. But beyond that their power is questionable. They could, for instance, not legislate for the annexation of new territories. This limitation on the legislative sovereignty of the Dominions should be removed by legislation of the Imperial Parliament which granted the Dominion constitutions. Several of the Dominion constitutions also reserve the power of their amendment to the Imperial Parliament. It would be desirable to amend these constitutions and, as in the case of the South Africa Act, give the power of amendment to the Dominion concerned. The application of the Colonial Laws Validity Act to future Dominion legislation should also be abolished, as it places the Dominion Parliaments in a position of inferiority and has clearly become an anachronism.

With these alterations in the law, the constitutional equality of the Dominion Parliaments with that of the United Kingdom would be established.

2. As regards Executive Sovereignty.

Here the present position may be summarized as follows:—The Dominion Executive, or the King in His Dominion Government, has constitutionally unrestricted power of executive action within the Dominion, and the British Government has not even a legal fiction of authority left. Outside the Dominions, however, that is to say in foreign affairs and international relations, the Dominions had no defined status until the Versailles Treaty. Their membership of the Peace Conference and of the League of Nations and their signature of the Versailles Treaty meant for them international recognition and an international status. But this is so recent an innovation that little has been done hitherto to carry this position to its logical applications. In practice the Imperial Government has continued to control the foreign relations of the Commonwealth vis-à-vis foreign powers. And in doing so the British Government has done little more, even in the way of consulting the Dominions, than to send occasional summaries of the international situation to the Dominion Governments. It is agreed that the Dominions are not constitutionally bound by Treaties to which they are not parties by their own signature. It is agreed also that they can authorize the King to appoint Dominion representatives to Foreign Governments, and some of them contemplate doing so. There has, however, not yet been time for any settled practice to grow up in regard to the foreign representation of the Dominions, and in consequence there is a good deal of obscurity about the whole position, not only in the United Kingdom and the Dominions, but also in foreign countries. Foreigners find it difficult to understand the unwritten British Constitution, in which precedents mould and expand the Constitution, and the legal aspect is nothing and the constitutional aspect everything. Even in America the Senate debates over the reservations in regard to the voting power of the British Empire in the Assembly of the League of Nations are a warning to us. Other people find it difficult to grasp the difference between legal theory and constitutional practice in the Empire and to see how the law of the constitution is moulded and finally abrogated by the practice of the Constitution, and how, without a change of the law, a British colony becomes in constitutional fact an independent State. These abstruse matters might be cleared up in some formal way which would show the true nature of the Dominion status as distinct from legal archaisms. It has been suggested by Mr. Duncan Hall in his interesting book on the British Commonwealth of Nations, that a declaration of Constitutional Rights should be made which would explain the new developments in the Dominion Status, remove obscurities, set at rest doubts and abrogate what is obsolete—a declaration, in fact, which would become a precedent and a most important amendment of the unwritten law of the Constitution. Such a declaration would set out that, as a matter of constitutional right, the British Parliament has no legislative power in respect of the Dominions; that the King has no more constitutional right of vetoing Dominion Bills than he has in respect of British Bills; and that the King in his Dominion Government has in respect of foreign affairs affecting the Dominions the same constitutional right that he has as King in his British Government in respect of the United Kingdom. Other points might also be covered by such a declaration, which would definitely settle the new constitutional basis on which the Commonwealth rests and explain that basis to all the world. I heartily endorse Hall's suggestion which seems to me the easiest constitutional means of settling the international status of the Dominions, without changing the unwritten flexible character of the Constitution of the British Commonwealth. If the suggestion is adopted, the declaration could be drafted by the Imperial Cabinet, considered and passed by the Constitutional Conference and by them presented to the King in a formal address for His acceptance.

3. As regards Judicial Sovereignty.

The only limitation at present existing to the judicial sovereignty of the Dominions is the right of appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council safeguarded in all the Dominion Constitutions. This right of appeal, which is most extensive in the earlier Constitutions granted to Canada and Australia, is so seriously curtailed in the later South Africa Act that appeals to the Privy Council from the Supreme Court of South Africa are most rare and, owing to a recent ruling of the Privy Council, are likely to be still rarer in the future. The force of opinion in favour of this right of appeal to the Privy Council has greatly diminished in recent years, and there is now no strong reason why, if a Dominion so chooses, it should not have the power to abolish this right altogether. With the two larger Dominions it is now largely a question of internal arrangement as between the Dominions and their component states or provinces. If the power to amend their Constitutions is granted to the Dominions by Imperial Act, as already suggested, this will necessarily also give them the power to deal with the right of appeal to the Privy Council as they please.

The King and the Dominions.

The relations of the King to the Dominions raise some very difficult questions in regard to the status of the Dominions and it is best to discuss this aspect of Dominion status separately. Equality of statehood with the United Kingdom requires that the King should have exactly the same relation to a Dominion that he has to the United Kingdom; and the Prince of Wales, in a recent celebrated speech, which read almost like a constitutional declaration, said that this was so. But as things stand in practice to-day, this is not so. The statement would be correct if the King were also the Sovereign of a Dominion in his personal capacity. But this is not so. The King in his relation to a Dominion is not the King in his personal capacity, but the King in his official capacity as the constitutional sovereign of the United Kingdom. If, therefore, the King is to execute any act in relation to a Dominion he does so through the forms and channels prescribed by the Constitution of the United Kingdom. His appointment of a Governor-General to represent him in a Dominion is made technically on the advice of his British Cabinet and bears the counter-signature of a Secretary of State. The most significant illustration of this position is afforded by the recent appointment by the King of his Dominion Ministers as plenipotentiaries to sign the Peace Treaty on behalf of their Dominions; this appointment was countersigned by a British Secretary of State, although made on the advice of His Majesty's Dominion Executives. As long as this is so, it is impossible to contend that the Dominion Governments stand on the same footing as the British Government, their position being one of distinct inferiority.

There is another very serious instance of this inferiority. The Dominion Executive has not direct access to their Sovereign; they can only approach him officially through his British Government. The relations of the King to his Dominion Government have been placed under a British Secretary of State through whom all communications pass. The Governor-General, who represents the King in the Dominions, does not correspond direct with the King but communicates officially with the Secretary of State. The placing of the Dominions under the Secretary of State for the Colonies or indeed under any other British department or ministry is therefore in itself a sign of the inferiority in status of the Dominion Government to the British Government. In practice this inferiority is carried even further: the Governor-General is not merely a viceroy, representative of the King; he is also the agent in the Dominions of the British Government or more particularly of the Colonial Office. This is of course a relic of the past—quite out of harmony with the new order of things.

This state of affairs positively cannot be tolerated much longer. It is imperatively necessary that equality of statehood should in practice be carried out to the full extent of bringing about an equality of status between the British and Dominion Governments as co-ordinate governments of the King. This would involve:—

(a) that the Dominions should cease to be placed under the Colonial Office or any other British Department;

(b) that the Dominion Governments should have direct access to the King who will act on their advice without the interposition of the British Government or a Secretary of State;

(c) that the Governor-General should become a viceroy simply and solely and only represent the sovereign in his Dominion Executive and not also the British Government.

The important principle is contained in paragraph (b). If that is carried, the changes involved in (a) and (c) will necessarily have to be made by administrative action. Now one way of carrying (b) is the declaration of Constitutional Rights referred to. In such a declaration the King in the exercise of His Royal Prerogative could lay down that in future the Dominions will have direct access to him and that in his conduct as Dominion Sovereign he will only act on the advice of his Dominion Government. As the King resides in England, this would involve the residence there of a Dominion Minister of the Crown to remain in touch with him. Direct access of each Dominion Executive to the King should, however, not have the effect of weakening the intimate relations which keep the British and Dominion Governments in close touch with one another. Some machinery which will prevent their drifting apart under the new system will have to be devised. Perhaps the following suggestion might be considered:—

A Dominions Committee should be constituted consisting of the Prime Ministers of the United Kingdom and of the Dominions as ex-officio members, with the right, however, of nominating representatives to take their places on the Committee. This would not be a Committee of the present Privy Council, which is merely an organ of the British Government, but a real Commonwealth Committee. The Dominion affairs to be taken away from the Colonial Office and put in the charge of this Dominions Committee through whom formal correspondence between the Governments of the Commonwealth would pass. (The Committee should, however, not be a post office, such as the Colonial Office has largely become, and all merely business or departmental matters should be sent direct as between the British and Dominion departments concerned without troubling the Committee). Business which concerns any Dominion particularly would be dealt with by that Dominion's representative and the United Kingdom's representative. If the two fail to agree, the matter to be remitted to their principals, the two Prime Ministers concerned, for decision. It is assumed that in a purely Dominion matter the view of the Dominion representative shall prevail. In matters of common concern for the Commonwealth, the whole Committee should meet and dispose of the matter on the principles which guide the deliberations of the Imperial Conference and the Council of the League of Nations, viz., unanimity of resolutions and no attempted coercion of a dissentient Dominion. Members of the Committee to have direct access to the King who will be advised in regard to general Commonwealth matters by the Committee as a whole, and in regard to matters affecting a particular Dominion by the two representatives referred to. Thus, in regard to the appointment of a Governor-General or Viceroy, the King would be advised by the United Kingdom and Dominion representatives who no doubt will be guided by the instructions of their principals. I sketch the general idea of this Committee in outline and purposely avoid details.

It will be seen that the Constitution of this Dominions Committee will not only satisfy the requirements of the three points above stated, but that it will serve the further purpose of providing an Imperial organ of "continuous consultation," such as was contemplated in the Resolution of the 1917 Conference.

METHODS OF CONFERENCE AND CONSULTATION.

After what has already been said in reference to the Imperial Conference and the Dominions Committee, it is unnecessary to discuss this subject in detail, and I shall proceed to summarize my suggestions. There will be three organs of conference and consultation in regard to the common policies and concerns of the Commonwealth: the Imperial Conference, the Prime Ministers' Conference (in place of the Imperial Cabinet) and the Dominions Committee.

1. The Imperial Conference or Commonwealth Congress will meet every four years and discuss general questions of common concern, such as will from time to time come up for legislation in the Commonwealth Parliaments. It will no longer be confined to Cabinet Ministers but will be broadened in its membership so as to include representatives of the parliamentary oppositions also. Its sessions will go in rotation round the Commonwealth, and its President will be the Prime Minister for the time being of the country in which the session is held. It will generally sit in public.

2. The Dominions Committee which will be a continuous organization and form the link between the Throne and the Commonwealth Cabinets. It will be continuously available for the discussion of questions of foreign policy and other common matters as they turn up. It will also discuss important matters coming from the League of Nations, on which group action by the Commonwealth may be desirable. It will have a Commonwealth secretariat.

3. The Prime Ministers' Conference which I suggest should replace the present so-called Imperial Cabinet. This name is a misnomer, as it is no Cabinet and takes no executive action, nor is there joint responsibility to any Parliament. In the Dominions the name of Imperial Cabinet is already leading to serious misunderstanding and criticism. The Imperial Cabinet is really and substantially a Prime Ministers' Conference, to which other British or Dominion Ministers are also invited when the affairs dealt with by their departments are under discussion. It will be the Dominions Committee in an expanded form and clothed with greater authority. It will meet at least once every two years to review the foreign or defence or other common policies of the Commonwealth as a whole. It will lay down, subject to the approval of the several countries, the general principles of the common policies to be followed from time to time, and the Dominions Committee will take those principles as their general instructions in the intervals between the meetings of the Prime Ministers' Conference. The Dominions Committee and the Prime Ministers' Conference may on occasion for purposes of consultation hold joint sittings with the Committee of Imperial Defence.

There are only two other miscellaneous matters to which I wish to refer because of their great symbolic or sentimental significance. There is no doubt that the formal settlement of the above matters will complete the fundamental alteration in the basis of the British Empire which has taken place recently. It will no longer be an Empire but a society of free and equal sister states. A new name should mark that epoch-making departure. For this there is all the more reason because the name of the British Empire is for various reasons not universally popular throughout our group of associated nations. I would, therefore, suggest that the time has come for the consideration of a new name for our group, such as the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Secondly, some great symbol should mark the equal statehood of the Dominions and their entry among the nations of the world. This could best be done by their adoption of a distinctive national flag for each, in addition to the Union Jack or other common symbol of Imperial unity and allegiance.

To summarize the above suggestions:—

1. The Imperial Cabinet should draft a general scheme of future constitutional relations for the British Commonwealth, and this scheme should take the form of a series of concrete resolutions to be submitted for the consideration of the Constitutional Conference next year, and to be published for general information and public discussion in the meantime.

2. The scope of the resolutions should be the practical recognition of the equality of statehood of the Dominions with the United Kingdom and the methods of conference and consultation to be adopted in future in respect of common policies and concerns of the Commonwealth.

3. The resolutions should provide that legislation of the British Parliament be passed (a) giving power of amendment in respect of their Constitutions to the Dominions, (b) extending their legislative jurisdiction beyond their territorial limits, and (c) abrogating the Colonial Laws Validity Act in its application to future Dominion legislation.

4. The resolutions should further provide that a Declaration of Rights be presented by the Constitutional Conference for the acceptance of the King, providing (a) that the British Parliament has no constitutional right of legislation in respect of the Dominions, (b) that the Royal veto is in the same constitutional position in the Dominions as in the United Kingdom, (c) that the Dominions have direct access to the Sovereign without the intervention of any British Secretary of State, and (d) that the international status and rights of diplomatic representation of the Dominions is unquestioned.

5. The resolutions should further provide (a) that Dominion affairs be removed from the Secretary of State for the Colonies and placed under a Dominions Committee, consisting of the Commonwealth Prime Ministers or their nominees and having direct access to the King; and (b) that in future the Governor-General in the Dominion shall be simply and solely a Viceroy, representative of the Sovereign.

6. With regard to the methods of conference and consultation the resolutions should provide that there be (a) a quadrennial Commonwealth Congress, (b) a biennial Prime Ministers' Conference (in lieu of the Imperial Cabinet), and (c) a continuous Dominions Committee; all with scope as above explained.

7. (a) To mark the fundamental change in the character of the British Empire, the resolutions should provide that its name be altered to that of the British Commonwealth of Nations. (b) To mark the fundamental change in the status of the Dominions, the resolutions should provide that besides a common Imperial flag (which may be the Union Jack) each Dominion should have its own distinctive national flag.

AT CAPE TOWN ON 13TH APRIL, 1923.

(Cape Times, 14th April, 1923.)

THE WIDER ISSUE.

I WISH to say one word more in regard to a wider issue. Beyond the Union there is our membership in the great world-wide British Commonwealth. Our relation to it should be one of perfect goodwill and fruitful co-operation instead of that indifference and antagonism which the Nationalist Party preaches. The Empire is not only our best market, it is our best friend in a world seething with ill-will and national jealousies.

My conception and ideal of our Commonwealth is that it should more and more become one of the greatest active forces for good in the world. The position in the old world is to-day one of grave danger. The passions of nationalism are tearing Europe to pieces. The wave of nationalism will recede again, but in the meantime a whole civilisation may have been destroyed.

Our Commonwealth should stand for the larger, saner ideal of human co-operation and growing fellowship among the nations. And it should throw all its great weight into the scales to preserve world peace and to prevent the decadence of Europe.

THE CONFERENCE OF PREMIERS.

One of the most promising institutions in the Commonwealth is the Prime Ministers' Conference, which focusses its ultimate international policy. It is not generally recognized that the last Conference in 1921 had far-reaching beneficial results. At a time when peace was in the balance between France and Germany over the question of Upper Silesia, it declared its firm and united policy to the parties concerned, with the result that a peaceful solution was reached. It did an even greater service. It took the lead in suggesting the steps which led to the calling of the Washington Conference by America. It was the policy of the Prime Ministers' Conference which, in the result, substituted for the Anglo-Japanese Alliance a wider Union for the peace of the Pacific, a Union which associated America with Japan, and our Commonwealth in that great cause. The last Prime Ministers' Conference was, from the point of view of international policy, one of outstanding importance for the world.

POSSIBLE ERA OF WAR.

Another conference will assemble in October, and it may have to consider an even graver situation. It is impossible for our Commonwealth to be a mere indifferent spectator to the rapidly developing crisis in Europe. We dream of a régime of peace, but forces are being set going in Europe which may mean an era of war and extreme economic disturbance such as may well bring about in the end the ruin of European civilization. We should not fold our hands and passively look forward to the dismal prospect of having later to join in great military preparations for new emergencies. A policy of silence and drift now may be the most dangerous and expensive of all. The time is rapidly coming, if it has not arrived already, when our Commonwealth may have to define its position in certain eventualities and declare it to the world.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

I know I am treading on very delicate and dangerous ground, and I do not wish to add more at present than this. Our Commonwealth still has the position and the power to be the main European bulwark of world peace. The fate of Europe cannot be a matter of indifference to it. The League of Nations is there as the instrument of world peace, but in itself it is devoid of power, and can only rely on the full disinterested backing of those who have the power, and have no selfish aims of their own to serve. Foremost among these is the British Empire, whose greatest interest undoubtedly is the peace of the world. Its position should be defined, its policy should be clear to all the world and freed from all doubt and misunderstanding. Not in a Jingo spirit, not in a spirit of arrogance and inter-meddling, but in sincere impartial friendship to all, in a spirit of humble but determined loyalty to the great cause of peace, it should speak before it is too late, and before the passions of the nations have carried them too far.

My view is that never in all its history has the British Empire had a greater opportunity of great human service. And I trust that it will realize the greatness and the glory of its peaceful mission and speak the great word which, with the sole exception of America, it alone can still speak among the nations of the world.

EXTRACT FROM A SPEECH MADE BY HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES AT A DINNER GIVEN BY GOVERNMENT AT THE HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT, CAPE TOWN, ON 2ND MAY, 1925.

THE visits which I have already made to the other Dominions have helped me to realize the great development in the constitutional status of the various self-governing parts of the British Commonwealth which has taken place since the war. That development was, perhaps, first strikingly marked by the separate signature, by the Representatives of the Dominions, of the Peace Treaties and by their inclusion as Members of the League of Nations. But anyone who has taken the trouble to study the history of the period since 1919 will realize that this development is going on all the time, and that the full conception of what is meant by a Brotherhood of Free Nations such as ours has still to be worked out.

I realize that the welcome which you extend to me is in recognition of the fact that I come to you as the King's eldest son, as Heir to a Throne under which the members of that Commonwealth are free to develop each on its own lines, but all to work together as one. No Government can represent all parties and all Nations within the Empire, but my travels have taught me this, that the Throne is regarded as standing for a heritage of common aims and ideals shared equally by all sections, parties, and nations within that Empire.

DOMINIONS' STATUS IN FOREIGN POLICY OF EMPIRE.

MR. FORBES asked the Prime Minister if he had noticed the speech of Sir Robert Borden, as reported in the cables of the 19th August, where he had said that the problem of giving the Dominions adequate voice in determining the foreign policy of the Empire was a grave one. Sir Robert Borden advocated the following to attempt to solve the problem: High Commissioners of Dominions to be members of their own Governments, and receive the status of Privy Councillors in order to enable them to attend Cabinet meetings in London; representatives of Dominions on League of Nations to meet before each annual assembly to discuss common problems; each Dominion to send strong representations to the League to develop and strengthen the Department of External Relations. Also, whether the Prime Minister had noticed Sir James Allen's comments thereon on the 20th, when he said he hoped that all the Dominions would thoroughly discuss these proposals, and that they would result in a more concrete scheme which would more closely link up the British and Dominion Governments. Sir James Allen said he did not think the High Commissioner should be a member of Cabinet, but thought the other proposals were good. He (Mr. Forbes) asked the Prime Minister what were the views of the Government on the subject, and would he give the House an opportunity of discussing the matter.

The Hon. Mr. COATES (Prime Minister) replied that he thanked the honourable member for giving him the opportunity to reply to the question. He had read the contents of the cables and the reported remarks of Sir Robert Borden and Sir James Allen. The Government considered that the method at present adopted of consultation by cable between His Majesty's Government and the Dominions on matters of Imperial policy was satisfactory and sufficient for general purposes. Sir Robert Borden's proposal that the status and authority of the High Commissioners should be largely increased would no doubt be considered at the next Imperial Conference, whenever that was held. It had been suggested that the Conference would be held next year, but he could not speak authoritatively as to the date. The essential condition, however, would always be that nothing should be finally decided or agreed on by New Zealand without direct consideration by the New Zealand Cabinet in New Zealand, and that any such decision would be subject to ratification by the Parliament of New Zealand. Members were aware that that had been the practice in the past, and that was the Government's point of view in connexion with the question asked by the honourable the leader of the Opposition.

The Hon. Mr. HANAN: No Government should commit the country without the assent of Parliament.

The Hon. Mr. COATES said that was so. New Zealand was kept informed by cable of what was happening, and Cabinet acted in its wisdom accordingly, but whatever was done was ultimately subject to ratification by Parliament.

UNION STATUS.

Statement by Prime Minister.

On the question of the Imperial Conference, the Prime Minister said that the Agenda had not yet been compiled, and only a few general points had been put forward for consideration, but he would be quite prepared before the end of the session, if possible, to bring up the matter of the Agenda and allow a discussion on it.

This brought the Prime Minister to the question of the international status of the Union, a point which undoubtedly would have to be discussed, he said. He had always taken up the position that South Africa had secured a complete international independent status equal to any other Dominion or any other part of the British Empire.

As Free as England.

The Prime Minister proceeded: In that respect I contend that we are as free and as independent as England itself. On that point there is no difference between us, but there is a difference between us as to what is meant by this free, complete independent status. My contention is, and always has been, that we are in a position of absolute equality with even England, even in regard to the question of secession.

Mr. L. Goldenhuys (S.A.P., Johannesburg North): What more do you want?

General Hertzog: Exactly. That is the position theoretically, but we know that in practice we have a great deal to achieve and to acquire, and we all know that the Right Hon. Member for Sanderton has at all times been busy in trying to acquire these full rights, the exercise of these full rights.

We know that there are some of those rights which, if we should wish to, we could and might exercise, whereas there are others—this right of secession, for instance—which it would be very unwise and ill-advised for us to exercise, except along the deviation, through the agency and by means of England herself.

Take, for instance, in this connexion the question of having our own Embassies. It would be foolish for us to appoint our own Ambassadors and have our own Embassies all over; at the same time it may be wise and politic for us where necessary to have our own Ambassador or our own representative—whatever he may be termed.

Independent Status Secured.

It is not a question of fighting or striving for our independence or our independent status. Our independent status has been secured. (Hear, hear.) It is there. But the question on which we are at issue is how to make use of that independent status. (Hear, hear.) That is the question on which we have differed and on which we differ to this day. The other side have always taken up the attitude that we must not do this or must not do that. Take this case of appointing our own Trade Commissioner in America. The late Government would not do it.

General Smuts: It was a financial matter entirely, and nothing else.

General Hertzog: Well, we have progressed, and we are advancing from day to day, and if we want to have our own independent status we should, whenever necessary, take certain duties and burdens upon ourselves. I agree we should not try to undertake more; we should not take more upon our shoulders than we can carry; but where to-day England carries many things on our behalf we should, when opportunity offers and our interests demand, be ready ourselves to take over our own duties and carry our own burdens and responsibilities.

A Thorough Understanding.

This, Mr. Chairman, is unquestionably one of the first and one of the weightiest problems to be dealt with by the Imperial Conference. I feel convinced that if we face facts and if we make the outside world understand our position as an independent, free nation, many of the difficulties and objections which are facing us to-day will disappear. We have heard of the objections raised at the Customs Conference; I am sure that these difficulties will disappear if we make our position clear and if the other parts of the British Empire do the same.

According to the Agreement of 1923 we are entitled to our full and free rights. Yet one feels that there is something lacking—there is a feeling of fear, of nervousness, a feeling which seems to prevail among the other Dominions as well, that if they insist on their rights, on the exercise of their rights as free and independent nations, they may do something to impair that independent status. The result of this feeling of apprehension has been this discontent which was displayed at Lausanne and everywhere else. Everything is attributable to this, that there is this suspicion.

And now I come to the great difference between General Smuts and myself. He always takes up the position that everything has been conceded, that our full status as a free, independent nation has been conceded—up to a certain point—

General Smuts: Are you referring to secession?

General Smuts' "Halt."

General Hertzog: Exactly. Up to a certain point and then he cries "Halt." And the attitude he has taken up on that point is the most fatal he could have taken up on any point. If he takes up that attitude then it is absurd for us to claim that we are on a footing of equality with England.

If we want to remain on a friendly footing with each part of the British Empire, or whatever you call it, then it is essential that we should thoroughly and openly state what the position is. There is nothing to hide or to be afraid of, and that is where I differ from my Right Honourable friend (General Smuts). I say that we are absolutely free and untrammelled, absolutely independent, just as free as England herself. And if we should be so stupid to do so, we are free to secede.

If that is accepted as the position, then the Dominions have no cause to be suspicious of the position. If that suspicion is removed then I say that the various parts of the Empire stand in a relation to each other as free nations and free people. And we say to each other: "On what points (which we must agree to) do we stand together." There is the Crown; there is the will of the people; and it is on the will of the people that we say: "Here are the points of contact with each other on which we agree." Unless that is done, we shall achieve nothing under that status.

A "Super-Authority."

But, Mr. Chairman, there is this fear, there is this suspicion, that these rights and privileges which we possess as an independent and free nation are silently removed and taken away from us simply because we fail to take action in accordance with our rights. I repeat that the relations between the various parts of the British Commonwealth should be based on the will of the people—on the will of the people expressly stated and expressed. As soon as that is done, I feel that we shall be on a much sounder basis, and that we shall have a better and truer understanding.

This is where General Smuts differs from me. He cannot get away from the feeling that there is a sort of authority, a sort of higher power over us—a sort of super-State, of super-authority. Take my Right Honourable friend's speech on 11th November. When I saw his speech I said at once: "There lies the fundamental difference between my Right Honourable friend's policy and the Nationalist policy." He insists that there must be a super-authority, whether recognized by legislation or accepted by the Imperial Conference.

General Smut's attitude is that there must be a super-authority which can bind us all by what it says. Well, that is where we as Nationalists differ from the other side. We say that so far as South Africa is concerned there is only one authority, the people and will of the people—and that authority remains only so long as the will of the people prevails.

I want to give General Smuts every credit for the attitude he has taken up in regard to the federal idea when that was mooted, but at the same time I want to show his inconsistency there. In the creation of the League of Nations, General Smuts was one of the strongest advocates against making the League a sovereign power. In that I contend that he was quite right. But how can he bring his attitude on that occasion to accord with his attitude that in the Empire there shall always be a super-authority; why should he be apprehensive lest, if there be no such super-authority, the Empire break up? It is clear to me that there can be no such super-authority and that is also felt by the other Dominions.

"Each of Us is a Power."

You will never get people who stand for their independence and liberty to submit to this so-called super-authority over them, to submit to any such authority from outside. The sooner that is realized the better it will be. Let us be quite clear on that. Let us make it clear that we stand for freedom and independence, not in words, but in deeds. And then we must make it clear to the foreign Powers that each of us, each of the Dominions, is a Power (Mogendheid) the same as they are. (Hear, hear.) And if that is done, then I say that you will be bringing about, that you will have brought about, the true spirit of a commonwealth of nations—a different spirit from the one existing to-day. (Hear, hear.) You will then create a real, healthy and lasting Commonwealth of Nations.

General Hertzog was resuming his seat when, in reply to an interruption from the Opposition benches, he remarked: "I said before that the Empire was good for me so long as it was good for South Africa, and I still say that. I say again that an Empire in which I am a part under an outside authority is not to the interest of South Africa, because that authority has not been created by the people."

Combination of Equal Status.

General Smuts appreciated the Prime Minister's willingness to allow the House an opportunity of discussing matters to be raised at the Imperial Conference. He did not think it served any purpose to go into an academic discussion as to our international status. The Prime Minister had stated that both sides were agreed on the status of South Africa, but differed only on one point—the right of secession.

General Hertzog had also remarked in his speech that he (General Smuts) was under the impression that there must be some super-authority. He could inform General Hertzog that he (General Smuts) had no such idea. His idea of the British Commonwealth was an organization or a combination of equal States and nobody superior. When he went to the Conference next October General Hertzog would find that that was the attitude of all the other Prime Ministers, and the British Prime Minister no less.

General Hertzog: Hear, hear.

General Smuts: There is no super-State, no super-authority. It is a meeting of equals under one Sovereign, and they meet and discuss matters of common concern.

Continuing, General Smuts said there was no need to enter into the question of secession. That was a high constitutional question, and he remembered the days when Mr. Beyers, the present Minister of Mines, from his place on the Opposition benches used to question the late Government on that point.

Mr. Beyers (Minister of Mines and Industries): It was a question of the evolution of practical equality. (Laughter.)

General Smuts: The Minister is still in the process of evolution. (Laughter.) I see from his attitude last night that he looks forward to the time when we shall have the right to appoint our own Consuls, but I see the Prime Minister has anticipated him by appointing a Consul in Angola. (Laughter.)

"I do not think we need bother about theoretical questions. The Prime Minister," the speaker assured General Hertzog, "will find that when he goes to the Conference he is on common ground with the rest of his colleagues there. Nobody recognizes a superior; there is no superior; it is a meeting of equals, and that is the position I have always taken up, whatever the Prime Minister may have gathered from what I have said. If he gathered anything different it may be due to the way I have of expressing myself, or to his way of understanding me." (Laughter.)

UNION STATUS.

Speech by General Hertzog at Stellenbosch.

THE speech of General Smuts, delivered at Johannesburg on the 11th November last, dealing with the Locarno Treaty, created a widespread impression, if not a sensation, both in official and unofficial circles. This is not surprising.

According to General Smuts, the signing of this treaty by the United Kingdom, leaving it optional to the Dominions to subscribe to it or not, is an epoch-making event for the continued existence of the British Empire. In his opinion, the future existence of the Empire can be assured only by an unswerving allegiance to the principle of formal unity in regard to foreign relations, at any rate those of a more important nature.

He complains that during the negotiations in connexion with and at the conclusion of the Locarno Treaty this unity of action was not observed, and he sees therein the abandonment of the only principle whereby the unity of the Empire can be guaranteed, namely, the principle of group unity of the Empire in international matters.

International Freedom.

The full significance of this principle, with all that it implies, will, I think, be better understood by looking back over the struggle for international freedom by the self-governing Dominions of Great Britain, more particularly the Union of South Africa.

With the grant of self-government from time to time to one or other of the Dominions, the question has repeatedly arisen as to its scope, i.e., as to what is implied under self-government. It is obvious that the Dominion concerned, continually striving for freedom and the satisfaction of its national aspirations, had to put the widest and, for itself, the most favourable construction on its powers and authority.

In almost every case, therefore, the grant of self-government has been regarded by influential leaders of public opinion in the Dominions as an emancipation from hitherto existing bonds of subordination to the United Kingdom, coupled with a definite grant to that Dominion of autonomous power and authority, also in regard to the outside world and its relations with foreign Powers.

A Common Sovereign.

According to this opinion, each Dominion is, by virtue of its self-governing constitution, created a free, independent State, with a right to international recognition by foreign Powers, but with a common connecting link between itself and Great Britain, centred in the King. This mutual connecting link should, therefore, be regarded as no more than an actual de facto personal bond, without any legal or constitutional subservience to any authority other than that of the sovereign will of the people of the Dominion concerned. According to that opinion, therefore, each Dominion, by virtue of the self-government granted it, would be on the same footing with Great Britain, as a sovereign, free, international State; and, apart from the personal bond of their common sovereign, there would be no bonds between them other than those which may from time to time be agreed upon. Therefore, all unity among the Dominions themselves and between the Dominions and Great Britain, must originate in agreement and co-operation.

This doctrine, to which I have subscribed ever since the establishment of the Union, has not been without its opponents either here or elsewhere in the Dominions. Some of you will remember how in 1918, after my address to the students here in support of this doctrine, the Government of the day, through one of its Ministers, hurried hither to refute my contention in that respect as constitutional heresy; and how, shortly afterwards, in consequence of an expression used by me assigning independence to the Union, another Minister pointed out in the House of Assembly that there was such a thing as a prison for crimes of this description!

Fears of Separation.

From this it is sufficiently clear, not only that there has been difference of opinion with regard to that doctrine, but also that this difference has at times been strong and vehement. The reason for this vehemence, no matter how much it has been toned down by time, and is bound eventually to be regarded as unreasonable if not ridiculous, originated in a sense of fear, from which we have not emerged even to-day.

That fear was, that if this doctrine of a purely personal bond were accepted, the Dominions, as well as Great Britain, would go too much their separate ways by entering into foreign relations with other States, and that in that way a conflict of interests would arise, which would ultimately lead to a discontinuance of mutual co-operation.

That that fear is not entirely without foundation may be freely admitted. But let us now examine in what way opponents, who could not identify themselves with this doctrine, tried to evade this fear.

Here we must distinguish between the period preceding the signature of the Versailles Treaty and that from 1919 to date.

Before Versailles.

So far as I am aware, the principle of independence of the Dominions, binding themselves to Great Britain by means of the personal bond of the King, was never accepted by any of the Dominion Governments as such before 1919. Whatever may have been the opinion of individual Ministers, in this or that Dominion, Governments like that of the Union carefully avoided advocating it, and never endeavoured to put it to practical test, excepting in a few instances, where, under force of circumstances, they were compelled to move in that direction and act in accordance therewith.

They were constantly possessed by the fear, to which I have just drawn attention, of the disruption of the Empire, and they knew of no means of avoiding this danger other than by the acceptance, and even the defence (as was the case with the Government here) of a status of subordination to and dependence on the United Kingdom. Not everywhere did this fear lead to the acceptance of the doctrine of subordination to such an extravagant degree as with us. But fundamentally, the attitude taken up by the various Dominion Governments has been the same, viz., rejection of individual State independence.

One of the consequences of this has been that nowhere has any attempt been made by any of the Dominions to obtain formal recognition of its international status by foreign Powers.

Britain's Attitude.

Also, that no encouragement has been given thereto by Great Britain is a matter of course. What is more natural than that she should likewise harbour the fear which the Dominions and Dominion statesmen so obviously allowed themselves to be influenced by? If these men considered it undesirable to accept the full consequences of their new status, as self-governing States, by what right could we expect that any recommendation would be made, or even encouragement given, in that direction by the British Government? Not only did the British Government abstain therefrom, but some of its leading statesmen did not hesitate to discourage any attempt in that direction.

In all fairness we should admit that, considering the opinion of the majority in the Dominions themselves, the British Government in general took up a correct attitude towards the Dominions and acted patriotically towards Great Britain. Where justice has not been done in this respect to the Dominions, the responsibility rests with the Dominions themselves and with their responsible leaders, who, sometimes, as here in South Africa, took it upon themselves to declare that we were not entitled to a measure of freedom expressly assigned to us by eminent British statesmen.

The result was that until the conclusion of the Versailles Treaty in 1919, it was in practice as well as in theory the general opinion in Government circles that the Dominions, notwithstanding the possession of self-government, were, nevertheless, subordinate to Great Britain, and had no rights in regard to matters of foreign policy.

An Awakening.

It speaks for itself, that there was no lack of experts and others to show that on legal and theoretical grounds this was exactly as it should be; that self-government to the Dominions did not in any way create these Dominions independent States, and that they could, therefore, have no right to an international status.

Meanwhile, this subordination of the Dominions to Great Britain drew more and more attention, and disclosed to an ever-increasing extent the dissatisfaction of the people of the various Dominions. When thus at the outbreak of the great world war, the Dominions suddenly appeared on the battlefields as belligerents fully armed, the international significance thereof could not be concealed, either from the Dominions themselves or from the outside world; and as the full significance thereof increased, it necessarily led to an awakening of the people, and no less of responsible statesmen, to a measure of international self-consciousness, such as never had been the case before.

"On Their Guard."

That it was therefore no longer possible to continue to accept the doctrine of Dominion subordination to Great Britain, was generally felt and accepted when the time arrived for the conclusion of peace. The Dominions, by what they had achieved during the war, had not only become fully conscious of their international status, but they had also been put on their guard, by their bitter experience and sacrifices, against being compelled to repeat these sacrifices, in the matter of a dispute to which they had been no party, and between Powers with whom they, as presumed subordinates of Great Britain, had no voice and enjoyed no right of expressing their views.

When therefore the War was at an end and peace had to be concluded, the Dominions had to decide whether, dominated by the fear of disruption of the Empire in case they accepted the status of Sovereign States, they should continue to adhere to the position of subordination, or whether they should accept the independent status of international States. Urged on by the additional fear which they had felt during the course of the war, namely, that their position of subordination might again plunge them into a war in the prevention of which they had no say, and spurred on by their awakening to national self-consciousness, the Dominions could no longer be satisfied with their former status, as hitherto exercised.

To satisfy this new insistence on more right of action in matters of foreign policy, they had necessarily to take up their stand on the basis of international freedom and independence. This was, in fact, done by the statesmen who represented them at the Peace Conference.

The course adopted by these statesmen is peculiar and deserves our attention.

This brings us to the second period—the conclusion of Peace in 1919 and thereafter.

It is clear to me that the unambiguous and sound course which our statesmen should have followed there, should have been that of the recognition of the personal bond of a common King with Great Britain, without any other legal ties, but strengthened by such further ties as historical contact, common interests, and mutual agreements, as the will of the people of each separate Dominion might have been prepared to approve of. The leaders of the Dominions at the Peace Conference were, however, not able to carry their convictions as far as that. The furthest they would go was to effect a compromise between the view-point of Dominion independence and that of Dominion subordination.

A Fictitious Super-Power.

To obtain this, the idea of the unity of the Empire group was created, according to which the Dominions, in foreign affairs, would be on the same footing as Great Britain; while at the same time no one, not even Great Britain, should have the right to act as a separate State-entity in international affairs. In order to arrive at any decision in international matters, or to take any action, it would be necessary that the group should discuss the matter as a single unit, and, as such, arrive at a decision. A doctrine was, therefore, created according to which each of the Dominions, as well as Great Britain, would be individually subordinate to the group as a fictitious State Super-Power or supreme State authority.

The question might be asked whether, according to that doctrine, the decision of the majority of the group was to be binding on the minority? There is no reference made to this anywhere. It seems to have been simply assumed that there would be no minority. The argument appears to have been: the group must decide as one unit: therefore, the group will be unanimous.

Group Unity.

On this basis the Dominion statesmen, after consultation with those of Great Britain, arrived at an agreement during the Peace Conference, and accepted the doctrine of a "free and equal status"; and when the Peace Treaty itself had to be signed, an endeavour was made to give expression thereto, in different ways, one of which at once strikes the attention. This was the manner in which the Treaty was signed by the Dominions.

The idea of the Unity of the Group, with subordination of the Dominions to the group, had, of course, to replace the old theory of unity by subordination to Great Britain, which had to be sacrificed as obsolete; and, as in the case of the rejected theory, the impelling motive for the adoption of this idea was—the fear of disintegration, accompanied by the all too anxious desire to find a preventative in what must necessarily, if adhered to, result in nothing less than a quasi federal Empire, with the highest authority vested in the Imperial Conference; where, in case of difference, Great Britain would of necessity, by virtue of her powerful world influence and world interests, be the decisive voice; while in international affairs she would be considered as the only internationally-recognized State of the Group.

In Practice.

Let us now consider whether in practice the idea of the Unity of the Group has answered its original purpose, or whether matters followed a different course, as just indicated.

The main objects it was intended to achieve were originally two:—

1. The recognition of the Dominions as independent international States.
2. The assurance of the continued existence of the Empire by united action in foreign policy.

What has become of these objects? I think I am not saying too much if I maintain that so far nothing more has been attained along the fresh path than a further obscuring of the Status of the Dominions, and an endangering of any desirable co-operation between the Dominions and Great Britain.

Portuguese Opinion.

In order to give you an opportunity of judging how far I am right, I may cite in the first place the following:—

Firstly, concerning our Status:—

We are informed in the Press that in the Portuguese Senate a question was asked on the 4th instant concerning our international Status, as the result of a statement on the subject which I had recently made in Parliament. After a certain Senator had expressed the opinion that "the Union could not be considered an independent country," the Minister for the Colonies stated that South Africa is "a Colony with large autonomy, but dependent on British Sovereignty." Portugal is an independent State, and one of the foreign Powers with whom we, as neighbours, come in most frequent contact on international matters.

This is her opinion as to our international status. We may take it for granted, therefore, that opinion is not more favourable for us in the case of other foreign Powers. In other words, notwithstanding our free and equal status with Great Britain, we remain in the eyes of the outside world subject to British sovereignty, i.e., a subordinate of Great Britain.

This also applies to all the other Dominions.

Is the Portuguese Minister correct in his statement or not? Whether he be right or wrong, it is clear that his view does not agree with the theory of our equality of status with Great Britain.

Real Status Obscured.

It will be seen therefore from the foregoing that I am justified in saying that one of the two main objects of the idea of the unity of the group, namely, the recognition by foreign Powers of the Dominions as independent international States has not been attained, and that our real status has thereby only been obscured.

The idea of the unity of the group has not, as regards the conception of our international status by foreign Powers, brought us any further than we were before 1919. To-day, as then, they repudiated our claim to an independent international status.

In the second place, I wish to examine with you the question, in how far the group unity idea proves to be conducive to the continued existence of the Empire, and therefore to what extent it answers its purpose as a remedy against disruption. Let me first of all refer to a contribution to the March number of the "Round Table" by a prominent Canadian politician, by whom, in all seriousness, the following question is put:—

"Is there a place in the British Commonwealth of Nations for Canada, if she becomes a sovereign State, precisely as Great Britain is a sovereign State?"

To which question the writer answers as follows:—

"This is the question to which Canadian nationalists want an answer. Obviously, if there is room in the British Commonwealth of Nations for Great Britain as an independent nation, but no room for any other independent nation, Canada and the other Dominions are not nations, are not equal to Great Britain, but are in fact glorified colonies pretending in the face of the world to be something which they are not."

I feel convinced that when a public man of authority in a country such as Canada feels and speaks like this, all that can be said is that the principle upon which we have been engaged in building up the Empire since 1919 is more calculated to bring about its fall than to serve as a foundation for its future existence.

Reality a Necessity.

It is clear that a Dominion such as Canada wishes to see in its equal status real international independence, and that if it is prevented under the régime of the existing group-unity idea from obtaining that independence, it will be compelled to obtain it along a different way. The national aspirations of the peoples of the young Dominions are too forceful to be satisfied with mere appearance, where the reality has become a necessity.

But apart from the question in how far the theory of the unity of the group satisfies the national demands of the Dominions, I wish to answer the question briefly as to what extent that theory has proved to be feasible in practice.

The main idea of that theory is the united action of the group—i.e., of all the Dominions together with Great Britain—in treating with foreign Powers. No Conference with a foreign Power, in which the group may be interested, may therefore take place unless all the members of the group, at least if they so desire, are represented thereon.

But it has happened more than once that the most important International Conferences have been held without proper representation thereat being granted to the Dominions.

I do not wish here to examine the reasons for this. My intention is only to state that in actual practice the two main objects of the idea of the unity of the group have proved to be failures.

Locarno.

The most convincing proof thereof we find in the Treaty of Locarno, which was recently concluded. This treaty has been entered into by the British Government in such direct conflict with the principles on which the group-unity idea is based, that it has been found necessary to exempt the Dominions from any responsibility resulting therefrom, and also to give each of the Dominions separately the option of ratifying the treaty or not.

This treaty is, for the reasons I have already stated, of such uncommon interest that nobody will be surprised that General Smuts, as an enthusiastic supporter of the group unity idea, found it necessary to utter the protest of which I have made mention in the beginning of my speech.

General Smuts is one of those with whom the idea of the unity of the group originated, and according to him this idea must serve the purpose of maintaining the unity of the Empire, and the observance of this idea in practice is, to his mind, an essential condition for the continued existence of the Empire.

Unfortunately for those who hold, as General Smuts does, it has been impossible for the British Government, in this very important case of the Locarno Conference and the Locarno Treaty, to give effect to the essential condition of that idea—joint representation and joint decision—that is, unity of action.

Group Unity Rejected.

But of much more importance still is the fact that the British Government, by acting as it has done, not only has for good rejected the idea of group unity as being impracticable, but has also, by leaving it optional to each separate Dominion to be a party to the treaty or not, recognized that the Dominions cannot be prevented from acting in international matters as independent States.

Thereby it has finally broken with the idea of the unity of the group and group sovereignty, and we have fortunately returned to the recognition of the Dominions as International States.

That this idea has had to be rejected as a constitutional principle was unavoidable, because it has proved unfeasible in practice, and because the Dominions are not prepared any longer to remain in the position of subordinates in international matters.

In international matters it is only the really independent State that counts, and under the group unity idea none of us, not even Great Britain, could lay claim to sovereign independence.

So long, therefore, as the Dominions and Great Britain have not arrived at establishing some kind of super-authority, either by means of federation or by way of unification (both of which are out of the question), the idea of group unity, if strictly carried out, can bring us, inclusive of Great Britain, to nothing but impotence and inactivity in respect of international matters.

The Back-door.

From that position Great Britain has had to save herself at the Locarno Conference, and she has saved herself in the same manner as she had done at the time of the Lausanne Conference, and afterwards again in connexion with the Dawes Conference and at Washington, namely, by going her own way independently where her interests required her to do so, notwithstanding at times the threats of Dominions that they were not prepared to enter by the back door.

Unfortunately, according to international law, the group unity allows of no other entrance for the Dominions but by the back door.

Instead of questioning, with General Smuts, the actions of the British Government in regard to the Locarno Treaty, we ought to be thankful to Great Britain for having rejected once and for all such an ineffective safeguard as group unity.

This alleged safeguard has not secured to the Dominions any freedom, equality, or a higher status, which they did not already possess by virtue of their right to and power of self-government. On the contrary, it has destroyed in practice the international recognition of the Dominions, obtained by them through the signature of the Versailles Treaty. The recognition granted to them on that occasion by all the Foreign Powers of the world has at the same time been rendered nugatory by those who initiated this group unity idea.

"Back to Versailles."

If we wish to return to a sound basis, it will be necessary for us to go back to Versailles and once more resume our recognition by the Powers of the world as independent international States. The fear that scared us from following this road of independence has been an idle fear. But not only idle. Dominated by that fear, we have taken recourse to a preventative against mutual conflict, which to-day proves to be a Nessus shirt, and which will tend more to wreck than to save the Empire.

If we are called upon, in our own interest, to preserve the good and intimate friendly co-operation between the Dominions and Great Britain, we are equally bound to maintain our international independence. There is, however, no reason whatever why the possession and maintenance of the one should occasion less guarantee for the safe preservation of the other. I maintain that just the reverse is the case. According as the Dominions realize to a greater extent their international obligations, responsibilities and dangers, the feeling of the necessity for closer and more cordial co-operation between the Dominions and Great Britain will grow and convert itself into practice.

I have, therefore, no doubt that, if we have to return to a sound basis, we can accomplish this only by accepting the doctrine of Dominion independence, based on our rights under the Constitution and recognized at Versailles by the foreign Powers of the world, and by developing on that basis any further relations between Great Britain and the Dominions, so as to give every guarantee that can be expected for permanent co-operation.

To the Outside World.

In order to act for the future in conformity with this point of view and with full international effect, something more will be required from Great Britain and the Dominions than a mere declaration of constitutional rights among themselves. That declaration will have to be formally communicated by them to the outside world.

Should any of the Dominions not be prepared to give adherence to the principle of Dominion independence, they will, of course, be free to remain constitutionally where they are or where they desire to be. But their fearfulness should not be an obstacle to those Dominions to which international independence has become an unavoidable national necessity.

STATUS OF UNION.

House of Assembly Debate.

MR. HAVENGA (Minister of Finance) moved the second reading of the Appropriation (1926-27) Bill.

GENERAL SMUTS (leader of the Opposition) requested the Premier to make a statement as to the remaining business of the session. He also asked General Hertzog what his policy was to be at the forthcoming Imperial Conference, especially in the light of his recent speech at Stellenbosch, which he (General Smuts) considered a speech of first-class importance. Much of it was contentious and much of it open to dispute, but the Premier wound up with the following conclusion, as reported in the Press:—

"In order to act for the future in conformity with this point of view, and with full international effect, something more will be required from Great Britain and the Dominions than a mere declaration of constitutional rights among themselves. That declaration will have to be communicated by them to the outside world. Should any of the Dominions not be prepared to give adherence to the principle of Dominion independence they will of course be free to remain constitutionally where they are, or where they desire to be, but their fearfulness (or hesitation) should not be an obstacle to those dominions to which international independence has become an unavoidable national necessity."

The leader of the Opposition desired to know how far this quotation from the Stellenbosch speech represented the policy of the Government. Was it the intention of the Government to raise this question of Dominion status and the external sovereignty of the Dominions at the next Imperial Conference? Apparently General Hertzog feared there would be no unanimity at the Conference on this point, and, if it were so, was it to be the policy of the Union Government, on their own responsibility, to issue a declaration to the rest of the world of the Union's external sovereignty? General Smuts hoped the House would be allowed to go into this question thoroughly before any such declaration was made.

Premier's Statement.

GENERAL HERTZOG (Prime Minister), after stating that he would make a statement on Monday as to the further course of business, said:—

So far as I am concerned, I take up the position in regard to the status of the Dominions which I have explained on previous occasions. I take up exactly the same attitude as the right hon. member for Standerton, namely, that we are all free independent States, that we are all on a footing of equality and freedom with Great Britain and any of the other Dominions. We are all free, we are all equal.

But, unfortunately, the position is this, that questions have arisen, queries have been raised, as to what is meant by the word "freedom," and especially what is meant by this word "equality." And that is a question of the utmost practical importance to-day, not only so far as we are concerned, but also so far as the other Dominions are concerned, and even Great Britain itself.

As the right hon. member for Standerton knows better than any of us, the edifice which was erected at the 1923 Conference—and General Smuts is one of the builders of that edifice, an edifice which was to serve as the basis of our equality—has lately been tumbling down. In other words, it has been found that, on the basis upon which the Dominions worked in the past, and in regard to which certain important resolutions were taken in 1922, it has been impracticable to carry on. Consequently it has been found that the course which has been followed does not lead to any practical solution of the difficulties which have arisen.

"Necessary to Go Back."

It is clear to me that at the next Imperial Conference it will be necessary to go back, and the question will have to be reconsidered whether the course followed since 1919—or, rather, the course that an attempt was made to follow—is the right course.

I believe that in that short period which has passed there have been four or five cases where the procedure laid down has proved to be inappropriate and impracticable, and it is clear to me that at the next Imperial Conference the whole question will have to be taken into consideration again. I have always maintained and I still do so that it is essential that the question should be definitely and clearly settled.

It was held in the past that the Dominions are and will be subject (ondergeskik) to the Parliament and Government of Great Britain, but that position was dealt with in 1919, when a different state of affairs is supposed to have been created. Now I say that unless a definite course is adopted, unless the course laid down in 1919 is made definite and clear, then I fear that only one thing can result, and that is that this so-called equality of ours, this so-called freedom of ours, will come to nought.

I think it is generally known to-day, it is generally felt, not only in South Africa, but in the other Dominions as well, that we are gradually drifting back to the status of inferiority, of subjectiveness (onderhevigheid), and I believe that the right hon. member for Standerton agrees with what I have just said on this matter.

In other words, it is clear that not one of the Dominions is ready to sacrifice, to give up one jot, what it has secured. (Hear, hear.) And I want to add this, that I cannot think of anything more fatal than that we should go back on the status which we have secured.

Subjectiveness.

The intimate, hearty and friendly co-operation which was aimed at in 1919, when in England and Paris the principle of unity was adopted, has so far not proved practical. And the position to-day is that so far as the individual Dominions are concerned the position is most unsatisfactory, and the pursuance of the present course, it is feared, may lead to nothing else but a subjectiveness to something, either to Great Britain or some other unit, and it is clear to me that what we want to get at is that co-operation which was aimed at, that understanding which is so absolutely necessary, and when that is achieved it will be necessary for each of us not only to say that the one is equal to the other, but to let everybody feel that we are equal.

Not only must we feel we are equal when we are sitting round the table at the Imperial Conference, discussing matters as absolute equals, but we must also make it clear that we are all free and independent and equal in our relations towards foreign nations, and we must see that it is recognized by foreign nations that the Dominions are free and equal Powers.

To Avoid a "Fatality."

I know that the fear, the nervousness of a breaking up of the Empire, led to this agreement in 1919, but it is quite clear to me, from what has happened since, that the course which is being followed now will lead to the breaking up of the Empire rather than to a state of healthy and hearty co-operation. That, I think, must be clear to every one.

The question, therefore, will arise at the Imperial Conference as to what course should be followed to prevent the fatality to which I have referred, and to my mind that fatality can only be avoided if the Dominions are regarded not merely as independent (zelfstandig) units, but if the independence of these units is recognized by the Powers outside. If we follow that course, I feel convinced we should bring about a very much sounder, a very much healthier position, and a very much more lasting position than can possibly be achieved by the course which is being followed at present, and that is how I propose to put the matter before the Imperial Conference if I am asked to do so.

Naturally, other questions will arise which will have to be dealt with in the most practical manner, but they will all have to be dealt with with a view to bringing about that object.

Dominion Co-operation.

What is the aim of the Dominions and of Great Britain in regard to co-operation? There, again, I say this, that it is in our own interest that we should have the best co-operation possible, and the most lasting co-operation possible.

General Smuts has asked whether what I said at Stellenbosch represents the policy of the Government. What I said there is my personal, definite conviction, and, so far as the Government are concerned, my colleagues know what was my view on the matter, and I have no reason to doubt, at least so far as the Nationalist members of the Cabinet are concerned, that they agree with me. And, so far as my Labour colleagues in the Cabinet are concerned, I think they share my views. But in how far it is officially the feeling of the Government, the necessity has not yet arisen for me specially to have to consult them. However, before going to the conference they will no doubt let me know in how far it is a policy with which they agree. I repeat that I have not yet officially discussed the policy with them, but I have no doubt that they are in thorough agreement with me.

Independent Action Deprecated.

What General Smuts principally wants to know is how far the Government or myself intend to have the declaration at the end of my speech at Stellenbosch discussed, or, rather, in case I should propose this at the Imperial Conference and it is negatived, what it is I intend to do afterwards, and whether we should be prepared to issue a declaration to the outside world.

In reply to that, I want to say, "No." (Hear, hear.) That would be a very wrong thing to do. If there is one thing which is necessary in achieving our purpose of hearty co-operation, it is clear we must get what we want by means of consultation with each other, and if we cannot achieve the object which we regard as the right one, then we have to try and achieve it later on.

Just as little as the course which was followed in 1919 by General Smuts has proved to be the right one, just as little may my course be the right one. But I consider at the present juncture that it is the right course along which we can get more co-operation and better understanding.

The declaration which I made was this: it is quite clear to me that the Dominions and Great Britain have agreed that the one is not in any way inferior to the other, but that they are all on a footing of absolute equality. That is the agreement which we have arrived at entre nous. But experience has taught us that although we have agreed to that, the outside world knows nothing about it, except in so far as the signing of the Covenant to the League of Nations is concerned. Beyond that, the outside world knows nothing about us as international States.

Outside Recognition.

It is only in the League of Nations and through the League of Nations that we are known as international States, but nothing beyond that, and I think the time has come that that position should be changed, and that we should not merely say among ourselves that we are independent States, on a footing of absolute equality, but that we should also make it known to the outside world. When that is done the position will be clear, and then we shall know what our relations are in the future.

We shall stand as equals under the same Crown, bound together by the history of the past, but, above all, bound together by a feeling of goodwill towards each other and by a desire to co-operate for the best and for the interests of all of us. We shall not be able to bring this about so long as there is the present great source of suspicion and friction.

That great source of suspicion, I assure you, exists not only in South Africa. I assure you, from what I have seen, that that source of suspicion and friction exists in a larger degree with some of the other Dominions.

The result to-day is this, that because our status of freedom and equality is known merely among ourselves, there is a sort of fear, of nervousness, to make our position known to the world at large. Everyone is afraid that some degree of that freedom or liberty may be lost—say, for instance, when Great Britain does something when the other Dominions cannot stand in, or when they cannot come in, and they are all nervous that they are giving away some of their rights and privileges.

Danger to the Empire.

If that sense of apprehension and nervousness is not removed, it will lead, in a comparatively short space of time, to the breaking up of the Empire. That is what I am afraid of, and to my mind this can be avoided, and it will be avoided, when that source of friction and suspicion is taken away, and it will only be taken away when it is not merely the Dominions themselves which know of our independence and freedom, but when that freedom and independence is made known to the outside world and is accepted by the outside world. When that happens we shall have a very much healthier condition of affairs than what we have to-day, and I am convinced that many of these factors which to-day lead to disunion and friction will cease to exist. (Hear, hear.)

The declaration which I had in mind was this, that, instead of us just making this equality and liberty known among ourselves, we should make it known to the outside world, and we should make the outside world realize that in future it is our wish that every one of us shall be regarded in that light. Speaking from reports from nearly every side, our experience to-day is that, because this has not been done, difficulties are continually being placed in our way. Because the outside world has not been informed what our position is, we find that to-day—and it is found by every one of the Dominions—there is an interference with the exercise of our State rights as soon as we have any relations with foreign Powers, and this is a continuous source of friction, of disunion and suspicion, which eventually must be fatal to that co-operation which we are all aiming at.

Announcement by Great Britain.

I repeat that, if the Dominions and Great Britain want this friction and this disunion to be removed, then they must, after consultation, take the necessary steps in order to bring about this announcement to the outside world which I have referred to, and there is only one way in which that can be done, and that is by Great Britain telling the outside world what our position is. That has never yet been done, and to-day we are not enjoying in the eyes of the outside world that status which in actual fact we are supposed to possess.

If we ask why such and such a Government acts in such and such a way towards us, the reply, the only one that can be, is: "Yes, it is true, you want us to do so and so, and we should like to do it, but you must not forget that we, as a nation friendly with Great Britain, cannot act towards you as you want us to do, because officially we have never been informed, and until such time as we are officially informed of what your position is we cannot do so, and we cannot treat you as an international State."

Let me say this, that that is a position which is taken up not merely by hostile States. It is the position taken up even by a country like America towards us. It cannot be otherwise. All your international customs oblige countries like America and any other State simply to ignore us until such time as England informs them of our position.

Friction and Irritation.

All these things are a continuous source of friction and irritation and suspicion. If there is one thing which should be terminated, and the sooner the better, it is this. Whatever our status may be, for Heaven's sake let it be made known to the foreign Powers. Everybody should know what our status is, and until our status is known by foreign Powers we simply do not exist as an independent State. Such an announcement can only be made with the consent of Great Britain, and to my mind it is a matter of so much importance that, unless the announcement is made, I consider that the greatest doubt will continue to prevail as to what our status is.

I am pleased to say that the question of our status has lately been receiving a good deal of attention in foreign countries. In the past the matter was discussed by several authors in well-known periodicals, but I am glad to say the matter has also been taken up by papers in other countries. So long as the position is not definitely cleared up you will get unpleasantness and friction, not only among the Dominions themselves, but also between the Dominions and Great Britain, and for that reason I say that it is in the interests of everyone that a clear and definite statement should be made. I take up the position that we stand on a footing of equality and freedom, and our future relations must be based on our free will and on a feeling of mutual understanding and trust. (Hear, hear.)

IRISH FREE STATE.

EXTRACT FROM DAIL EIREANN DEBATES OF 2ND JUNE, 1926.

MINISTER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS (Mr. Fitzgerald): Deputy Johnson asked me to give some indication as to what our attitude would be at the Imperial Conference and how we stand in regard to certain statements made by representatives of other Dominions in other places. I think I have said before that Dominion status might be described as adolescent but not entirely adult. I think equality is recognized. The non-implementation can be recognized as existing in three distinct spheres. Under one heading is the office of the Governor-General. The office originally was that of a representative of the Colonial Office, as it was then. Although the Governor-General's office has evolved entirely from that, there are still existing certain anomalies reminiscent of it. I think these anomalies should be removed. Another thing is that although the equality of status is recognized, there has been, so far as I know, practically no exercise of extra territorial powers. I think extra territorial powers should be possessed and exercised, not merely by one member of the Commonwealth, but by all co-equal members of the Commonwealth. The third general heading is that it should be made clear, beyond any doubt, not only in principle but in every detail of implementation, that in so far as the work of the Government of any individual Dominion is concerned, no one should possess power to have any say in regard to, to interfere with, or veto the work of that Dominion, except the Government of that Dominion. I think those three headings, more or less, cover every important matter that Deputy Johnson could have had in mind.

Deputy Hogan suggests that I mentioned the Imperial Conference had powers. The Imperial Conference has no powers whatsoever; but nations working together find it useful to come together at times and consider any difficulties that may arise in their so working. I do not think it has the power exactly to define matters, but where anomalies exist the representatives of the Governments have the power to agree that it is time these anomalies were done away with. I do not think they can all be done away with at any one Imperial Conference; but in friendly council the representatives of the Governments can agree that the full implementation of equality should now be exercised, in so far as it can be exercised at present, without introducing anything particularly revolutionary, but at the same time indicating the process of growth and of rapid growth.

Deputy Hogan also referred to the status of Government super-imposed on members of the British Commonwealth of Nations. The only representatives who can have anything to say in regard to Dominion status are the representatives of the Dominions, and amongst the Dominions I include Great Britain. The Deputy also referred to the predominant partner. There is no predominant partner where there is equality. There is the basic fact, namely, that Great Britain is most powerful militarily, financially, and economically; necessarily Great Britain carries most weight.

The Deputy suggested that the best way of indicating our status would be to stay away from the Conference. Unfortunately, there is the fact that one of the things we ought to look for at this Imperial Conference is that the British Government would itself take steps to make clear to the Governments of other countries what exactly the status of Dominions is, namely, that they are co-equal and that they are fully adult States exercising all the powers of States. It is rather unfortunate that should be necessary, but I think the Deputy will realize that nations and governments will accept a statement from the British Government that it recognizes us as co-equal, much sooner than they will accept the statement that we regard ourselves as co-equal. It is an unfortunate fact that the word of the man with the big gun and the big pocket should carry more weight than that of the other man; but that is so to a great extent in ordinary human nature, and it is certainly so in the life of nations.

I do not propose staying away from the Imperial Conference. I believe that very useful work can be done there. It is time the anomalies I have referred to were done away with. The anomalies exist under the three headings to which I have alluded, and which, I think, Deputy Johnson will agree, cover any points he had in mind. I have considered the thing very carefully, and I think under these three headings fall all the anomalies of the apparent infringement of our co-equal status. With regard to the International Court, perhaps it would be better if I dealt with that on the League of Nations Estimate. I move that the Committee report progress.

MINISTER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS (Mr. Fitzgerald): Last night if I had another half-minute I think I would have finished my statement. As far as I remember, I answered all the points raised, particularly by Deputy Johnson, except one, and that is one that it is practically impossible to answer. Deputy Johnson raised the point of our position in case of war. The Deputy may remember that on 5th February the same question was raised, and I said at the time that as regards actual participation, the point was covered by Article 49 of the Constitution, and as to legal or technical war, it was a thing that was very doubtful and was largely dictated by brute facts. Deputy Johnson himself, I think, pointed out that public opinion in the Dominions was tending very largely towards the assertion of a position whereby the Dominions would not be either technically or legally at war necessarily by the fact that Great Britain was at war. That is the opinion certainly, but I think so far it cannot be given as a definition. I think the whole trend of things will tend to make that opinion a fact. How far as a fact it will have any reality in the case of war it is very hard to say. It would be a valuable thing to have it established that the Free State would not be even technically at war, but from the point of view of utility the position of the Falkland Islands would be much more effective. I can only say that the general growth of opinion is towards the point maintained by Deputy Johnson, namely, that it would be possible for Great Britain to be at war and other Dominions not to be even technically at war, but I do not think that is a thing that so far can be laid down as an actual definition.

CANADA.

EXTRACT FROM CANADIAN DEBATES OF 21st JUNE, 1926.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: In conclusion I have just one other word to say bearing directly on this matter. Hon. members will have noticed that I have drawn a distinction between an obligation placed upon a government and an obligation placed upon parliament. In this instance I direct my present remarks more in the form of a question to the right hon. the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Meighen) than of any observations with respect to certain declarations which he has made on the subject of Canada's participation in foreign wars which, of course, arises out of obligations assumed through agreements, treaties or conventions.

In a speech made at Hamilton in the fall of last year my right hon. friend is reported as making a very significant statement. I hope he will correct me if in any particular I fail to give the quotation aright. I am taking the following quotation from my right hon. friend's speech as it is found reported in the Mail and Empire of Toronto, of 17th November, special to the Mail and Empire from the staff reporter at Hamilton under date of 16th November. I will not attempt to read the whole of the speech, but I will deal with the point that is pertinent to my present remarks. My right hon. friend is reported as saying:—

"If ever the time should come when the spectre of 1914 should again appear I believe it would be best not only that parliament should be called, but that the decision of the government which, of course, would have to be given promptly, should be submitted to the judgment of the people at a general election before troops should leave our shores. This would contribute to the unity of our country in the months to come and would enable us best to do our duty. It would not mean delay. Under the stress of war delay would be fatal. Let me make clear what I mean. The government would have to decide and decide quickly what was best in the interests of Canada. The government would have to act on its judgment, but before there was anything in the way of participation involving the despatch of troops the will of the people of Canada should first be obtained."

The question I wish to ask my right hon. friend is this—and I hope he will explain it when he gets up to speak—whether by that declaration he means that it shall rest solely with the government to make the decision whether or not Canada shall participate in wars or whether it shall be parliament which must approve before the further reference is made to the people as a whole in a general election. As I read my right hon. friend's remarks they are capable of two interpretations. One is that if Canada is asked to participate in a war, parliament will be summoned, but there is no obligation to place before parliament for its approval the decision taken with respect to sending troops overseas. I think my right hon. friend's remarks may be read to mean that the government itself, irrespective of parliament, will have the determination of whether or not troops are to go overseas; what the government would do would be to call parliament together very quickly and as soon as parliament is called together there will be an appeal from parliament to the people in a general election after the government has reached a decision but before it has submitted its decision to parliament for approval.

MR. MEIGHEN: I can answer that now. I never for a moment contemplated that the government would make the decision irrespective of parliament.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: Does my right hon. friend say his policy is that parliament should in the first instance approve the decision of the government?

MR. MEIGHEN: I have not said anything about the order. I simply say in answer to the direct question put to me: I never contemplated the government acting in the way of sending troops without the approval of parliament.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: That does not answer my question. I think it is due to the House that my right hon. friend should make his position clear. Let us assume for a moment that the government has reached a decision to participate in a foreign war. Will he first obtain parliamentary approval of that decision before appealing to the people in a general election?

MR. MEIGHEN: If the people have to be appealed to, it is perfectly worthless to appeal to parliament first. The people will decide and parliament, when elected, will approve.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: Now we see exactly what my right hon. friend means. He does not mean to ask the approval of parliament, the representatives of the people, with respect to our participation in foreign wars.

MR. MEIGHEN: Not at all.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: I beg his pardon. His answer is not capable of any other interpretation. He will call parliament together but he will not say that he will submit to the approval of parliament the decision that the government has reached with respect to participation in foreign wars.

MR. MEIGHEN: I did not say that at all.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: I ask my right hon. friend again. Will he answer the specific question? I will put a concrete case to him. Under the Locarno Agreement let us assume that the government has decided that troops are to be sent to France or Germany. Will my right hon. friend say that if he has decided that troops are to go, when he calls parliament together he will submit that question to parliament and abide by the decision of parliament before he makes his appeal to the electorate?

MR. MEIGHEN: I have answered the question already, but my answer is only being misinterpreted and the Prime Minister had better finish his speech.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: My right hon. friend has not answered the question.

MR. MEIGHEN: Yes, I have.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: Well, Mr. Speaker, I direct the attention of the House and the country to the tactics of my right hon. friend at the present moment. I will read the language again so that hon. members will see his position exactly. He said:—

Let me make clear what I mean. The government would have to decide, and decide quickly, what was best in the interests of Canada. The government would have to act on its judgment—

Not parliament, but the government—my right hon. friend and his executive—would have to act on their judgment.

—but before there was anything in the way of participation involving the despatch of troops the will of the people of Canada should first be obtained.

In other words, my right hon. friend is declaring in this speech that should there be war in any part of the world, he will take good care to see that this parliament, the representatives of the people assembled in parliament, do not have to approve the action of the government before it makes an appeal to the electorate, but he will precipitate a khaki election after the government has reached its decision, and allow a condition of affairs to arise at a time of war abroad which might be equivalent to civil war itself in parts of the Dominion at a moment when the nation should be united and view the matter with the greatest care and the greatest caution. I say, Mr. Speaker, that my right hon. friend owes it to this House to make the position of the great party which he leads a little plainer to the people of Canada than he has made it this afternoon. The resolution which the House is being asked to pass will make it clear, no matter what may be in the mind of my right hon. friend, that before this country participates in a foreign war parliament must be assembled and its approval obtained to the sending abroad of troops to take part in the war.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I submit that in this policy we are asserting the supremacy of parliament. Two or three years ago my right hon. friend took the position that we should not even wait for parliament if a call came to us to participate in a war overseas, but that we should say, "Ready, aye, ready"—get right into the fight.

MR. MEIGHEN: Mr. Speaker the Prime Minister is not only misrepresenting me, but he is doing so intentionally.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: I am not doing anything of the kind.

MR. MEIGHEN: Yes.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: Then I will leave it to my right hon. friend to tell us whether when he said, "Ready, aye, ready" he meant we should be "Ready, aye, ready." I am quite prepared that in that extreme as in the other his position shall remain in the doubtful category in which he has placed it himself.

MR. MEIGHEN: We are not children.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: I have no desire to get into a controversy in this matter. As I said at the beginning, I only wish to state the position in the clearest possible way. I asked my right hon. friend for an explanation of the words which he used, but I have not yet been able to get from him an explanation which the country will regard as satisfactory. Let me say, Mr. Speaker, with regard to the position of the present administration and of the Liberal party, that whatever may be the position of my right hon. friend and of those who surround him, on this grave question of the obligation of the country to participate in foreign wars, we declare that in regard to the ratification of treaties, conventions or agreements involving military or economic sanctions we stand first, last and always for approval in the first instance by the parliament of Canada. We do not take the extreme of ignoring parliament in one way or the other. We believe that parliament stands as the one body representative of the nation as a whole, and we believe that by having it understood in advance that on all these great questions parliament will be consulted and its approval obtained, we will be helping to maintain without possibility of division or difference the relations between the different parts of this great empire, and that in the most effective way we will be able to further unity within our own country and unite within the British Empire as well.

EXTRACT FROM HOUSE OF LORDS PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES OF
27TH JULY, 1926.

LORD BALFOUR: Another point on which the noble Lord* questioned me was that of the Imperial Conference, and he asked me about the dates. I understand that the Prime Minister is to make a statement in the very near future and I need not anticipate that. I have little doubt myself that for the convenience of the Dominions the date will have to be deferred to after 5th October, but I leave the Prime Minister to say exactly what the last arrangements are that we have arrived at in conjunction with the Dominions.

The noble Lord* ended by raising the point of the relations in which the Dominions stood to us in case of difficulty and asked me whether that question will come up. It will certainly come up if any of the Dominions desire it, and I think there can be little doubt that the subject will be touched upon. Perhaps I had better say no more on the subject. My own personal view is that the relations are those necessarily of equality. None of us conceive that of these conglomeration of free States one is above the other. One may have more responsibility than another, one may be in more dangers than another, one may be closer to the centre of international complications than another, but all are on an equality. That is the very essence, as I understand it, of the British Empire. As to exactly what that equality involves, as to exactly what degree of responsibility each has for the other, on that I personally think very little is gained by refining, discussing or defining. I should say that as far as this country is concerned we are bound to go to war to defend any part of this Empire which is in danger. Personally I think the duties of all the other members of the Empire to us are not less than our duties to them, but, as to the particular conditions under which that great duty is to be exercised, I do not believe anything is gained by inventing hard cases beforehand.

Our plain duty is to defend the Empire of which we are so important a part. That duty, I hope and believe, we shall always carry out and it is also our duty—I am sure I speak for the Government in this respect—to bring them into our councils as far as that is possible. There are what I might almost call mechanical difficulties in certain kinds of consultation—difficulties of time and space which no scientific discoveries will wholly enable us to eliminate. Time and space inevitably come into these considerations, but we desire to give them the fullest information as to the motives which animate our policy. We desire to bring them with us on every possible occasion. We desire that the unbreakable bond which unites us together shall carry with it that mutual confidence, that constant interchange of ideas, that harmony of ideas and ends which, after all, are the great basis and strength of the Empire. As to how far these general maxims—perhaps you might call them platitudes—and in what way, they will be dealt with by the various elements of the Empire when they meet together towards the end of October I am unable to say, but I confidently hope and believe that the political instincts, identical in character, identical in aim, which spring from the fact that we have all been brought up under common traditions and with common political instincts, will carry us through all the difficulties of discussion and, when the occasion arises, through all the perils and perplexities of action.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY DEBATES.

THE PRIME MINISTER:

I wish to quote one passage from the report of the proceedings of the Imperial Conference which I think states the position quite clearly. At the section dealing with Conference resolutions on page 13, this official paragraph occurs. This is the paragraph:—

"This Conference (that is, the Imperial Conference) is a Conference of representatives of the several Governments of the Empire. Its views and conclusions on foreign policy (and, of course, on everything else) as above recorded are necessarily subject to the action of the Governments and Parliaments of the various portions of the Empire, and it trusts that the results of its deliberations will meet with their approval."

I hope the hon. member agrees with that.

MR. CRESWELL: Certainly.

THE PRIME MINISTER: Well, sir, these words were written by me. These words were moved by me and inserted into this report. We had a controversy during the Conference as to the nature of the Conference, as to its position in the Empire, and after this controversy had been going on for some time, I moved in these words as an amendment. They were unanimously accepted by the representatives of the various Dominions and the representatives of the British Government, and they stand here as an official record of the nature of the Imperial Conference and the binding character of the resolutions taken by them. I quoted this to show the Hon. Member that about the constitutional position there is no doubt whatever. If there were any doubt whatever about the constitutional position of the Imperial Conference, these words that were moved into the report and accepted unanimously, I think, removed for ever any doubt that may have attached to the position.

MR. LAPOINTE:—

May I say, while on this subject, a word or two about the recent Imperial Conference.

I am glad that this last Conference vindicated the idea that led to these gatherings, namely, that they are conferences merely and by no means an executive committee. These gatherings are intended to allow various British Prime Ministers to meet together and confer, exchanging views and communicating opinions, wishing one another well, trying to help one another, but preserving all the time each his own personal individuality. And it should be so; any attempt to transform these conferences into a body with more power would be a step towards destruction.

In view of certain statements which were made by one or two of the delegates to the last Conference after the result of the recent British elections, I think it is well that we should express our own views in the matter. They are mistaken who believe that the decision of any such conference is binding, either upon the Dominions or upon Great Britain herself. The Parliament of Canada will never subscribe to this doctrine, and it does not expect the Parliament of Great Britain to subscribe to it either. Those decisions are not any more binding when they relate to fiscal matters or Imperial preference than when they relate to naval or other policies. It is preposterous to think that the people of Great Britain could be bound to a policy which they might have rejected at the polls by an overwhelming vote. Canadians would resent any contention that an Imperial Conference might interfere with our mode of raising revenue; and surely we must admit that the people of Great Britain have the same right.

CANADA'S CONSTITUTIONAL POWERS.

Mr. Mackenzie King:—

My honourable friend spoke about questions of foreign policy. I took the position at the Imperial Conference that Canada had matters of foreign policy which were pretty largely exclusively of her own concern; that the greater part of our foreign policy was concerned with questions affecting our neighbours immediately to the south, and that it was for us to decide those questions and to act on our own initiative. That point was never disputed, never questioned for one moment. There are other obligations which Canada has of an international character, which are larger and wider in their bearings and ramifications, and which may affect other parts of the British Empire. In those circumstances, surely we would expect to give the same treatment as we would expect to have meted out to us, namely, to consult with other parts that may be affected before final action is taken. Let me read the statement which the Conference made in regard to foreign policy. It will be found at page 13:

"This Conference is a conference of representatives of the several governments of the Empire" (Mr. Woodsworth).

Stating in so many words the position of equality of status which has been referred to by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Lapointe).

"Its views and conclusions on foreign policy, as recorded above, are necessarily subject to the action of the governments and parliaments of the various portions of the Empire."

That is as emphatic a declaration as anything can be that with respect to foreign policy the matters discussed at the Imperial Conference are not binding in any particular on this country and on this Parliament, unless our Government and Parliament so agree.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

EXTRACTS FROM OFFICIAL REPORT OF DEBATE IN THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, 27TH MARCH, 1924, ON THE IMPERIAL AND ECONOMIC CONFERENCES, 1923.

MR. BRUCE: One other point to which I wish to refer in connexion with the Imperial Conference is the necessity for the holding of such Conferences at as frequent intervals as possible. It would be desirable that a Conference should be held every year, but for the fact that the different parts of the Empire are scattered over the seven seas. They should certainly be held at least every two years. It is important that there should be more continuity between the holding of these Conferences. At the present time a secretariat is really brought into being for each Imperial Conference. It is a secretariat responsible to the Conference as a whole, but responsible also to a British Department. That places the great self-governing Dominions of the Empire in a wrong position. They should have a secretariat responsible, not to the British Government, or to any British Department, but to the whole of the self-governing parts of the Empire. We have a very admirable example of what is required in the War Graves Commission, which is functioning at the present time. That body is not responsible to any one part of the Empire. It draws its finances and personnel from all parts of the Empire, and is responsible to the Prime Ministers of every one of the self-governing Dominions and of Great Britain. That is a better position, and one which I suggest would be more appropriate to the prestige and position of each of the self-governing Dominions represented at an Imperial Conference. It would further have the advantage that it would give continuity between such Conferences, so that on subjects discussed and questions raised there would be continuity between the proceedings of successive Conferences, and one would not have to begin again something which had reached a definite stage as the result of the proceedings of an earlier Conference. I believe there is some prospect that in the near future a secretariat of that character, entirely free of control and interference by any British Department, will be established. At the last Conference the time was not quite ripe for such a development, but the indications were that very soon some such change would be brought about.

MR. MAXWELL: What would be the size of the secretariat?

MR. BRUCE: It would be quite a small body, consisting probably of one representative from each of the Dominions.

I now come to the question of communication and consultation between the British and Dominion Governments on subjects of foreign policy when Imperial Conferences are not sitting. If we were so geographically situated, or our methods of communication were so advanced that the members of these Governments could at all times have personal consultation, the difficulty would be solved. But at the present moment we cannot obtain that full and absolute consultation which is so desirable. The necessity for consultation arises in this way: A policy which is the right one at the moment may be agreed to. But circumstances may change, necessitating a different line of action. That is what creates the need for frequent consultation. The practice of consultation was established when the right of direct communication was given by the Prime Minister of Britain to all the Dominions. An undertaking was given that communications concerning foreign policy would be cabled to the Dominions and would be supplemented by despatches sent by every mail. That system is now operating, and up to a certain point is giving satisfactory results. At the present time the Prime Minister of one of the Dominions receives as much information concerning foreign affairs as does a Cabinet Minister in Britain. But there is a difficulty when the atmosphere surrounding a question changes slowly. It is seen—only by the Foreign Secretary possibly—that some change will take place. He discusses the matter with the Prime Minister, and perhaps two or three other Ministers. Eventually the Cabinet considers it. But it may then happen that the Cabinet's decision must be given at once and that it is too late to consult the Dominions. In that regard, the present method of consultation is weak. Among the suggestions for improving it is the appointment of a Resident Minister. While at home I examined that suggestion exhaustively, and I found that the difficulties in the way of its adoption were at present insurmountable. There is the difficulty of sparing a Minister of the calibre needed to represent worthily Australian opinion. There is also the difficulty that if the Resident Minister expressed any opinion it might be claimed that he had spoken for his Government, and that we might be held not entitled to offer any protest later. I do not believe that the appointment of a Resident Minister in London would be an improvement upon our present arrangements. When Australia has developed more, it may be deemed necessary to have a representative in Britain to deal with foreign affairs, but he would act more as an Ambassador than as a Minister or High Commissioner. Sir Robert Garran, who rendered invaluable services while away with me, spent a good deal of his time in the Foreign Office, gathering information concerning the methods and machinery now operating, and as a result I believe the present system will be improved. I arranged with Mr. Ramsay MacDonald that he should release to Australia for a period of six months Mr. Alex. Leeper, an Australian, at present employed in the Foreign Office. This officer has had a very distinguished career in the Foreign Office, and is a son of Dr. Leeper, of Melbourne. I think Mr. Leeper's presence in Australia will help to put the foreign office branch of our Prime Minister's Department on the best possible basis, and will assist us in many of the problems that we have to face. It may also result in some arrangement whereby there will be an increased flow of Australians into the Foreign Office. At present there are only three Australians on the Foreign Office staff. I think that number could be increased. It would be a very good opening for men of the type of Rhodes scholars, who would be very useful in putting the Dominion's views before the Foreign Office.

IX. IMPERIAL CONFERENCE, 1926. STATEMENTS IN THE DOMINIONS AS TO REPORT OF THE INTER-IMPERIAL RELATIONS COMMITTEE.

D. 430/27

No. 140.

EXTRACTS FROM A SPEECH MADE BY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE W. L. MACKENZIE KING ON THE 13TH DECEMBER, 1926, DURING THE DEBATE ON THE ADDRESS IN REPLY TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SPEECH AT THE OPENING OF THE SESSION.

Perhaps this is an appropriate moment for a new statement as to the position of the Governor-General. In this connexion I was a little surprised at the suspicion with which my honourable friend was inclined to view a reference to the Crown in the Report of the Imperial Conference Committee. He asked very pointedly whether there was any ulterior motive, or if there was anything behind the plain statement of fact which appears in its pages. I may say to my honourable friend that the reason the statement was made so plain was to prevent the possibility of anyone having an ulterior idea with respect to any phase of the subjects to which it relates. I might just read to the House the statement contained in the report with reference to the position of the Governor-General. The pertinent words are as follows:—

The Governor-General of a Dominion is the representative of the Crown, holding in all essential respects the same position in relation to the administration of public affairs in the Dominion as is held by His Majesty the King in Great Britain, and that he is not the representative or agent of His Majesty's Government in Great Britain, or of any department of that Government.

I think that is a statement with which every honourable member of this House will be in hearty accord. My honourable friend asked if there was any particular reason why the word "Crown" should be substituted for the word "King." I may say that I was not aware of a thought in the mind of anyone that a substitution was being made; in fact, in the one sentence both words are used:—

—the representative of the Crown holding in all essential respects the same position in relation to the administration of public affairs in the Dominion as is held by His Majesty the King in Great Britain—

My honourable friend in the course of his remarks drew attention to the fact that some old documents refer to the queen, having reference to the Victorian era. Possibly the word "Crown" was put there in order to stand for either king or queen. I can assure my honourable friend that from any discussion I heard at the Conference, and from what took place there, there was not in the mind of anyone, so far as I am aware, the slightest desire to have the Crown mean other than the ruling sovereign, be he King George or any of his successors, and be they kings or queens.

The important point of that paragraph, the significant feature of it, is that which makes perfectly clear that the Governor-General in Canada is the personal representative of His Majesty; that he is in the truest sense of the word, a viceroy; that he is not the representative of the Government or of any department of the Government of Great Britain. That is the important feature of that particular statement and I am sure there is reason for feelings of pride in the breast of every citizen of this Dominion that a statement to that effect should be made in unqualified terms. Indeed, the paragraph immediately preceding gives the reason why the statement is made as clearly as it is. It reads:—

That position—that is the position of Governor-General—though now generally well recognized—that is as the representative of His Majesty in the Dominion—undoubtedly represents a development from an earlier stage when the Governor-General was appointed solely on the advice of His Majesty's Ministers in London and acted also as their representative.

In our opinion it is an essential consequence of the equality of status existing among the members of the British Commonwealth of Nations that the Governor-General of a Dominion is the representative of the Crown, holding in all essential respects the same position in relation to the administration of public affairs in the Dominion as is held by His Majesty the King in Great Britain.

MR. BENNETT: I do not like to interrupt, but perhaps the right honourable gentleman would not mind if I asked him this question. Does he mean the Crown in right of the Dominion, and is the appointment of a Governor-General to be made on the recommendation of His Majesty's Ministers in Canada or His Majesty's Ministers in London? That is a development of the proposition with which he is now dealing.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: I was coming to that. The point that I wished to make perfectly clear in the first instance was this: That within the British Empire, in the so-called Self-Governing Dominions, there has been a distinct constitutional development, or evolution, whatever term one prefers to use, from the status of Crown Colony to that of a Self-Governing Dominion. In the case of a Colony a Governor-General is sent out as the representative, not merely of the Crown, but of the British Government: he receives his instructions from the British Government or some department of that Government as its agent, and he acts as an agent of the British Government.

In a Self-Governing Dominion the position is different: the Governor-General in a Self-Governing Dominion is constitutionally in identically the same position in relation to the affairs of the particular country to which he comes as His Majesty the King is in relation to the affairs of Great Britain. He is not, any more than is His Majesty the King in Great Britain, an agent of the Government or a representative of the Government or any department of the Government of Great Britain. The Governor-General in a Self-Governing Dominion such as Canada, represents His Majesty the King alone. From now on there can be no question as to his not representing the Government or any department of the Government of Great Britain.

As to the matter of the selection of Governor-General I am not wholly familiar with the methods that have been adopted heretofore. I am inclined to believe that what the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Guthrie) surmised this afternoon, namely that the Government of Great Britain, before making an appointment, conferred with the Prime Minister of the day either by written or oral communication and made the appointment only after such conference, is the method that has been followed, at least in recent years. Speaking of what took place with respect to the appointment of the present Governor-General, I do not think I am betraying any secret which I should not, when I say that the British Prime Minister did confer with me as Prime Minister of Canada with respect to that particular appointment, and that the distinguished gentleman who is at the present time filling the position of Governor-General was heartily approved of by myself in correspondence with the Prime Minister of Great Britain before the appointment was made.

I do not think the British Government would, for one moment, contemplate recommending the appointment of a Governor-General to Canada who was not persona grata to the Ministry in office in Canada at the time of the appointment. It will, I think, be time enough to raise the question as to whether we are to draw hard and fast lines between the British Government and our own in the matter of the ultimate selection of a Governor-General when any difference threatens between the British Government and our own over the matter of an appointment. I have not the least doubt that the Government of Great Britain would not think of suggesting the appointment and, in virtue of the statement that is here laid down so emphatically, will not hereafter attempt to recommend the appointment of a Governor-General to this Dominion without the approval of the Prime Minister—and that I take it means the Cabinet—of this country before the appointment is made.

I come now to the remarks of my honourable friend (Mr. Guthrie) with respect to the Imperial Conference. I confess that I was somewhat surprised at the comments he made upon and the questions he asked in relation to the Conference. He seemed extremely critical of the results that had been achieved. I would remind him as well as honourable gentlemen opposite that the criticisms he has directed, apparently at my colleague and myself, apply in equal measure to the representatives of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland, and Great Britain, inasmuch as every resolution that appears and every line of the Report has the unanimous approval of all the representatives at that Conference. When my honourable friend suggests that possibly there has been some ulterior motive in the use of the word "Crown" instead of the word "King," when he finds possibilities of disruption of the Empire in other sections of the Report, he is adversely criticizing the Prime Minister of Great Britain; he is criticizing Lord Balfour, the Leader of the British Government in the House of Lords; he is criticizing the Foreign Secretary of Great Britain. In a word, he is criticizing every member of the British Government and every one of the representatives of the other Dominions who took part in the Conference. If my honourable friend will for a moment forget altogether the political bias which he may feel he is expected to show to some extent, and will look at the Report as all those who were present at the Imperial Conference certainly looked at it, he will realize that what is therein embodied expresses only what the representatives of every part of the Empire, after the fullest and most careful examination, felt to be in the interests of all concerned. That is the point I wish first of all to impress upon my honourable friend. The second point to which I would call attention is the contradictory character of his comments with respect to the question of equality of status. As I listened to his remarks it seemed to me that the first part of his speech was an effort to show that nothing had been attained which had not been accepted for some time. I gathered that in his view Sir Wilfrid Laurier had contended that Canada had the fullest rights of self-government in all particulars; that there was equality of status with the Mother Country so far as this Dominion was concerned. He contended also that Sir Robert Borden had taken that position; at any rate I think Sir Robert Borden would wish to have it known that he had so held. The whole argument of my honourable friend at the beginning was to the effect that, after all, statements made with respect to equality of status constituted simply an affirmation of a position which Canada had maintained as already established. Then in the last part of his address the honourable gentleman's effort seemed to be directed to showing that there was no such thing as equality of status. The position he took was that there could not be equality of status inasmuch as England was very much larger, more powerful and much more influential than the Dominion of Canada. In his view, therefore, the talk about equality of status was all nonsense. Now, with all due respect to my honourable friend I suggest that he has confused in his own mind the terms "status" and "stature." Status and stature are not the same thing. Bigness, extent of power, and the like are all matters of stature and not of status, for status has nothing whatever to do with size. Status has to do with rights enjoyed within certain limits. Perhaps I might offer an illustration. Every honourable member of this House, whether he be the youngest member and one who has entered parliament for the first time or the oldest parliamentarian like yourself, Mr. Speaker, enjoys an equality of status with every member. There is not one member of parliament who as member has any greater right than any other. Some, it is true, may perform different functions, may for the time being fill one position or another; one may be exercising the function of a Minister of the Crown and another the function of the Leader of the Opposition; but each is, so far as his status goes, a member of the House of Commons of Canada, representing the people of the particular constituency which has returned him here, and each constituency is entitled to the same measure of representation in this House of Commons. Every constituency has the same right to representation in this parliament, quite regardless of the individual stature or importance in other particulars of its representative. That is precisely the view the Imperial Conference has taken with respect to Great Britain and the Self-Governing Dominions; it is not a question of size; it is not a question of power or of might, but a question of the rights of each of the self-governing communities with respect to the control of their own domestic and external affairs. With regard to the domestic and external affairs of this Dominion, the Imperial Conference has said that in the opinion of its members, those rights of control are just as full and complete with respect to Canadian affairs as are the rights of the British Government in respect of the domestic or external affairs of Great Britain. Now I should like to know, Mr. Speaker, is there any honourable member of this House who would have the position any different. Does my honourable friend wish us to be in a position of subordination? I will come to that in a moment.

Before I come to that, however, in order to reassure my honourable friend and any other timid souls as to how far they are being involved in virtue of anything that has been done, I would like to recall what my honourable friend said as to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's attitude, when he attended an Imperial Conference. Sir Wilfrid took the position that he was attending a conference and not a cabinet. Let me say that that was the position which my colleague and myself took very firmly from first to last throughout this Conference and that was the position I took at the previous Conference. I recall very well at the Conference of 1923 urging strongly that that point should be made clear in the Report of the Conference itself, that the Conference was not a cabinet laying down policies of government for the Empire, but that it was simply what from its name it purported to be, namely a body of gentlemen representing different governments, who had met to confer together, to come as far as possible to a consensus of opinion and then report the result of their joint deliberations together with their recommendations, back to the governments and parliaments which they had been sent to represent. Expression is given in the Summary of proceedings of the Imperial Conference of 1923 to that position. It will be found on page 13 of the printed proceedings (Canadian edition) as follows:—

This Conference is a conference of representatives of the several governments of the Empire; its views and conclusions on foreign policy, as reported above, are necessarily subject to the action of the Governments and Parliaments of the various portions of the Empire, and it trusts that the results of its deliberations will meet with their approval.

That was the position taken in 1923 and that position was again taken at the recent Conference. It was a conference of representatives of the different governments, and everything that Conference did, before it begins to bind a single part of the Empire, is subject to the approval of not only the governments but also the parliaments of the different parts of the Empire. It is the intention, Mr. Speaker, of the Government to set apart one day or two days, or longer, if so desired, for the discussion of the Proceedings of the Conference, meanwhile I wish to assure honourable members of the House that in no particular has the hand of a single member been bound with respect to any matter which appears in the report of the proceedings. The Report represents what the representatives assembled in London were led to believe or came to believe was a true statement of the position of affairs at the present time, and as it was desirable they should hereafter be known to be. If this Parliament takes a different view from that of the representatives of the governments at the Imperial Conference, it is quite within the power of Parliament to so express itself. I may say to my honourable friend that the Government intends to put the Report before this House just as it appears, and to recommend its adoption. If my honourable friend has any resolution to offer in amendment, we welcome his amendment, and ask him to debate it with us on the floor of the House. As it stands, however, we believe that this document expresses in the best possible form what is a matter of common opinion and agreement between all parts of the British Empire, and we believe that as such it will help make for greater concord and greater unity within the Empire.

Empire Co-operation.

It is simply as a son of South Africa that I wish to say a few words. First to give you the assurance that, not only as far as I am concerned, but I give it you—although I have not consulted my friends (Mr. T. Roos and Mr. Beyers) to my right yet—so we may, perhaps, speak out of two mouths again, but I am quite prepared to take the risk and to say that as to the co-operation between the various constituent elements of the Empire you need have no fears. (Cheers.) Further, if ever that co-operation was assured it has been assured through the declaration to which the chairman referred. People may say what they like but I say—and I do so with the greatest emphasis because I know that what I say is going to be the case if it is not so already—that the declaration of the Imperial Conference means the greatest measure of co-operation—willing co-operation—between the various elements of the Empire, and through that the Empire is going to be assured of its continued existence in a manner in which it could not have been assured in any other way—(cheers)—because there are matters which only the free will of nations can assure, and you cannot get the free will of nations to assure that unless they feel that the exercise of that will is free. That is what we have been assured of through the declaration issued by the Imperial Conference.

A New South African Spirit.

Now with regard to the co-operation in South Africa I feel assured that with that declaration a new spirit—a new South African spirit—if it has not already been born, is going to be born very shortly and is going to be the reigning spirit for the future in South Africa. (Cheers.) Through the declaration the main causes of difference between the two great races in South Africa have been removed, and have been removed permanently. The old differences cannot possibly return because their causes were due to the want of national freedom in South Africa. When, from time to time, the two races came into conflict it was because the one was searching to have that national freedom established, while the other was trying to have that national freedom curbed, because it did not look upon it as consistent with what it considered its own national freedom. The resolutions of the Imperial Conference have done away with that, for they state that there is only one national freedom which shall be common to every South African.

CAUSES OF FRICTION REMOVED.

A New Political Life.

Well, I feel sure that the real causes of friction between the two sections have been removed—those which existed directly and those which followed indirectly from what I have said here this evening, with the result that I foresee that no long time is going to pass before we shall have, and must inevitably have, in South Africa a totally new adaptation of our life, especially our political life, in South Africa.

And let me say I think that I only voice the feeling of every South African when I say we shall all be heartily glad when that day does arrive. (Applause.)

I think we have all felt, and we have given expression to it very often already, that we are just beginning to tire of the constant bickering which leads to nowhere. (Applause.) It has been going on for, well, not several years; you may say for the last ten years or more; and it is time, if we are really, as a nation, to attain to the great end for which we all believe South Africa is destined, to have more in common with the national South African spirit than we have proved to have had up to to-day.

A Great Conference.

If what I have said this evening is true, or is going to become true, we shall always have reason to think with the greatest gratitude of the Imperial Conference of 1926. (Applause.)

I do not think that even your Chambers of Commerce, standing outside the pale of politics and party politics, will fail to appreciate it. With these few words, I again wish to thank you very heartily. I feel here this evening what I felt and what I said to my friend who accompanied me—when I received those cables of what South Africa was thinking of the declaration of the Imperial Conference. I feel again—a new spirit has already been inaugurated in South Africa, and we need have no fear as far as the future is concerned. (Applause.)

No. 142.

EXTRACT FROM A SPEECH MADE BY GENERAL HERTZOG AT A LUNCHEON GIVEN IN HIS HONOUR AT CAPE TOWN ON 13TH DECEMBER, AS REPORTED IN THE CAPE TIMES OF 14TH DECEMBER, 1926.

I HAVE been welcomed here, and am being welcomed this afternoon mainly, as has been said, because of my return from the Imperial Conference, and mention has been made of the excellent results of the Imperial Conference. I must say I am just a little in doubt as to what to think of all this. On my voyage I received news, radios—and if there is anything to spoil a voyage nowadays it is your radios—at any rate, your radios constantly informed me that in South Africa it was very strenuously maintained that nothing at all was achieved at the Imperial Conference which was not there before.

A Matter of Premises.

Now I think that that is right. But I also think the other one is right—what you have maintained here this afternoon—that excellent results have been obtained from the Imperial Conference. It is all a matter of the premises from which you start; and then you can come to any conclusion.

The two parties arriving at different conclusions, I have no doubt, are perfectly sincere; it is only in the variation of the premises from which they start. Whether I am one or the other does not matter, as long as I come to my own conclusion. (Laughter.)

In the first place, as I have already said, you are perfectly right, that excellent results have been attained by the Imperial Conference; but let me please here say again what I said this morning—do not let it go forth that I claim any prominent part in what has been achieved; certainly not a more prominent part than that of the different Premiers who were there, who did their very best to arrive at the very best results during that period.

Of the Utmost Importance.

I think that nobody can deny that what has been achieved at the Imperial Conference is of the very utmost importance to every Dominion, and not only to every Dominion, but let me say to the Empire itself.

Perhaps you may have noticed that I use the word Empire here this afternoon with more ease, shall I say, than ever before in my life—(applause)—and that is because I have no fear of that Empire any longer; and the reason why I have no fear of that Empire any longer is because of what has been done and achieved by the Imperial Conference. (Hear, hear.)

A DEFINITE CLEARNESS.Empire Under the Microscope.

The Imperial Conference has done this, gentlemen, which I consider to be the greatest work that has ever been done by any Imperial Conference—it has brought things to a definite clearness, and even the word Empire has not escaped the fate of being put under the microscope, and being analysed and properly defined and discriminated as to what it is and what it shall be in the future.

A Tremendous Service.

Because this has been done, proceeded the Prime Minister, I think you will feel, as everyone in South Africa will feel, that a tremendous service has been done to the cause of every Dominion, but especially to the cause of Empire. That I feel will be the common feeling of the whole of South Africa, if not to-day, within a very short time, when they come to realize what it is that is to be conveyed by that term.

Antagonist of Imperialism.

You must not think I am talking party politics, but in order to make things clear it is just as well that I should refer a little to the past. All my life I have been an antagonist of Imperialism and certainly a very lukewarm worshipper of the Empire. And no wonder! If I were asked to-day to do it, I could never consent to an organism, a State organism, which was to be a super-organism imposed as a super State authority above the sovereign will of the people of any of the Dominions. And the manner in which that Empire was represented to us in the past, namely, that the Empire should mean an authority to which the will of the people of the Dominions—yea, even the will of the people of Great Britain—should be subordinate, was such that I have always submitted that I cannot accept such a position, and I cannot approve of any Empire in that sense.

What has the Imperial Conference done? Among other things, it has declared that that conception of Empire shall never be what Empire will mean in the history of the British Empire in the future. It has declared most clearly that the will of every Dominion and each Dominion, as also the will of Great Britain, shall be the only dominant and ruling factor for any one of the seven nations composing the Empire.

Empire and Commonwealth.

The word "Empire" is used in that declaration which has been issued by the Imperial Conference, and it is said here that we are all autonomous nations within the Empire. You must also have noticed that all these autonomous nations are fully associated in the British Commonwealth of Nations. What is here meant by the British Empire? What is meant by the British Commonwealth of Nations? They are meant merely to serve as two terms, the latter to apply to all the self-governing members of the British Empire, that is to say, England and the six Dominions. The "British Empire" is the term to be applied to all those six, and including India and Rhodesia and other parts which are not self-governing parts of the Empire.

No Other Path.

In this sense I say again I have no longer the least fear of the term "British Empire," and, what is more, I maintain, and shall maintain, that for the Dominions, as for Great Britain, there is no other path along which the interests of each individual associated State, and the interests of them all, can be and will be better attended to and better safeguarded, than within that group. (Applause.)

IF THE EMPIRE IS TO REMAIN.

Each Free to Do What it Will.

It has been so often said that if you accept what General Hertzog proposes to want then the Empire will be disrupted. I have always maintained the very opposite, that if you want the Empire disrupted tell the Dominions and Great Britain that the will of the sovereign peoples of these various states is bound and defined by the will of any other institution. I don't care whether you call it Empire.

If you want that Empire to remain and to be really strong and based on the will of the people constituting that Empire, then let the people of that Empire understand that each of its members is free to do what it will. In other words, to quote the words of the Imperial Conference, "each member is master of his own destiny."

It is because I am so convinced that this is going to be accepted by every one of the Dominions, and that every man in South Africa—as well as in the other Dominions—is going to feel perfectly satisfied that he and his country are free, that I have always maintained that this is a solution which will be sought after, and I am only too glad to see that that solution has been adopted in every respect by the Imperial Conference. (Hear, hear.)

The Conference has achieved much. I have just pointed out that it has made clear what the word "Empire" means, and what "Empire" shall mean in the future, and then it has gained the goodwill and co-operation of the peoples of the Empire as it has never done before. (Hear, hear.) But it has also done something much more by clarifying the position.

Quarrels of the Past.

How many of our quarrels of the past have been quarrels as to what was and what was not? In fact I was entertained on board the steamer this morning by one of our journalists recounting to me how, immediately after the declaration of the Imperial Conference, you in South Africa started arguing as to what was and what was not, and that after fighting out one idea with a great deal of passion and to the satisfaction of nobody, another question was started as to what was and what was not.

But on all these points the Imperial Conference has given a very plain answer, and that—to my mind—is one of the greatest achievements that any conference can make. Even the question as to who is an Afrikaner and who is not an Afrikaner, can there be any question any more? After the Mayor has been so cruelly cut off from his own city, how can we possibly be so cruel as to look upon him as being any longer either an Englishman or a Londoner? (Laughter.) Then if the Mayor wants to go back and claim his freedom of the City of London, he may get it as I have got it in another form, but in substance he will never get it.

Cutting of Ties.

I am afraid that the decision of the Imperial Conference has been a decision cutting ties—not cutting the real tie, that real tie which can be relied upon, the tie of goodwill—no, the cutting of the fictitious tie of allegiance to a Power that has not been superior. I have never felt at times more bitterly than when they accused me of owing allegiance to the British Government. I have always protested, and protested most strongly, that I owe no allegiance to any other Government but my own.

In that decision of the Imperial Conference, in that declaration, I am afraid, we have all been cruelly cut off, and unless we are prepared to go back to become citizens and mere nationals of Great Britain, we shall remain citizens of South Africa. (Hear, hear.)

Now does that mean that we should have any the less attachment, any the less love and reverence, that is to say, those of us who are of English descent—that you should have any less love, any less reverence for that old country than you had before? Well, I know that if I were in your position my love would be none the less and my respect and reverence for that country would be none the less—no, it would be rather increased as the country who, through its free institutions and the commonsense exercised in those free institutions, could raise other young nations to the position in which we are and the other Dominions are, as free as the Motherland, and at the same time standing in the closest tie of affection.

FULLY RECONCILED TO THE EMPIRE.

South Africa First.

Don't take it that this is what I feel; no, I make no bones about it, I am no Englishman. You would laugh at me if I were to pose as an Englishman or a descendant even of an Englishman. Fortunately or unfortunately, I am in this position that for 200 years or more I would not be able to trace any ties between me and any other country except South Africa, and, therefore, what I say here is simply what I would feel if I were in your position, but I say this again, that it does not take away from us the duty that we owe to South Africa and that we owe to South Africa in the first place.

You see here again I am a good Nationalist—"South Africa first"—but you will forgive me if, even after having been so fully reconciled to the Empire and Imperialism, I can still remain a good South African.

And that is exactly what we as South Africans will have to do. Unless we can, recognizing the worth of the Empire as an association of free States to which we are bound by nothing else but our free will—that is the free sovereign will of the people to whom we belong—unless we can all feel towards that Empire that it is to our benefit that we should remain a member of it, co-operate with it, but at the same time be ourselves as a free South African nation—unless we can do that, I am afraid we have not yet reached to the stage when we can say that we are sons of South Africa, desiring, in the first place, to do the will of South Africa.

BRITAIN'S RENUNCIATION.

Dominions on Perfect Equality.

Well, all this has been brought about and effected by the decision arrived at by the Imperial Conference; and I am not going any further here this afternoon.

This is all I want to bring out here, namely, that the decision of the Imperial Conference means much—it means the definite, final renunciation by Great Britain—by the Government of Great Britain—of any claim to privilege or superiority over any of the Dominions, in the first place.

It means, in the second place, that we are an absolutely free people, a free nation, to exercise our will as we might, and as we may think best in our interests in the future; and it has by its decision made it clear to us why it is no longer necessary to quibble about whether we shall remain in the Empire, or whether we shall secede from the Empire or not.

That is a question which we shall have to decide according to the dictates of the interests of our country, and if those interests in the years to come were to show it would be best, then it is not for you or me to say it shall not be done; in other words, we can leave that to the future. As long as we know that we have the freedom that is necessary we have the freedom to declare what is in the interests of South Africa.

IRISH FREE STATE.

EXTRACTS FROM DAIL DEBATES OF 15TH AND 16TH DECEMBER, 1925.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

15th December.

DEBATE ON THE ADJOURNMENT.—THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

THE PRESIDENT: I move the adjournment of the Dáil until to-morrow.

MINISTER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS (Mr. Fitzgerald): Speaking on the Imperial Conference, I speak on the assumption that, as a summary of proceedings has been circulated, Deputies have either read it or have it before them. The Imperial Conference, which has just ended its labours in London, consisted of representatives from all the States of the Commonwealth, together with representatives of India.

The Conference has for some years become triennial; it has no powers delegated to it from any of the peoples or governments in the Commonwealth. It has none of the attributes of a supreme federal council, and it does not claim to have them. It is simply a meeting of the representatives of the independent governments of the Commonwealth for the purpose of conferring together and endeavouring to discover the most effective means of furthering the interests of each member of the group and of the group as a whole. With this end in view, it formulates certain conclusions, the acceptance or rejection of which depends on the will of the governments. These conclusions do not essentially affect the status of the members of the Commonwealth, which is based in its broader aspects on the fundamental and now completely accepted constitutional principle of absolute co-equality. But speaking in particular of the conclusions of the Inter-Imperial Relations Committee, they are intended to make clear the implications of co-equality and to prepare the way for the gradual elimination of legal machinery and administrative practices which are not in conformity with that principle.

This Conference has given more time and attention to this question of the elucidation of status than any conference which preceded it, and, I have no doubt, it will be regarded by historians as marking a definite step forward in the development of the individual States of the Commonwealth as distinct political entities in the general society of nations.

Before entering into a detailed explanation of the Inter-Imperial Relations Report, it is well to review for a moment our own position in the world as a nation. These conclusions from the very nature of the bonds which bind civilized nations together, must affect to a greater or less degree not only our own State and all the States of the Commonwealth, but the whole body of States constituting civilized society, and that is the perspective in which we should examine our individual position. Our country, considered as a unit, is amongst the smallest in Europe, but it has made a greater racial contribution to the building up of the great new countries of the world than any of our neighbours, with the exception of Great Britain. That factor gives to our country, considered by itself, a degree of influence which in modern international life should be a powerful force for increased prestige and prosperity if we have the vision and the determination to make use of it. But apart from this we must remember that modern conditions of international life make it incumbent on every country to enter into treaties and agreements with its neighbours, to make certain concessions to them, to waive certain rights in the interests of its commercial or political well-being, or even existence. The mutual waiving of rights is guided by—and is a recognition of—community of interest. The League of Nations, as its machinery and institutions develop, may obtain such tangible recognition of the community of interest and interdependence of all countries as will give sufficient guarantees for the elimination of war, the political and commercial integrity of its members, and make any other group arrangement unnecessary. But it would be foolish to imagine that the system of group association, whether engendered by geographical propinquity or by other ties, can cease to operate within any period susceptible of being estimated, even approximately, by our generation. No political regime in this country could ignore those agencies and remain isolated without substantial injury to this country. Adherence to a group involves acceptance of obligations arising from the community of interests or the historical factors which brought about its formation.

Our State is a member of the British Commonwealth. But if we were not so declared to be by the Treaty of 1921, I think it is pretty certain that we should adhere to some group. And I am satisfied that geographical and other conditions, the natural flow of our commerce and many other agencies at present existing, would lead us to association with our nearest neighbour, Great Britain, and with the Commonwealth of which she is a member.

I would ask Deputies to bear in mind that the report before them is not that of a conference bringing the British Commonwealth group into existence, but a report such as might be agreed to by the representatives of the various Governments already forming that group, for the elucidation and possible improvement of their system of co-operative working.

In my statement made here on 3rd June I referred to existing anomalies which I hoped would be to some extent remedied by the deliberations of the Imperial Conference. They were anomalies because there was a recognized principle with which they were incompatible. That principle is set out on page 13 of the Report before you, viz.: They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The King is at once the symbol of that association and of that autonomy. The functions incident to kingship constitute the sole operative constitutional element in the maintenance of the association. The kingly function is to reign, not to govern. He is a constitutional monarch. As such he acts solely upon the advice of the Government of each individual State in the affairs of that State.

But as I stated on 3rd June, the existing position being the result of growth, that principle was not yet fully operative. It has been one of the functions of my Department to note these anomalies as they come before us in practice.

Naturally we recognize that the common kingship created a relationship making for and necessitating harmony and co-operation between the Governments of the various States of the Commonwealth, a harmony and co-operation already eminently desirable because of the close economic and other interests actually existing between them.

These mutual interests necessitate certain mutual arrangements. The attitude of the Government is, and will remain, that those mutual arrangements should be dictated by that mutual interest and by that only. Forms and practices still existing merely as remnants from a time when the Government in Great Britain retained authority and power over the Dominions were not calculated to assist harmony and co-operation, but might at some future time be the cause of misunderstanding and friction and be actually dangerous to the necessary co-operation. They also could undoubtedly tend to mislead people at home and abroad. They should, therefore, be eliminated, not necessarily immediately or in haste, but certainly without needless delay.

If I may refer again to the statement made by me on Estimates here on 2nd and 3rd June last, Deputies may remember that I referred to anomalies under three headings. I said: "Under one heading is the office of the Governor-General. The office originally was that of a representative of the Colonial Office, as it was then. Although the Governor-General's office has evolved entirely from that, there are still existing certain anomalies reminiscent of it. I think these anomalies should be removed. Another thing is that although the equality of status is recognized, there has been, so far as I know, practically no exercise of extra-territorial powers. I think extra-territorial powers should be possessed and exercised, not merely by one member of the Commonwealth, but by all co-equal members of the Commonwealth. The third general heading is that it should be made clear, beyond any doubt, not only in principle but in every detail of implementation, that in so far as the work of the Government of any individual Dominion is concerned no one should have any say in regard to, or interfere with, or veto the work of that Dominion, except the Government of that Dominion."

We prepared memoranda on the various matters under those headings that had come to our notice.

Governor-General.—In this matter I would refer Deputies to page 15 of the Report:—

"The formal recognition of the Governor-General, as representing the King, to the complete exclusion of any functions hitherto exercised as representative of the British Government, entails certain adjustments in the system of communication and consultation between the Dominions and Great Britain and the Dominions inter se. Communications now will no longer be between the Governor-General and the British Government but between the Governments direct. But it is felt that a group of States so closely associated should at least have the same facilities for communicating their views to each other as normally exist between States having no particular bond between them. The normal system existing between States is an exchange of representatives. Details of such an arrangement are to be considered."

Extra-Territorial Powers.—I refer Deputies to page 16 of the Report, paragraph C, and to page 17, second and third paragraphs and paragraph marked II (a). It will be seen that this matter has been referred to a Committee to be set up consisting of experts from the various States of the Commonwealth. It will also be noted that in paragraph II (a) of Terms of Reference for Experts Committee is recognized the principle that each Dominion Parliament should have power to give extra-territorial operation to its legislation in all cases where such operation is ancillary to provision for the peace, order and good government of the Dominion.

Associated with this is the question of Merchant Shipping. I refer Deputies to (d) p. 17 and 18.

Merchant Shipping.—Sections 735 and 736 of the British Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, enact that no change in the provisions of the Act concerning emigrant ships and coastal trade can be made by dominion legislation unless such legislation is accompanied in the case of coastal trade by a suspension clause, and in both matters that such legislation can only receive operative effect on the publication in the Dominion of an order of the British Privy Council issued for that specific purpose. It will be seen that a Special Committee is also to be set up to consider this matter with a view to adapting legal machinery to constitutional principle.

Sole Right of a Dominion Government in the Affairs of that Dominion.—Firstly I refer to page 16 of the Report, paragraph (a). The practice there referred to of sending Acts to London and receiving the reply that "His Majesty will not be advised to exercise his powers of disallowance" did not exist as far as this State is concerned. Nevertheless, the existence of such a practice was dangerous and misleading. Although it had no relation to fact, it would undoubtedly convey the impression that the British Government retained the power to advise disallowance of all Acts passed by other Governments in the Commonwealth. Paragraph (b) on the same page raises the matter of reservation of Dominion legislation, with its implication that the British Government advises on that legislation. The statement at the bottom of page 16 that "it is recognised that it is the right of the Government of each Dominion to advise the Crown in all matters relating to its own affairs. Consequently, it would not be in accordance with constitutional practice for advice to be tendered to His Majesty by His Majesty's Government in Great Britain in any matter appertaining to the affairs of a Dominion against the view of the Government of that Dominion," puts on record the now incontestable fact that the veto on Acts by, and the reservation of Bills for the consideration of, any Minister outside this State no longer exists even in form or theory.

The qualifying clause: "Apart from provisions embodied in Constitutions or in specific statutes" has no application to the Saorstát. That qualification was made necessary by special cases: (1) arising from the desire of the people of a Dominion so expressed in a Constitution, as, for instance, in the case of a Federal Dominion whose people have chosen the method of reservation as a protection of the State Parliaments against the Federal Parliament; and (2) in the case of contractual engagements such as arise under the terms of the Colonial Stocks Act, 1900, by which a Dominion, as a guarantee to British lenders that their contractual rights will not be taken from them by Dominion legislation, gives to the British Government power to reserve legislation contrary to those contractual rights. The Committee of Experts to be set up, referred to on page 17, is to report upon such special cases and to make recommendations upon them. But, as I stated a while ago, none of these cases exist with regard to the Free State.

King's Title.—In the King's title the anomaly of the description of this State as part of a political unit which came to an end with the Treaty is to disappear. Measures to effect that change will be taken at an early date.

Appeals to the Privy Council.—In the past, appeals to the Judicial Committee of the British Privy Council were founded on the right to hear such appeals vested in the Privy Council by British statutes nearly a hundred years old. In the course of time this right has been attenuated by changes in the Acts and Constitutions of the Dominions until by constitutional evolution the right to hear appeals has been substituted by the right to appeal, vested in the various parts of the Commonwealth if they wish to make use of it. In other words, the statutory right of the British Privy Council to hear appeals from the Dominions has become the constitutional right of the Dominions, depending for its exercise on the will of the particular Dominion concerned. It was urged at the Conference that where changes in the existing system might raise issues in which other parts of the Commonwealth other than the one primarily affected were concerned, changes should be carried out only after consultation and discussion.

It will be seen that the Irish delegation, while not pressing for the immediate abolition of the practice of receiving appeals, maintained its right to bring up the matter again at the next Imperial Conference.

Another and very important aspect of the sole right of the Government of a Dominion in the affairs of that Dominion is its exercise in relation to foreign affairs in general. The infringement of that fundamental right has been more real in this sphere than in that of internal affairs. This was natural for a number of reasons:—

- (1) The control by Dominions of their external affairs is of recent growth;
- (2) The machinery used is so frequently the British Foreign Office and the British Diplomatic Agents;
- (3) The lack of general interest in this sphere of national life, arising from the detached attitude of the ordinary citizen until such time as his own or his nation's life or welfare are threatened.

I refer Deputies to page 21 in the section dealing with Procedure in relation to Treaties, paragraphs headed "Negotiations."

It may be stated, roughly, that the foreign affairs of every nation are of interest to every other nation. The proposals for consultation between the Governments of the Commonwealth reiterated from the Report of the Imperial Conference, 1923, are clearly desirable between States so much associated. The Treaty arrangements of the one may easily affect another, at least in passive obligations. It will be seen that no State can involve another in active obligations without their definite assent.

The general attitude of the Saorstát Government is that we should not be committed even to passive obligations except by your own definite act. It will be seen, therefore, that the second part of the last paragraph of this section applies to the Free State and not the first.

In the beginning of the preamble to the Treaty of Versailles the description "British Empire" is used alone when describing the parties between whom the Treaty is being made. The Dominions are enumerated only at the end of the preamble, in which the list of the plenipotentiaries is set out. The powers issued to the British plenipotentiaries were unlimited, and accordingly from the international point of view, could be regarded as covering the Dominions as well as Great Britain; the signature of the Dominions might be held to do nothing more than interpret or explain the scope of the British signature. To that extent it can be argued that the Dominions did not sign the Treaty of Versailles on a footing of equality with the other signatory States. Their signature was in a sense superfluous, and owing to the unlimited scope of the powers issued to the British plenipotentiaries they would have been deemed to be included without separate signature. This grave defect, raising serious doubts as to the independent status of the Dominions, persisted in varying forms in all League Conventions. The British Empire is, indeed, followed in these conventions at the beginning of the preamble by a list of the States of the Commonwealth taking part, but Great Britain is not set out separately. The British Empire delegate is the delegate appointed on the advice of the British Government, and his credentials give him unlimited powers. It, therefore, can also be argued with regard to these Conventions that the unlimited full power of the British plenipotentiary covers all the Dominion Governments, and their signature becomes merely an indication of their acceptance of a situation imposed on them by the British signatory. This view was considerably strengthened by the custom of indenting the names of the Dominions in the list of signatories under the signature of the British Empire plenipotentiaries.

The question of our status in League international treaties and conventions had been giving the Saorstát Government considerable anxiety, and they looked to the Imperial Conference as the most appropriate occasion for putting an end to the doubts and anomalies which were generally harmful to our prestige and particularly capable of injuring us in the League of Nations. I think that a careful reading of Section V of the Report will show that these difficulties have been very largely eliminated. The covering term, "British Empire," and the unlimited powers of the British plenipotentiaries disappear. Each State of the Commonwealth will now be represented exclusively by its own plenipotentiary appointed on its sole advice. The special relationship existing between the separate units of the Commonwealth will be symbolized by replacing the expression "British Empire" in the preamble, with its implications of federalism and one dominating government, by the King's title, to indicate the actual link between the States of the Commonwealth. Instead of one high contracting party primarily acting on behalf of the British Government, whose advice covered all the Dominions, we shall have a several high contracting party acting in a distinct capacity on behalf of each State of which he is King. This old system whereby the British signature was made in the name of the British Empire by a plenipotentiary whose powers, being unlimited, could be held to cover also the Dominions whose names were indented beneath, could only imply a federal empire with one supreme government, and was contrary to fact.

The new system gives exact expression to existing realities. There is a special bond between the States of the Commonwealth, consisting, not in a supreme governmental authority, but in a common King. The exact nature of the relationship outside the common bond of the King is undefined, but it is naturally felt that League treaties and conventions cannot be taken as applying completely—as to all their articles—between them, as if there was no special relationship whatever. They accord to each other mutual privileges and mutual rights which might easily be disturbed if there was not a general understanding that these treaties and conventions apply amongst themselves only when special agreements are made between them for that purpose. No inter se clause will in future be inserted in League documents. Nothing on the face of any international instrument will leave room for any other interpretation of their special relationship than that they are under the same King acting in a several capacity. Henceforth also Great Britain will be set out in these international instruments on an equal footing with the other Commonwealth States, and the powers of her plenipotentiaries will be limited territorially in like manner with the powers of the other members of the group. That fundamental change in the interpretation and elucidation of status represents a considerable advance, and I wish to use this opportunity to pay a tribute to the moderation and fairness of mind with which the British delegates at the Conference accepted the definite formulation of this and other incidents of the basic principle of co-equality.

Ratification.—The act of ratification is the most important act connected with a Treaty. Unless otherwise specially provided, a Treaty becomes operative only in virtue of its ratification by the heads of the States concerned. In most modern States Parliament's approval is obtained for the act of ratification. References to ratification will be found under (a) and (b) of Section V. Two points are clearly set out:—

(1) That any question as to whether the nature of a Treaty is such that its ratification should be concurred in by all the States of the Commonwealth is a matter for discussion and agreement between the Governments, and

(2) That any Government which prefers not to concur in the ratification of a Treaty unless it has been signed by a plenipotentiary authorized to act on its behalf can advise the issue of full powers to a plenipotentiary so to act.

The act of ratification by the King in respect of the Saorstát can only be valid when he is formally advised to ratify by our Government.

Representation at International Conferences.—The same general principles govern representation at International Conferences. No obligations need be accepted without representation. If obligations are to be undertaken by the Saorstát, the Government will advise the issue of special full powers in respect of the Saorstát to its own or to a common plenipotentiary, according to the importance to this country of the questions at issue. The powers of each State of the Commonwealth, including Great Britain, will be geographically limited. The plenipotentiary of one State can only act for another on the issue of specific full powers for that purpose. When issues of serious importance to the Saorstát are likely to arise at international conferences summoned by a State external to the Commonwealth, I feel that it would generally be desirable for the Saorstát to be represented by a separate delegation. Our Government does not approve of the form of representation employed at the Washington Disarmament Conference of 1921, at which the British Representative held unlimited full powers, with the implication already explained. It can, therefore, only accept the methods of representation set out in the sub-paragraphs I and III of paragraph 2 of Section V, namely, representation through a common plenipotentiary and representation through separate delegations.

It may take some years to bring the functions of each State of the Commonwealth into complete harmony with the principle of co-equality. The British Representatives abroad and the British Foreign Office continue to act as the channel of communication with foreign countries for the Dominions until each has its own representatives in all countries with which it may have relations. The direct channel is, of course, already in use between the United States Government and the Saorstát Government. But, as I have pointed out, very important changes are set out in this Report to bring the position in regard to foreign affairs into harmony with the declaration of the beginning of the Report. The nature and extent of the responsibilities in foreign affairs of the individual States of the group, and the precise manner in which that responsibility is to be indicated, has been made clear. No one of them can be committed to active obligations without representation under full powers issued on the advice of its own Government, and even when the obligations are of a passive character, involving, for instance, a modification in the status of citizens of the Dominions in foreign countries, the Dominions concerned are free to appoint a representative at the negotiations if they wish to do so. It should also be clearly stated that the extent to which a particular member of the Commonwealth is interested in and bound by any Treaty can be clearly set out in a statement attached to his signature. No doubt some of the Dominions will continue to regard the assumption of passive obligations in treaties which mainly concern Great Britain as a matter of no importance, but it seems to me that we should take a different view.

Issue of Exequaturs to Foreign Consuls.—Another important aspect of our international status has relation to the issue of exequaturs to foreign consuls. It has been the custom for the British Government to advise the King to issue their exequatur to foreign Consuls de Carrière appointed to the Dominions without previous consultation with the Dominions. The result of this procedure was to create an impression in the minds of foreign governments that the British Foreign Office was acting, not on a mandate from the Dominion Governments, but in its own right, in advising the issue of these exequaturs. So far as the foreign Government was concerned, the intervention of the Dominion Government as a sovereign state was completely obscured. Henceforth the exequatur will be issued on the advice of the Dominion Government alone. It will be countersigned by the appropriate Dominion Minister and will be handed to the foreign consul on his arrival in the Dominion for the purpose of exercising his functions.

MR. JOHNSON: By whom will it be issued?

MR. FITZGERALD: By the King.

MR. JOHNSON: Through which agency?

MR. FITZGERALD: The King is advised—in the case of the Irish Free State by the Government of the Irish Free State—to issue the exequatur for the Consul de Carrière from such a country. When that consul arrives in Dublin the appropriate Minister here will hand him his exequatur. Does that answer the question?

MR. JOHNSON: Oh, yes; it answers the question.

MR. FITZGERALD: Special Questions: Article 36. Permanent Court: It was considered opportune to discuss two questions relating to the Permanent Court of International Justice. One was the recognition of the jurisdiction of the Court as compulsory ipso facto, and without special agreement in relation to any other members of the League, accepting the same obligations. There was no undertaking and no agreement that any State of the Commonwealth should not recognise this compulsory jurisdiction any time it pleases, but before doing so the Government about to take action will discuss the matter with the other members of the Commonwealth. So far only twenty-two States members of the League have accepted the optional clause, and the majority of these States have limited their acceptance to a period of five years. The tendency amongst all States, including the Commonwealth States, is to favour the greatest possible extension of the method of arbitration, and it is exceedingly probable that as the European war becomes more remote and present causes of international suspicion more attenuated, there will be a general acceptance of the optional clause.

American Reservation.—The second question affecting the International Court was that of the adherence of the United States of America to the Protocol. It will be remembered that the United States Senate decided early this year to adhere to the Protocol, provided certain reservations were accepted by all the States which had accepted the Protocol. The reservations were generally to the following effect:

1. Adherence should not be taken to involve any legal relation on the part of the United States to the League of Nations, or the assumption of any obligations under the Treaty of Versailles.

2. The United States should be permitted through special representatives, on an equality with the members of the Assembly and the Council, to participate in any and all the proceedings of the Council or the Assembly for the election of judges to the Permanent Court.

3. The United States should pay a fair share of the expenses of the Court.

4. The United States should be free at any time to withdraw its adherence and the Protocol should not be amended without its consent.

5. The Court should not render any advisory opinion except publicly, after due notice to all States adhering to the Court, and it should not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion on any point or question in which the United States has or claims an interest.

At the Conference held in September of all the members adhering to the Protocol, it was felt that the acceptance of these reservations, specially numbers four and five, would put the United States in a privileged position as regards the other signatory States. It was, therefore, generally agreed at the September Conference that a suggestion should be made to the United States Government that, in order to insure equality of treatment, a majority of not less than two-thirds of the signatory States should possess the corresponding right to withdraw their acceptance of the special conditions attached by the United States to its adherence to the second part of the fourth reservation and in the fifth reservation. In this way the status quo ante could be re-established if it were found that the arrangement agreed upon was not yielding satisfactory results. The acceptance of the presumption in the fifth reservation that the adoption of a request for an advisory opinion by the Assembly of the Council required a unanimous vote would make the ordinary operation of the Court exceedingly difficult. A note setting out these difficulties is being sent by all the signatory States to the Government of the United States. The Imperial Conference merely took note of the fact that all the Governments of the Commonwealth were in accord with the conclusions of the Special Conference in Geneva.

Locarno.—With regard to the Locarno Commitments, it will be noted that the Conference passed a resolution congratulating the British Government on the efforts it had made for securing the peace of Europe, culminating in the agreements of Locarno. The question of formal commitments to active obligations under the pact does not arise.

If I may speak of the Report in general: it will be noted that the principle of co-equality is stated and referred to frequently. The nations of the Commonwealth are declared to be "equal in status, in no way subordinate to one another in any aspect of their internal or external affairs." They are freely associated, and the link between them is the Crown. The method of attaining the unity that is necessary or desirable is "free co-operation." "But every Dominion is now, and must ever remain the sole judge of the nature and extent of its co-operation."

The inter se relations between Great Britain and the other States of the Commonwealth are based on the root principle of equality of status.

The link between those co-equal States is the King. He stands in the same relation to the other States of the Commonwealth as he does to Great Britain. The advice of the Government concerned will be the only effective basis for all his executive acts, whether internal or external. The British Commonwealth, as a whole, is perhaps the loosest federation of States known in history. From a single Federal State it has evolved to several States with a Monarchy several in its functions, each State complete master of its own destiny, anachronisms in legislation and constitution notwithstanding. In so far as these anachronisms exist, they exist as anomalies. Nothing can be deduced from them beyond their existence. They are expedients, and I think that all through the Report will be found a clear recognition of their temporariness. They remain merely until they are removed, according to the convenience of time and circumstances. The report proposes the removal of many of the most important, for example:—

The Governor-General ceases to have any of the functions or attributes of a representative of the British Government.

The British Government cease to imply a right to advise disallowance of our Acts.

Bills cannot be reserved for deliberation or decision by British Ministers.

The major anomalies in the exercise of our treaty-making powers are removed, including the unlimited full powers of British Plenipotentiaries.

Others, though their removal is not actually set down in the Report, are to be referred to committees of experts with a view to their removal. These include:—

British statutory provisions requiring reservation of Dominion legislation, or authorising the disallowance of such legislation;

The competence of Dominion legislatures to give their legislation extra-territorial operation;

The principles embodied in the Colonial Laws Validity Act, 1865; and Existing statutes affecting merchant shipping and naturalization.

To recapitulate: The work of the Imperial Conference is, so far as foreign affairs and intra-Commonwealth relations are concerned, has been largely a work of clarification and elucidation. Absolute co-equality of status has been definitely formulated. It now remains to adapt the machinery of legislation and administrative practice to that principle. That adaption can take place very soon in most matters. Our relations with foreign countries will for some time be largely carried on through the British Foreign Office and its representatives abroad acting as mandatories. Consuls will gradually be appointed to foreign countries as the need arises, and through them, as well as through the Consuls-General here, most of our routine business can be carried on. It cannot be said that all our difficulties incidental to status have been solved. Time and experience will probably emphasise the importance of others which may now appear trivial. But, nevertheless, as far as matters affecting our status taken as a whole are concerned, this Imperial Conference has given eminently satisfactory results. I feel that this is an opportunity which I must avail of to pay a tribute to the friendly spirit animating all the delegates at the Conference towards the Irish Free State. Difficulties were discussed and met in the most friendly spirit by all without exception, and I firmly believe that the better understanding arising from these friendly discussions will produce the best possible results on our future relations with all the members of the Commonwealth and indirectly on our own commercial prosperity and political well-being.

16th December.

MINISTER FOR JUSTICE (Mr. O'Higgins): One would think by the tone of Deputy Baxter's contribution, and perhaps to some extent by the tone of others, that the purpose for which we went to London was to negotiate a treaty with the British Government. That, of course, was not the purpose. The Treaty was negotiated five years ago, and at the outset of the few brief remarks I have to make it may be well to refer Deputies to some articles of that Treaty. The first is this:—

"Ireland shall have the same constitutional status in the community of nations known as the British Empire as the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa, with a Parliament having powers to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Ireland, and an executive responsible to that Parliament, and shall be styled and known as the Irish Free State."

The second is this:—

"Subject to the provisions hereinafter set out, the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government and otherwise shall be that of the Dominion of Canada, and the law, practice and constitutional usage governing the relationship of the Crown or the representative of the Crown and of the Imperial Parliament to the Dominion of Canada shall govern the relationship to the Irish Free State."

Deputy Baxter says he is not satisfied with the results. After long study of Deputy Baxter in the Dáil I am not surprised at that. I think it would be a task of extreme magnitude to secure results that would be satisfactory to Deputy Baxter, or that would banish, even temporarily, his settled melancholy. He is not satisfied with the results. He apparently is under the illusion that we went to London recently to negotiate and conclude a treaty with Great Britain. I venture to point out that we did not, that the Treaty was made five years ago, and that we went to London as representatives of the Government of the State which is based upon that Treaty of five years ago.

Deputy Magennis reminded us that the Treaty was signed under duress. If that is so, many treaties, almost all treaties, are signed under duress. I shall not go into the question now how much there is in the statement that that particular Treaty was signed under duress. I shall not go even into the question of whether or not there was any degree of duress on the British signatories, whether or not it embodied their summum bonum, their ideal conception of Anglo-Irish relations. We can leave that on one side. The Treaty was signed, whether under duress on the one side or under duress on both sides, we need not pause to haggle about; it was signed; it was placed before the Dáil; it was approved by a majority of seven, and this State is based upon it. That is all truism. It is the kind of truism which it seems necessary to repeat to the Dáil, and which ought not to be necessary.

What precisely did we go to London for if not to negotiate and conclude a treaty? We went to take part in this triennial Conference between the governments of a group of States of which we are one. Before going, we indicated, in broad outline at any rate, the matters which we proposed to raise there as the representatives of this State and of its people. From time to time throughout the last three or four years matters have come under notice in the constitutional mechanism of this community of nations, in the constitutional practice which, to us, appear incompatible with the conception of complete co-equality of status. These matters were noted for reference, noted for attention at just such an occasion as offered in this Imperial Conference. Anything, everything, that to us appeared to conflict with the conception of the fullest co-equality of status was raised by us in that Conference. I make this offer to Deputies, that if they, from their study of the constitutional mechanism of this community of nations known as the British Empire, can direct our attention to other matters, those will be attended to, whether at an Imperial Conference or by direct representation to the British Government. By one or the other course at any rate those matters will have attention. The matters raised by us at the Imperial Conference were exhaustive of the points of practice, the points of constitutional machinery, which struck us as being in conflict with the conception of co-equal status, and they are set out in this Report.

They were dealt with in detail at the Inter-Imperial Relations Committee, presided over by Lord Balfour: not all have been dealt with to a conclusion. Some, for what seemed a good and sufficient reason, have been left over for a fuller examination by a committee which is to be set up in the near future. But many of the matters have been dealt with to a conclusion, and dealt with to a conclusion satisfactory to those who raised them. Now, I do not complain overmuch of the state of mind revealed in the speeches, particularly in the speeches of Deputy Magennis and Deputy Baxter. One has to remember the antecedents of our whole position: one has to remember that for very many centuries we were an unfree people, and that we have borne the fetters so long, they have eaten so deep, that even when they are struck off there are those amongst us, believing or professing to believe, that they are still there: those amongst us who cannot realise their freedom and are unable to raise their heads and look their fellow man in the face, and say we are a free people. The whine of the slave was in those two speeches.

MR. BAXTER: And we are not able to sing "God save the King."

MR. O'HIGGINS: I would like to hear the Deputy singing anything if only to show there was that much heart in him. "A group of self-governing communities composed of Great Britain and the Dominions," and then follows the declaration "they are autonomous communities within the British Empire equal in status in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs." Deputy Magennis is not satisfied. I am not surprised. I do not think Deputy Magennis would be satisfied with even an entirely different status, an entirely different form of Government. I think Deputy Magennis would be dissatisfied, profoundly dissatisfied, with a republic, except on the conditions that he were president of that republic. In a speech which it might be unkind, perhaps, to describe as lingering sourness long drawn out, he analysed, or attempted to analyse, this report and by every device of which he is master, of misrepresentation and distortion, he attempted to show that we had been, so to speak, busily engaged for six weeks in London riveting fetters on the limbs of our unfortunate country, and Deputy Baxter shook his head and said he was afraid that was so.

MR. BAXTER: I was afraid that you were not taking them off.

MR. O'HIGGINS: There is a fair offer made to Deputy Baxter: if he can point to matters of constitutional practice which, in his opinion, conflict with co-equality of status he should do so.

MR. BAXTER: Of sovereign status is it?

MR. O'HIGGINS: Within the limits of that Treaty.

MR. BAXTER: Will the Minister answer my point. Is it sovereign status?

MR. O'HIGGINS: Within the limits of this Treaty which, after all, does constitute the limitations under which we went to work. If the Deputy can point to any matters of practice, of usage, or anything in the constitutional mechanism of this community of nations of which we form one that conflict with the conception of the fullest co-equality let him name them.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Lord Balfour named them at the foot of the page from which you have quoted.

MR. O'HIGGINS: Listening to parts of Deputy Magennis's speech I formed the impression that he was under the illusion that the day before this Conference began Ireland was a single political entity and that the day on which it ended it was two political entities. Now the position with regard to the relations between the Irish Free State—

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: On a point of order, the Minister charges me with using all the devices of misrepresentation and distortion. Lest he should incur that charge or be guilty of it would he quote the passage in which I used such a grotesque phrase that is, that the day before this Conference opened Ireland was a political entity. He knows I charge him and his colleagues with making it cease to be a political entity last December.

THE PRESIDENT: What did you say in December, 1922? You are responsible for it, and you are on record.

AN CEANN COMHAIRLE: Perhaps there is too much on record. It would be better if the Minister for Justice were allowed to proceed.

THE PRESIDENT: Too much for him.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: At an earlier stage of the debate when you, sir, were not present I yielded to the Minister for External Affairs a considerable space in which to accuse me of misrepresentation. I am now accused of misrepresentation once more. I think the passage ought to be given in which I stated that, the day before this precious Conference began, Ireland was a political entity and that the day after it had ceased to be. I say that is a grotesque misrepresentation of anything that I did say.

MR. O'HIGGINS: No one knows quite so well as the Deputy that I was not purporting to quote. I could not quote him. I am afraid I have not got his speech off by heart, and as I have not got the records of the last hour and a half of it to hand I could not quote even if I wanted to. I did say that listening to portions of his speech one would form the impression that the day before the Conference began this country was a single political entity, and that by the time we had finished our work it had become something different.

MR. BAXTER: When you put your hands to it.

MR. O'HIGGINS: The Deputy knows and Deputy Baxter knows, that that is not the position: that the relations between the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland remain unaffected by anything that happened at the Imperial Conference. They are as they were before that Conference. Deputy Magennis referred to the change in the King's title. The change in the King's title is simply something that is now decided, and that has been overdue for a considerable time—that might have been done and perhaps should have been done any time after the establishment of the Irish Free State. It was convenient to consider the matter at the Imperial Conference. With regard to the position of the Governor-General, that is one of the anomalies and anachronisms to which general reference was made prior to the Imperial Conference. The Governor-General dated back to the Colonial phase in the development of the Dominions, retaining, not in fact or in reality, but in form, something of the complexion of being not merely an emanation of the King, but of being to some extent an emanation of a British Minister and a British Department of State. Attention being drawn to that fact, that state of affairs will no longer continue. Paragraph C of the Report of this Inter-Imperial Relations Committee covers the ground of portion of dominion legislation, and sets out in that portion of the report some of the matters which will be further investigated by the special committee which is to be established. The terms of reference of that Committee are given on page 17 of the Report:—

To inquire into, report upon and make recommendations concerning: existing statutory provisions requiring reservation of Dominion legislation for the assent of His Majesty or authorising the disallowance of such legislation.

The present position as to the competence of Dominion Parliaments to give their legislation extra territorial operation.

The practicability and most convenient method of giving effect to the principle that each Dominion Parliament should have power to give extra territorial operation to its legislation.

The principles embodied in or underlying the Colonial Laws Validity Act, and so on. At the bottom of page 16 of the Report you have the statement that "it should be placed on record that, apart from provisions embodied in Constitutions or in specific statutes expressly providing for reservation, it is recognised that it is the right of the Government of each Dominion to advise the Crown in all matters relating to its own affairs. Consequently, it would not be in accordance with constitutional practice for advice to be tendered to His Majesty by His Majesty's Government in Great Britain in any matter appertaining to the affairs of a Dominion against the views of the Government of that Dominion."

We were told, from time to time, by critics of the established State and of the Treaty on which it is based, that the King, throughout our Constitution meant, in fact, the British Government. The Governor-General was depicted as a person with one ear to the telephone taking down the instructions of Whitehall to be conveyed to Merrion Street. The King never meant the British Government or any British Minister, but even in form, even under these shreds of constitutional fiction dating back to the Colonial phase of the development of the Dominions, whatever shred of justification there was for that assertion has now to go, and these seven States, composing the British Commonwealth of Nations, stand in form and in fact, and in reality, on a footing of most complete equality of status. That is a fact which has been realised in all of the Dominions: has been realised in South Africa and in Canada, and that I believe is realised here despite the indications to the contrary in the speeches of Deputy Magennis and Deputy Baxter.

MINISTER FOR EXTERNAL AFFAIRS (Mr. Fitzgerald): I think actually that most of the points that have been raised here were covered by my statement yesterday. As the Minister for Justice has said, we did not go there to scrap the Treaty or to change it. We went there to bring practice in form with the Constitutional position. Clause II of the Treaty says:—

"Subject to the provisions hereinafter set out the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Imperial Parliament and Government and otherwise shall be that of the Dominion of Canada, and the law, practice and constitutional usage governing the relationship of the Crown or the representative of the Crown and of the Imperial Parliament to the Dominion of Canada shall govern the relationship to the Irish Free State."

Deputy Magennis quoted, again and again, the co-equality referred to in Clause I of the Treaty. We are governed by practice, and when I stated in my report that I considered this eminently satisfactory it was because it had modified the practice, bringing it more in accord with co-equality. I have not stated that there is anything established in the absolute, but merely that there is a transition from a position which had been fairly good, to a position which is much better. Deputy Magennis constantly conveyed the impression that this report establishes what he calls separation. He challenged the Minister for Justice to show that he had said that. The Deputy refuted my statement that a certain Treaty procedure was an exact presentation of existing realities. As far as I could judge, I may have been wrong, but I gathered that he found the non-exactness of that representation in the putting of Northern Ireland, not with the Irish Free State, but with Great Britain, and he also stated—I speak from listening to him in a rather casual way—that Ireland entered the League of Nations, and suggested that we had changed our status. The suggestion was that the Free State is now in the League of Nations, whereas before Ireland was in the League of Nations.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: I repudiate that statement. It is bad enough to have the Minister not aware, as he showed earlier, of what was in the document, but if he is not able to quote an opponent's statement he should not profess to quote it. If he gives his own imagination, the House will accept it as such.

MR. FITZGERALD: I stated it merely as an impression. I think the Deputy introduced the difference between the way Ireland entered the League of Nations and the way she is now. I think that difference had some reference to the question of partition.

DEPUTY MAGENNIS: No. Deputy Johnson and I made it clear to an ordinary intelligence that the character of representation in the League of Nations is wholly at variance with the kind of empire to which the Minister for Justice sets his hand in this report. I contend that is a very different statement from that which the Minister professes to quote for me.

MR. FITZGERALD: I was only dealing with that case because I was afraid the Deputy's statement might convey a wrong impression to people outside. As I have the Deputy's assistance in correcting that impression, and if by any chance there might be people outside like myself who might have got that impression, I am glad to have it cleared up. At the same time I contest that statement. I will now deal with Deputy Johnson's statement. The Deputy in one part of his statement said I allowed myself to think of this country as being in the same position as New Zealand believed herself to be in. That is not so. Although Deputy Magennis seems to think I am a much ill-used person, I think both he and Deputy Johnson may take me as as good an interpreter of the constitutional position of this country as the Ministers of any other Dominion. Deputy Johnson quoted Professor Berriedale Keith—I am rather glad he did so because it happens to clear that matter up:—

"In political matters proper there has been no attempt to obtain separate powers of adherence or withdrawal for the Dominions, and it is clear that such an attempt would be meaningless. It is impossible so long as the Empire retains any unity for one part to be treated in political questions differently from another part, and the separate adherence to and withdrawal from treaties is only possible as in commercial treaties where differentiation of treatment could be based on difference of locality."

The discontinuance of a system of issuing unlimited powers to the British plenipotentiaries, I maintain, entirely defeats the position as indicated there by Professor Berriedale Keith and represents one of the eminently satisfactory results which I consider this Report indicates.

Deputy Johnson quoted the League of Nations Act, and I think that Deputy Johnson and Deputy Magennis are rather at sea in this matter. We entered the League of Nations as a fully self-governing State, and that is not incompatible with the term "Dominion" as now used. These two terms are not contradictory; they are not incompatible. In the Covenant the words "State" and "Dominion" are used. That does not imply a watertight distinction between the two. The use of the term "State" does not conceal "Dominion status." On the entry of the Saorstát into the League, the Sixth Committee noted in its Report to the Assembly that the Saorstát was a Dominion forming part of the British Empire upon the same conditions as the other Dominions already members of the League. Deputy Johnson said:—

"I wonder does the Minister contend that the position of the Irish Free State in the League is in the same way subordinate as that of, say, New Zealand because of the fact that New Zealand went in under the cover, if I may say so, of the British Empire."

The Deputy is aware we inherited the practice of Canada, which was to be included in all League instruments indented under the British Empire, and with a tangible unity among them that was effected by the unlimited full power of the British plenipotentiary. That was the position implying subordination and possibly capable of an interpretation prejudicial to the whole position of the Saorstát, a position certainly capable of an interpretation of inequality with Great Britain. That is a position which is now changed. Equality of status has reached its full development.

The Deputy asked did we look for anything beyond that position. There is now full recognition of equality of status, although there is not full implementation. I have not stated there is. That does not imply any last word or any impossibility of changing the present position as time and circumstances may permit.

There was one point that exercised the minds of Deputy Johnson and Deputy Magennis, and I will try to make it clear. The word "active" in front of "obligations" in the section headed "Negotiation" was referred to by them. They make deductions from the insertion of that word this year as differing from its use in 1923. Deputy Johnson quotes paragraph 3:—

"When a Government has received information of the intention of any other Government to conduct negotiations, it is incumbent upon it to indicate its attitude with reasonable promptitude."

He points out that the British Government, having informed us that it is negotiating for a treaty, it may assume its policy is generally acceptable unless it hears from us to the contrary, provided we are not involved in active obligations. He has mis-read the position. The exchange of information may be called a courtesy arrangement, and in a general way it exists among all world powers and powers with close geographical and other interests. The word "active" is inserted before the word "obligations" in the interests of clarity.

I said in my statement yesterday any treaty made by any State may be held to impose possible obligations on other States. Even to a greater degree is that true of States so closely associated as members of the British Commonwealth. Recognition of the state of affairs brought into being by a treaty is an obligation incumbent on the whole community of States. The British Government might empower a plenipotentiary to act on its behalf but not on our behalf, in order to conclude a treaty declaring a closed season for fishing in certain waters. They notify us that they propose to do a certain thing. If we do not reply they are justified in assuming we have no objection. On the other hand, we might write saying that Irish fishermen ished in those waters. They might abandon the treaty or decide that the interests they had in mind in making the treaty justified them in going ahead with it.

Or to take another case, more real to the Dominion position, the British Government might enter into negotiations with China with a view to nullifying or modifying treaties which gave rights not merely to English citizens, but to Canadian, Irish and other citizens. The annulling or modification of these treaties necessarily affects the status of our nationals in China. They notify us of the negotiations. If they do not hear from us they presume we do not consider the obligation as important or that we are nationally involved. On the other hand, we might notify them that we considered the matter of such importance that we wished to participate in negotiations and that we proposed to appoint a plenipotentiary to act on our behalf. It does not imply that all negotiations that we do not demur from we are parties to them. We cannot be party to any negotiation or treaty except by the act of a plenipotentiary appointed on the advice of this Government. The distinction between "obligations" and "active obligations" was necessary in order to make it clear that the general assumption with regard to passive obligations is more obviously justified in the relations of the Commonwealth States inter se.

MR. JOHNSON: Will the Minister meet the point that would arise supposing there was deprecation of the arrangements, let us say, between Great Britain and Italy in regard to the sphere of influence in Abyssinia. The Ministers here are advised of such a proposal. Is there any obligation imposed on our Ministry to accept or demur or to keep silent? If they know of such a proposal and no attention whatever is paid to it, is there not an assumption that the Government of Italy, for instance, would believe that we, too, are participants in that contract?

MR. FITZGERALD: I do not see how they could. The negotiator acts on behalf, and has power to act solely on behalf, of the British Government with powers covering merely the extent of area of their jurisdiction.

MR. JOHNSON: May I point out these actions will not be actions of plenipotentiaries but actions of governments, presumably; that is to say, there is no formal treaty. Is it proposed that the Dominions are formally to make known to the powers that this new position has been created?

MR. FITZGERALD: It is not entirely a new position. The position that the Deputy is dealing with really existed before.

MR. JOHNSON: Can the Minister give any evidence that any power not British has acknowledged and recognized that the position existed hitherto?

MR. FITZGERALD: One might say so. The Treaty of Locarno, Clause 9, made it perfectly clear that Sir Austen Chamberlain was not acting with a mandate from us.

MR. JOHNSON: What was the real point in making the particular footnote saying in these things the Dominions are not obliged to concur?

MR. FITZGERALD: I have tried to stress that, which I think is a very important point. It was necessary there because of this habit existing prior to this date of the issue of unlimited full powers to the British plenipotentiary. These powers were issued and they have always been issued and that was the practice we have inherited. Unless that were put in, the powers covered all parts of the King's realm.

MR. JOHNSON: Will the Minister go further and tell us whether it is proposed to alter the document that the Ambassador in Rome or Berlin has at present, which is a full power to act on behalf of the British Empire?

MR. FITZGERALD: The Ambassador in these places acts for us in his normal capacity. As regards his normal capacity here, I have a note here on that point. Deputy Johnson deduces from the system of consultation from the use of the British Foreign Office and from the frequent reference to the British Empire that we are committed to all actions of the British Government in foreign affairs unless we specifically dissociate ourselves. That is a misinterpretation. The British Ambassadors act as mandatories for us in the exercise of their normal functions. Their normal functions are the protection of nationals. They act for us otherwise only in so far as they are empowered to do so expressly by this Government.

MR. JOHNSON: I think this matter is very important. Will the Minister say whether the position of a British Ambassador in a foreign capital was such as to enable him hitherto to speak on behalf of the Government of the British Empire? That is to say, the King as representing these Governments—is that position changed and is any notification to be made that the position is changed?

MR. BAXTER: Let us suppose the signing of a new treaty takes place. Suppose we are not prepared to acquiesce, will that treaty also contain a footnote similar to the one retained in the Locarno Pact?

MR. FITZGERALD: There will be no need for Clause 9 in future. I think Deputy Johnson puts that question. There was, as far as I know, during our time no British Ambassador with extra-normal functions. The Deputy refers to negotiations between England and Italy with regard to Abyssinia. I hold and presume, and am satisfied that we are in no way included in this. If we are sent a notification, what would happen is, that we might be interested and we might see we had a particular lot of Irish nationals in Abyssinia that it was intended to put under the Italian sphere of influence, and we would suggest that we should be parties to this treaty, and that these nationals should be included in the British sphere and the Italian sphere. If we had no actual interest there we would not participate, and we would not share responsibility.

MR. JOHNSON: Do we not come right up against the question of belligerency? Supposing that negotiations between England and Italy led to warfare, would Italy recognize that we are not participants—that we are neutrals?

MR. FITZGERALD: The Deputy knows that is a particularly difficult thing to answer. It is a matter that I cannot possibly give a straight answer to now. Inasmuch as the only Government empowered to advise the King on affairs of this State is this Government, and as it is pre-eminently an affair of this State whether we will be at peace or war, presumably the King cannot declare war on behalf of us except on the advice of this Government. We know that on these occasions legal forms go by the board, and so far as I can interpret it, it would mean on strictly theoretical constitutional lines that the King could only declare war when he had simultaneous unanimous advice to that effect from all the Governments. That would be the constitutional position.

We may as well face facts. We know war usually comes with a rush, and people do not consider the niceties of constitutional practice. Great Britain, for instance, might advise the King to declare war on Italy, and then there would be a discussion, the nature of which at the moment I could not outline. One might say, first of all, that the King's subjects are at war when he is at war, and therefore Ireland is at war; and someone else might say that the King has no authority to declare war on behalf of this country when he has no advice from our Government, and therefore we are not at war. I cannot go any further now.

MR. JOHNSON: Can the Minister say whether there has been any understanding that this new position is going to be made a subject of discussion and negotiation with non-British powers with a view to their recognition of our immunity from war until our Government, through ordinary agencies, declares war or commits a belligerent act?

MR. FITZGERALD: I cannot say that. Inasmuch as the British plenipotentiary acting in any of these cases has the terms of his full powers clearly defined according to the geographical area of his Government's jurisdiction, we are excluded that much more than we were before, and we are to that extent, presumably, more in the direction Deputy Johnson wishes to go than we were before. There is that much of an advance.

Both Deputies Johnson and Magennis seem to gather from the reference to functions at the bottom of the early part of the report that there is such a thing as diplomatic unity. The whole trend of their discussion was on that point. Deputy Johnson says government is function. Yes, but all function is not government. I refer to a case of function there. The British Ambassador in any capital, let us say in Vienna or Madrid, acts as our mandatory in his normal functions. In that way the British Government, who sent him and pay his way, exceed in function our function. They are not in any way usurping the right of our Government. Their man acts as our mandatory. If all function is government, as Deputy Johnson implies, then you might say that the British Consul in Singapore is the real government, and not the British Government. On the contrary, he acts as their agent, and we can also mandate him, and, as we are on such close terms with the British Government, we let him act as our mandatory to serve our nationals in that area. Their normal functions are the protection of nationals.

Both Deputies seem to have gathered that there is diplomatic unity. There cannot be diplomatic unity when there are a number of different Governments advising, and when their advice in any one specific matter may be divergent. The Deputy referred to this as the kernel of the whole matter. He has in the document before him almost all the assurance he requires. The document, to my mind, represents quite clearly a step in the direction he desires. He has it clearly laid down that in the affairs of this State no Government but our own can advise. He has it also clearly laid down that the full powers issued by the British Government to their negotiators will be limited to the area of jurisdiction of that Government.

Now, with regard to exequaturs, Deputy Johnson asks where is the advance in the new practice. The advance is that the exequatur is now issued on the advice of Irish Ministers, and is received by the foreign representative from the Irish Minister. Against this, he urges that the application is made by the Irish Government to the Foreign Office in London. The application is made through diplomatic channels. It happens so far that whereas there are foreign Ministers in London there are none in Dublin, and the only channel for application so far is in London.

When one argues about this report and complains that it does not make Ireland a republic, complains that the King is there and so on, and that the Treaty position is still the Treaty position, even if a bit better, that there is retrogression rather than advance—

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Would the Minister say which of the three of us who spoke uttered that idiotic comment which he attributes to some one of us?

MR. FITZGERALD: It was a synthetic answer. Deputy Magennis was very much concerned that my name did not figure as prominently in the report as that of the Minister for Justice. He very generously seeks to exculpate me from guilt in the matter. As a matter of fact, I shared in the drafting of a large and important section of it, and I take full responsibility. Deputy Magennis said that the Imperial Conference is a super-Cabinet. That is obviously and grotesquely incorrect.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: The grotesque remark comes not from me but from Sir Robert Borden.

MR. FITZGERALD: I would suggest to Deputies, without in any way wishing to give myself undue importance, that they might, at least, regard me as a slightly better guide in these matters than any of these distinguished statesmen who are studied with such assiduity.

THE PRESIDENT: Hear, hear. It is a pity you are an Irishman because an Irishman will not be quoted.

MR. FITZGERALD: Deputy Magennis constantly refers to the Imperial title. I suppose he means the title covering the whole of the King's realm.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: The Minister for External Affairs ought to know what is meant by the Imperial Crown.

AN CEANN COMHAIRLE: Is not the Minister for External Affairs explaining what he means by the words, and can he not be allowed to do so?

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: On a point of explanation, when he attributes inaccuracy to me, I am entitled to ask him to point out where the inaccuracy lies.

AN CEANN COMHAIRLE: So much enthusiasm is displayed in pointing out inaccuracies on all sides that people are not really allowed to become inaccurate. The Minister must be allowed to continue and it can then be shown how inaccurate he is.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Might I submit that the Minister has just now made a charge against three of us who spoke from these benches? He said that we used certain expressions which he quoted, but he refused to deal with them. I spoke of them as idiotic comments, and they are idiotic. When he attributes them to us he ought to have the courtesy to say to which of us he attributes them.

AN CEANN COMHAIRLE: I am going to allow this debate to continue beyond eleven o'clock. On this occasion there cannot obviously be exact quotation from speeches made on any side, but I have constantly to listen here to Deputies attributing meanings to speeches which, in my judgment, they did not bear at all. I have consistently refrained, and shall continue to do so, from interpreting what anybody has said. I cannot see how a debate can be conducted unless a speaker is allowed to say that a speaker on the other side has said so-and-so. It has constantly been done, and I do not know any way of getting out of it. When a speaker quotes he must quote accurately, but when he says "I gather this impression," he must be allowed to go on. From the point of view of Deputies who speak against Ministers and against the Government, it would be a serious thing if they could not be allowed to explain what they gathered from Ministers' speeches.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: I would not presume to argue with you for a moment, sir, but I submit that the Minister purported to quote exact words. He used the term "Republic." I never mentioned the word "Republic" from beginning to end, nor did Deputy Johnson nor Deputy Baxter, and we three alone spoke.

MR. JOHNSON: I did not imagine that the Minister was quoting.

MR. FITZGERALD: I do not think that anybody really did.

AN CEANN COMHAIRLE: I do not see anything objectionable in the word "Republic."

MR. FITZGERALD: Unfortunately, I am speaking immediately after certain impressions were conveyed to my mind. I do not think that my mind is quite so inexact as Deputy Magennis thinks. He said yesterday that I spoke about things being settled which were, in fact, referred to a committee for further discussion. I do not think I did. I said that certain matters were referred to a committee of experts. I did not in any way misrepresent the facts on that, whereas, on the other hand, we heard something a while ago about a unified navy, and so on. I am not aware that we share in a unified navy. At present we have not any sort of navy worth mentioning, but such as it is, it is all right. When the Deputy argues by insisting that common methods of training, etc., make a unified army and navy, I cannot follow him. I gather from the Deputy that he presumes that every time there is fighting going on our army and the other army will be on opposite sides. I do not think so. I think the whole tendency will be to keep this country at peace, and not to go to war with any country, much less go to war with our next-door neighbour, who is much stronger. Deputy Magennis spoke about treaties being signed by the King as misleading people abroad. The King does not sign treaties. They are signed by the plenipotentiaries representing their Governments.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Appendix page 29: "His Majesty the King (here insert his Majesty's full title)".

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: It says here: "insert his full title."

MR. FITZGERALD: In 1924 there was a question of the Lausanne Treaty and a liquor treaty with America and there was a debate on the King's title here. One of the Deputies said that there was strong objection taken to the misrepresentation in the title, as it did not correspond with the fact, inasmuch as it spoke of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. I may be thoroughly dishonest, I may be a blackguard and on on, but I would certainly consider myself such if I got up now and said that never until I saw this document was I aware that the King was described otherwise than "King of Ireland." There was a discussion here, and on the strength of that discussion I saw the then Prime Minister of England, and afterwards I told the House that I had his assurance that steps were being taken to change it. The steps were slow, but they have moved on since then and the title corresponds more now to the political fact than it did. The political entity here is the Irish Free State. Deputy Magennis undoubtedly talked about the signing of a treaty by His Majesty. At the bottom of it it says: "In faith whereof the above-named plenipotentiaries have signed the present treaty." The Deputy objects that his title used in treaties is given in full instead of his being given separately as "King of Ireland."

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: I protest against this persistent misrepresentation. I never used such an expression. I said that I would test the position of Ireland by seeing how a treaty could be made. I never asked to have the King of Ireland make a treaty. I specifically said I would decide the status by this as a test. The Minister ought to understand clear English.

MR. FITZGERALD: I will put it to the other members of the House.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: The Minister will have it in the Official Report.

MR. FITZGERALD: Even now, the King has his full title. I thought the Deputy would prefer his partial title. The King is in the Constitution as part of the Oireachtas and as the Executive. The Deputy accepted that. When a treaty is made, in the King's name, it is on the advice of this Government, and the plenipotentiary acts as instructed by this Government. I was rather surprised that the Deputy so much wanted "the King of Ireland," as distinct from the rest of his realms, because one of the chief opponents to having the King separately King of Ireland was a man whom, I understood from the newspapers, Deputy Magennis was angling for as an ally—Mr. de Valera, the man who objected to it most. I understood from the newspapers that Deputy Magennis was assuring him that they had a common point of view on that. I was surprised that Mr. de Valera did not bite to the fly. Deputy Magennis went to the other extreme and was all for the King of Ireland. I am with the Deputy on that point of view. The partition of Ireland did not enter into the matter but, so far as I could gather in my stupidity, Deputy Magennis devoted almost all his conversation to the whole question of partition. Again he said:—

"It seems to me if, after the expiration of the month allowed to Northern Ireland to exercise its option, the decision be for partition, the responsibility for that in large measure should be understood by the people of Ireland to rest, and rest heavily, upon those men who have set out to devastate the country and to destroy the body of Ireland in order, as they allege, to save her soul."

AN CEANN COMHAIRLE: What is the Minister quoting from?

MR. FITZGERALD: From the Official Report.

THE PRESIDENT: November, 1922.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Before this Minister turned partition into separation.

THE PRESIDENT: "Responsibility for partition"—your own words.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: "Partition" before and after the Cosgrave "partition and separation."

MR. FITZGERALD: I take it that the second partition must have been simply supererogatory. Deputy Baxter wonders if we took any action about the "Defender of the Faith." That title, I presume, was given to an ancestor of the King's and his successors by the Pope. I think that the Pope is well empowered to give such honours.

MR. BAXTER: A very worthy defence.

MR. FITZGERALD: One Deputy expressed surprise about sending Acts to London and asked what was the position in this country. I suggest that Deputies would read, at least casually, the statement I made here yesterday. I stated in that what the position was here.

MR. BAXTER: Was that matter ever put up?

THE PRESIDENT: It was, and they turned it down.

MR. FITZGERALD: Deputy Magennis also talks about our status in the League of Nations. When we entered the League of Nations, we could only do so provided we had full jurisdiction and control over the area that we governed. Therefore, we entered for the present area of the Free State. If we had purported to enter for the whole thirty-two counties we would not have been eligible for entrance. Therefore, I cannot see that there is any change in our status in the League of Nations by the points raised here. There is, in fact, a change by the fact that we are no longer indented under cover of the phrase, "British Empire," and there is no plenipotentiary but the one appointed by this Government who has power to act in any way for the Free State, whereas before there was the British Empire with other Dominions indented underneath it and the British plenipotentiary with unlimited powers making a tangible unified representation on it. That has now gone. The plenipotentiary appointed by the British Government has no more power to act for this State than our plenipotentiary has to act for theirs. In that there is actual co-equality. I said yesterday that that was an exact and precise representation of the existing state of affairs, but Deputy Magennis said that it was quite the contrary. But it was not.

Every document is susceptible of several interpretations. I said yesterday something like this: that, in fact, there is no such constitutional organism as the British Empire. There is a series of States with one unifying feature, the King. There is no central government or federal Government. Each Government is complete in itself and no Government has control over any other Government, although there are certain forms existing still which, as I have said, are recognized in their temporariness and which will be done away with as time and circumstances permit.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: May I ask is there any such thing as a community of nations known as the British Empire? Are these words without meaning?

MR. FITZGERALD: The Deputy knows that I have said that there is no constitutional organism but there is such a thing as the British Commonwealth of Nations, which cannot really be described as a constitutional organism.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Has it a King?

MR. FITZGERALD: It has a King acting separately on the advice of each Government.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: As regards each State?

MR. FITZGERALD: As regards each State in regard to all their affairs, external and internal.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Has the community of nations known as the British Empire, and ruled over by an Imperial sovereign, no entity?

MR. FITZGERALD: It has no constitutional entity.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: Is it unconstitutional?

MR. FITZGERALD: We could go in this way all night.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: The Minister undertook to reply to me. Part of my case was that there was a community of nations known as the British Empire, that it has functions, that the control of them by way of government is the King in his Imperial character, and that treaties are signed on behalf of each State with the King's name at the head of the treaty.

MR. FITZGERALD: The Deputy says that there is a political entity called the British Empire. There is not. He says that it is ruled over as regards government by an imperial King. That is incorrect. The King's function is to reign, not to govern. That is done by the governments of the various countries. The King acts on the advice of each separate government. These advices might quite easily be contradictory, and nullify each other. With regard to one government he can do one thing, and with regard to another government a different thing, because in his functions he is several. Every document is capable of several interpretations. Here we have a series of States, having been one they have grown into several with all sorts of anomalies. There is nothing particularly illogical about it in any direction in the move from chaotically logical into logicity a little less chaotic. The document in front of you is logical.

PROFESSOR MAGENNIS: But is it satisfactory?

MR. FITZGERALD: Yes, it is eminently satisfactory, inasmuch as it improves the position and makes it clearer than before that there is a root principle, which is co-equality. That co-equality is co-equality of independence. We could be co-equal in this way: every Government would have to submit or yield to a veto of, say, five other governments. That is not so. Each government is a complete and independent thing in itself. I made a statement yesterday giving the interpretation of this Government to the document, and I suggested that the only interpretation of the document, which matters to the members of this Dáil or to the people of this country, is the interpretation put upon it by their own Government. The acts and practice of this Government will be guided by our interpretation. It is, therefore, quite irrelevant to quote the interpretation of outsiders, and a lot of time has been wasted here in quoting interpretations, most of which were made before the document was written. I think Deputies should be satisfied that my statement represents the interpretation which we are going to follow, and, if Deputies, including Deputy Baxter, who I believe would not wantonly or wilfully misconstrue it, would read the document carefully, they would find in it what was the practice before, and what was the practice we got by the Treaty—that the practice and constitutional usage of Canada should be the practice and constitutional usage here. That was accepted by Deputy Johnson, Deputy Magennis, and Deputy Baxter. They will find in my statement yesterday what was the practice we inherited and what are the proposals for altering it. I am satisfied that the proposals show a definite improvement in the direction in which we wish to go. Therefore, I say the document is eminently satisfactory. Deputy Baxter spoke of enthusiasm, but I am afraid that my nature at this time of life is incapable of enthusing. I made, as well as I could, a clear statement to enable Deputies to understand the implications of that document. I do not ask anybody to enthuse about it. I do not say that we have now arrived at perfection, but I say and maintain that every intelligent reader of the document will agree that it is eminently satisfactory.

No. 144.

EXTRACT FROM A SPEECH MADE BY GENERAL HERTZOG AT PRETORIA ON 20TH DECEMBER, 1926, AS REPORTED IN THE RAND DAILY MAIL OF 21ST DECEMBER, 1926.

In spite of Union, the old Republican burgher, with the fellows of his race in the other provinces of the Union, has continued very anxiously to look forward to the day of restored national liberty. And no wonder. The Afrikaner, Dutch-speaking as well as English-speaking, has a deeply rooted love of his national liberty. The urge for realization of that freedom has characterized him since the earliest days of his settlement in South Africa—the desire to be free and thereby to see recognized his equality with others, both as man and nation.

I therefore desire to convey to the people of South Africa my hearty congratulations on the declaration made by the Imperial Conference in regard to our free national status. Dealing with the status and mutual relations among the group of self-governing nations composed of Great Britain and the Dominions, the Imperial Conference says:—

"They are autonomous nations within the British Empire, equal in status, in no respect inferior the one to the other in respect of interior or foreign affairs, although allied to each by common allegiance to the Crown and freely united as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

This declaration can also be contained in different terms, but to my mind no alteration of terms can more clearly demonstrate the absolute declaration of freedom from all subjection to any authority except that of our free national will.

South Africa, so it is declared here, is free in its self-government inside as well as outside; and the degree and nature of that self-government is equal to that of England without any inferiority or reservation. Where, therefore, South Africa is granted a national freedom equal in all respects to that of Great Britain, with a positive repudiation of any inferiority to Great Britain in the exercise of our free national will, there our national status and our national freedom both as regards extent and nature are for the future placed beyond all doubt in respect of international as well as interior matters. It is immaterial whatever terms one may employ in giving expression to that national status or national freedom. It can make no difference whether one speaks of autonomy, independence or sovereign independence. It is sufficient for us to know that our status and liberty are no less than that of Great Britain, and we do not object that this can as a matter of fact not be greater than that of the most powerful free state of Europe.

"Empire" and "Commonwealth."

Whatever may therefore be the nature or the degree of liberty or independence enjoyed by Great Britain or granted to Great Britain, the same will always have to apply to the Dominions.

In its declarations two terms are employed by the Imperial Conference in respect of which I desire to say a few words. The one is the term "British Empire," and the other the term "British Commonwealth of Nations." In view of the past it may be necessary to point out that neither of these terms must be taken as indicating the existence of one or other kind of supreme authority. Any kind of idea of supreme authority or super-authority has been finally dispelled ("broken") by the Imperial Conference in regard to the Empire.

Neither Great Britain nor any of the Dominions recognizes ("knows") any other authority over itself except that of its own free national will. Equality of status, it has been said, could not be secured along the course of federation (because the Dominions would not have federation) and consequently the only other alternative to that end is adopted, namely, that of our national will—autonomy.

The employment of the terms "British Empire" and "British Commonwealth of Nations" contemplates no more than two different groupings of the countries and peoples under the British Crown in order thereby to indicate the common relations of the members of each relative group either as a result of the common Crown or of a common alliance. "Commonwealth of Nations" is the name for Great Britain and the Dominions in their free association under the Crown. The sovereign freedom of the individual members of the alliance is not interfered with thereby, i.e., by their free association.

This also applies to the term "British Empire" under which name come to stand grouped the Dominions under Great Britain, as well as India, Rhodesia, and other nations under the Crown which stand outside the circle of the Commonwealth of Nations.

No Authority or Domination.

The British Empire, therefore, is not a states persona and possesses no authority or domination over the members of any member of the British Commonwealth of Nations; and it has as such consequently no jurisdictional significance for our national freedom. In so far as this is something more than a geographical name it is merely an outcome of the fact that all the countries and peoples covered by that name stand under the same Crown. Notwithstanding, therefore, the relation in which they stand to the Commonwealth of Nations or to the British Empire, the independent liberty of the Dominions remains unscathed, equal to that of Great Britain in degree as well as in nature.

It is a pity, undoubtedly, that the Imperial Conference had to continue employing a word to which such different meanings have from time to time been attached; but the declaration of the Imperial Conference leaves no doubt as to what the word "Empire" shall mean in future. No wonder that the great importance of the declaration made by the Imperial Conference has at once been realized and acknowledged by the whole world. By that declaration our absolute national independence is in the most uncompromising terms recognized, so that in the words of the Conference, "every Dominion is now and will always remain the sole arbitrator of the nature and extent of its co-operation, and every self-governing member of the Empire is now master of its own fate."

But not merely is our full liberty acknowledged by that declaration—it is also notified to the world as the authoritative expression of men speaking as the mouthpieces of the Crown after ripe consideration and solemn consultation.

It must now be clear to everyone of you how completely, by the declaration of the Imperial Conference in regard to our status, the Empire group unit idea has been broken with—that idea so assiduously pleaded and preached by some people since 1919. That idea, by which the Empire would in reality have acted as an authoritative unit to which the individual state members would have given up their individual free national will in reference to foreign interests, has been deliberately negated by the Imperial Conference as being unsuitable and unwanted.

For our national liberty this is a fact of the very greatest importance. Under the regime of the group unit idea there could be no question of dominial national liberty; and under that only the Empire, as a unit, would in theory be regarded as sovereign free, and Great Britain as a nation would in practice be regarded as really free. By rejecting that idea, the idea of an Imperial super-authority was also rejected, and a positive preference was given to dominial autonomous national liberty, resting on the sovereign will of the people of each separate Dominion, although a member of the Empire.

The Empire has thereby been denuded of all will and consequently of all authority, and henceforth signifies to us nothing more than a mere name indicating our common adhesion ("aanhorigheid") together with other peoples to the Crown—and that is all. Over our national liberty or over the exercise of our sovereign national will the Empire has no say whatever.

Between the conception of Empire, therefore, as wanted by the supporters of the "group unit" idea and that accepted by the Imperial Conference there is practically nothing in common except in name. Consequently, while no protagonist of South African national liberty could ever be a supporter of or could ever advocate co-operation with an Empire such as desired by the above-mentioned people, there is nothing to prevent the most ardent protagonist of national liberty from being at the same time a warm supporter of the Empire and of co-operation with the Empire as now accented by the Imperial Conference.

Britain's Renunciation.

The declaration made by the Imperial Conference differs from all former expressions in respect of the status and liberty of the Dominions by the publicity deliberately given to it, as well as by the authority with which that declaration has been made and the publicity given. It is not necessary for me now to go into the great significance of this matter, but in a third respect this declaration differs from all former similar expressions, namely, in the absolute renunciation therein made on behalf of Great Britain in favour of the Dominions of all say in connexion with Dominion affairs of whatever nature. Consequently we are here not dealing, as on former occasions, with a mere opportunistic declaration granting the Dominions this or that right or capacity as required by circumstances—reserving to Great Britain all rights and capacities not yet granted to the Dominions—but we are dealing with a positive, complete equalization of national liberty on national rights without any reservation, openly declared and accepted by the qualified Government representatives of Great Britain and the Dominions.

By that declaration of equality of the Dominions with Great Britain as free States, Great Britain has renounced any right or privilege which it may hitherto have claimed in respect of any of the Dominions; and where to-day or in the future any remnants of her former superiority and say should apply, there this takes place, not because of superior authority, but merely on the ground of agreement by the Dominion or Dominions concerned. Thereby our national liberty and independence, both as regards nature and extent, have for the future been placed beyond all doubt and outside the reach of party squabble.

What this means for us as a people and for our national welfare may be best realized if we should cast our minds back on the history of our country during the past century. Not only has the demand for South African national liberty repeatedly been a subject of bitter struggle and suffering, but it has up to now always been the main cause of national friction and division between Boer and Briton—and for that reason employed by selfish politicians in order to foster party interests and self interests. The removal of this apple of discord must fill everyone with joy.

No more Racial Feeling.

But the further beneficial results which necessarily must eventuate from the Declaration must inspire us with the greatest confidence for the future. The demand for national freedom and the nature and extent of that freedom has now given way to the question as to how that freedom can best be employed for the welfare and prosperity of the people of South Africa. By that all racial feeling is immediately placed in the background and free play is left for the sound judgment and understanding of all sections of the population to arrive at an unprejudiced choice of political conduct.

The question, for instance, as to our co-operation within the Empire thereby at once assumes a different colour. The reply thereto no longer needs the preceding solution of the question as to the effect of such co-operation on our national freedom, or on the achievement thereof. For that reason there can be but little doubt to-day as to what should be the reply and what will be the reply to that question if submitted to the people, either English or Dutch-speaking. I for myself do not hesitate for one moment, now that the Union has on proper authority been openly acknowledged as an independent free state, to declare in answer to that question that our welfare and happiness as a people along no other course can be better maintained and fostered than within the bond of nations with which we are now associated as a free people of our own free will, and that in no other manner our national freedom can enjoy greater authority and guarantee than within the British Empire on the basis on which it exists to-day. The form in which the Empire stands in front of us to-day, denuded of all authority over the Dominions, without person or power,—merely a name—with peace, security and prosperity as the chief aims contemplated by it—removes all hesitation and doubt as to recommending hearty co-operation with it to South Africa.

"South Africa First."

Our motto will still have to remain, as always, "South Africa first," and it will be the duty of its responsible statesmen in the first place to attend to South Africa's individual interests. By that, however, there need be no interference with the hearty co-operation, as regards the promotion of our common interests, with the other States of the Empire. The interests of South Africa are no less South Africa's interests merely because its allies are co-interested.

The conciliating power of the declaration made by the Imperial Conference will probably not show itself more strongly and not produce better fruit than in the spirit of good feeling on the part of the Dominions towards Great Britain and in the degree of friendly co-operation as willing members of the Empire. But within the borders of each separate Dominion it will make its beneficent influence felt.

As regards South Africa, who can doubt that that influence will display itself in a clear manner socially as well as politically? I have never doubted that that will be the effect of such a declaration, and one of the strongest motives which induced me, during all these years of struggle, to persist in the demand for complete national freedom for South Africa is that I always regarded this as an essential condition for a true South African national spirit in which the sense of division between Afrikaner and Afrikaner merely on the ground of difference of descent will be solved.

No Disappointment.

That I am not going to be disappointed in that expectation, neither by Boer nor by Briton, I think all evidence has been forthcoming by the cables of congratulation from South Africa sent to me immediately after the publication of the declaration by the Imperial Conference, as well as by the welcome accorded to me on my return. In those cables and in that welcome the awakening of a new and richer South African national spirit is displayed, by which our social life will not merely be noticeably purified of racial friction, but our political objective will be protected from racial difference and prejudice in future. (Hear, hear.)

To what extent the declaration of the equality of status between the Dominions and Great Britain is really intended to serve for the future as a test and a measure in the practical exercise of rights and capacities, is clearly and forcibly demonstrated by the attempts made at the same time by the Imperial Conference in order, on the basis of total equality with Great Britain, to arrive at a solution of various problems between her and the Dominions which so far had been left practically untouched by former Conferences.

On that basis a solution was arrived at not merely as to what should be the proper relation in which the Governor-General shall stand towards the British Government, what the Royal title shall be, what changes must be made in the form of the international treaties in which Great Britain and the Dominions are concerned as contracting parties, but also as regards other subjects and problems in respect of which the principle of equality is affected and interfered with by existing practice or legislation on the part of Great Britain. It is now understood that the necessary steps will be taken by the British Government, if so requested, for the removal of any obstacle preventing a Dominion from being placed in the possession of the enjoyment of its free national will.

Thus, for instance, an examination will be made in connexion with the question of extra-territorial legislation, legislation in regard to navigation and so on—all with the object of arriving at practical settlements regarding those subjects on the basis of equal status.

South Africa's New Era.

All this is proof of the great significance of the political change which has taken place among ourselves during the past few weeks—a change which of necessity will make itself felt at all points and in all corners of our national as well as social life. For South Africa, so to speak, a newer national period has dawned in which the past will, in many respects, be broken with, and fresh points of contact will have to be looked for. And it is demanded of us that with the creation of a free fatherland there shall exist with us a purified patriotism by which the interests of South Africa shall be placed above all descent and race, but also above all interests of self and party.

I therefore want to make an appeal here to-day to all sons and daughters of South Africa, to whichever party they may belong, to co-operate for the uplifting of our political life above the level of racial prejudice and party division, and to seek and to settle the basis of partisanship on common political convictions and on common national interests. Whether or not parties may have to suffer under that is a question which should not concern us where the interest of South Africa and its future demand this from us. (Cheers.)

Botha and Smuts.

Proceeding in his remarks without his notes, General Hertzog said that since the declaration had been made the question had been repeatedly put as to whom honour should be given for what had been achieved. He proceeded: "Let me say this. That to me is an idle question. We do not care who gets the honour. The great thing is that we have got what we have got. No individual person can claim the honour of having secured this—it has been secured by the will, by the insistence, of the people of South Africa. (Cheers.) Let us for a moment cast our minds back to the days of General Botha. (Cheers.) Is there one among us who dares say that it was not General Botha's great desire—that he did not work for the liberty of the people of South Africa? (Cheers.)"

To-day we must speak our minds openly and honestly. We may have differed from the late General Botha as to the manner in which that liberty should be secured; we may have differed from him as to what that freedom, that national freedom of ours, should be exactly, but there can be no doubt that General Botha strove for that liberty, that he worked for it and toiled for it. (Loud cheers.)

Let me come nearer the present day, let us come to General Smuts. (Applause and a little laughter.) I want to be honest and open on this matter, and I think it is no more than right that we as a people, if we are ever to be worthy of the name of a free nation, should openly and freely recognize and acknowledge what has been done, and give praise where praise is due. (Cheers.) Here again I know that many of you may be hardly able to credit it, and you may say, "General Hertzog is standing there and trying to jest with us," but I have ample proof that General Smuts wished to secure freedom for us just as much as anyone, and that he made an attempt actually to secure it. (Cheers.)

Unfortunately, he did not succeed in his attempt. But even though he did not succeed it is not for us to deny his attempts. (Hear, hear.) Perhaps things were not ripe at the time. But I want to say this—it was not General Botha, it was not General Smuts or anyone else who secured this freedom, this independence for us, it was because the people willed it and insisted upon it that we secured it. (Cheers.)

The honour for what has been secured is due in the first place to the people of South Africa themselves. And do you think that the English-speaking people have contributed less than the Dutch-speaking of South Africa? Superficially and at first glance you may say, "Yes, they fought us on every occasion when we wanted our freedom." You may say that, but I am convinced that the English-speaking South African wanted freedom as much as the Dutch-speaking Afrikaner, but they were afraid that if we got our liberty we should break away from the Empire—that was all.

I feel that English and Dutch-speaking Afrikaners alike rejoice at what has been achieved and recognize the great asset we have. It now behoves us all to work together and make an asset for South Africa of what has been achieved. We have an opportunity to go forward as one great people, and to make this liberty of ours fruitful and beneficial for South Africa. May we all do that. (Cheers.)

30TH JUNE. Secret. As I have already informed you, Mr. Mackenzie King asked me to grant him a dissolution and I refused. Thereupon he resigned and I asked Mr. Meighen to form a Government which he has done. This constitutional or unconstitutional act of mine seems to resolve itself into these salient features. A Governor-General has the absolute right of granting or of refusing a dissolution. A decision to refuse is a very dangerous one as it embodies the rejection of the advice of accredited Minister, which is the bedrock of constitutional government. Therefore, in nine cases out of ten a Governor-General should take the advice of the Prime Minister on this as on other matters. But if the Governor-General considers the advice offered to be wrong and unfair and not for the welfare of the people it behoves him to act in what he considers the best interests of the country.

This is naturally the point of view I have taken and which I expressed in my reply to Mr. King. Text of reply is being telegraphed separately.*

It will be observed that the letter in question is an acknowledgement of a letter from Mr. King† (the text of which is also being telegraphed) appealing to me to consult the Imperial Government. While recognizing to the full the help that this course might afford me, I flatly refused, telling Mr. King that to ask advice from London, where Canadian conditions were not as well known as they were to me, was to put the British Government in the unfortunate position of having to offer a solution which might give the Canadian people that feeling of participation in their politics which is to be strongly deprecated.

It seemed to me that there was one person and one alone who was responsible for decision and that person was myself. If the Imperial Government were involved I should feel that the relationship of the Dominion to the old country would be liable to be seriously jeopardized whereas any incompetent and unwise action of a Governor-General can only involve himself.

I am glad to say that I was able to maintain a friendly feeling with my late Prime Minister to the end. I should have offered my resignation at once had it been otherwise. This point of view has been uppermost in my mind ever since Mr. King determined (against my private advice) on retaining office last November. It has not been always easy but it was imperative; a Governor-General and a Prime Minister could not allow a difference of point of view to wreck their relationship without the greatest detriment to the country. Mr. King, whose bitterness was very marked (on Monday), will probably take a very vitriolic line against myself, that seems only natural. I have to await the verdict of history to prove that the course I adopted was a wrong one, and this I do with an easy conscience, convinced that whether right or wrong I have acted in the interests of Canada and have implicated no one else in my decision.

There is only one thing I have to add and that is that at our last three interviews I appealed to Mr. King not to put the Governor-General in the position of having to make a controversial decision. Mr. King refused and I did not see what else I could do.—BYNG.

30TH JUNE. Secret. My telegram of 30th June.* Following is text of Mr. Mackenzie King's letter to me of 28th June:—

Begins: My dear Governor-General, Your Excellency having declined to accept my advice to place your signature to the Order in Council with reference to the dissolution of Parliament which I have placed before you to-day, I hereby tender to Your Excellency my resignation as Prime Minister of Canada.

Your Excellency will recall that in our recent conversations relative to dissolution I have on each occasion suggested to Your Excellency, as I have again urged this morning, that, having regard to the possible very serious consequences of a refusal of the advice of your first Minister to dissolve Parliament, you should, before definitely deciding on this step, cable the Secretary of State for the Dominions asking the British Government, from whom you have come to Canada under instructions, what in the opinion of the Secretary of State for the Dominions your course should be in the event of the Prime Minister presenting you with an Order in Council having reference to a dissolution.

As a refusal by a Governor-General to accept advice of a Prime Minister is a serious step at any time, and most serious under existing conditions in all parts of the British Empire to-day, there will be raised (I fear) by the refusal on Your Excellency's part to accept advice tendered, a grave constitutional question without precedent in the history of Great Britain for a century and in the history of Canada since the Confederation.

If there is anything which, having regard to my responsibilities as Prime Minister, I can even yet do to avert such a deplorable and possibly far-reaching crisis, I shall be glad to do so, and shall be pleased to have my resignation withheld at Your Excellency's request pending the time it may be necessary for Your Excellency to communicate with the Secretary of State for the Dominions. Begins: My dear Mr. King, I must acknowledge on paper with many thanks the receipt of your letter handed to me at our meeting yesterday.

In trying to condense all that has passed between us during the last week it seems to my mind that there is only one point at issue.

You advise me "that, as, in your opinion, Mr. Meighen is unable to govern the country, there should be another election with the present machinery to enable the people to decide." My contention is that Mr. Meighen has not been given a chance of trying to govern or saying he cannot do so and that all reasonable expedients should be tried before resorting to another election.

Permit me to say once more that before deciding on my constitutional course on this matter I gave the subject the most fair minded and painstaking consideration which it was in my power to apply.

I can only add how sincerely I regret the severance of our official companionship and how gratefully I acknowledge the help of your counsel and co-operation. With warmest wishes, yours, &c. Letter ends.

1ST JULY. Personal and Secret. Your Secret telegram of 30th June.* I have read with the greatest interest your telegram and your correspondence† with Mr. Mackenzie King. I am exceedingly sorry that it should have fallen to your lot to have to deal with so delicate and difficult a situation. I cannot of course express any opinion on your action but I can state that I unreservedly concur in the view which you took of the suggestion that you should refer to me before deciding on the request for a dissolution. Clearly the matter is one concerning Canadian internal affairs in which Ministers here could not take it upon themselves to intervene. I may say that had you referred to me I could only have replied on similar lines to the statements with regard to the political situation in New South Wales which I made in the House of Commons on 25th March, viz., that in my view it would not be proper for the Secretary of State to issue instructions, with regard to the exercise of his constitutional duties, to a Governor.—AMERY.

XI. THE POSITION OF THE CROWN IN RELATION TO THE DOMINIONS.

No. 149.

SIR MAURICE HANKEY (CABINET OFFICE) to MR. E. J. HARDING (DOMINIONS OFFICE.)

[Answered by No. 151.]

(Secret.)

Offices of the Cabinet, 2, Whitehall Gardens, S.W.1.

29th November, 1926.

MY DEAR HARDING,

I ENCLOSE a copy of a letter I have received from Lord Stamfordham, in which he states that the King has been much interested in an article in yesterday's Sunday Times by Sir Sidney Low. I expect you have the article in the Office, so I am not enclosing it.

My own impression is that it is an exaggeration to say that "new and enlarged responsibilities will be thrown upon the Sovereign" by the Report of the Imperial Conference. Sir Sidney Low probably did not realize how far we had already gone in the direction of Dominion autonomy.

I should be much obliged if you could give me your views as to the sort of reply I should make. Before sending a reply, however, I shall, of course, consult those whom Lord Stamfordham mentions at the end of his letter.

Yours ever,

M. P. A. HANKEY.

Enclosure in No. 149.

DEAR HANKEY,

Buckingham Palace, 29th November, 1926.

THE King has read with attention and interest the enclosed article by Sir Sidney Low in yesterday's Sunday Times, especially that part which dwells upon the position of the Sovereign vis-à-vis to the Dominions, which Sir Sidney considers has been materially altered by the decisions come to by the Imperial Conference. If it really be the case that "new and enlarged responsibilities will be thrown upon the Sovereign," it will be no exaggeration to say that His Majesty's task will be an "extraordinarily difficult and delicate" one. So far as the King understands, Governors-General will in future not be the channel of communication between their respective Governments and the Home Government, but that these will be made direct by the respective Premiers: but to whom? Sir Sidney Low implies that they will be made direct to the King, on the assumption that the King "reigns by the same right in each of his Monarchies with equal but separate prerogatives in all."

The reason I write to you is, that His Majesty feels that you, who have attended every meeting when these matters have been discussed, and yourself recorded the minutes, probably have formed the best idea of what will be the result of the changes agreed upon by the Conference. Sir Sidney Low may be altogether wrong in his estimate: but His Majesty will, in due course, require some official information as to whether there will be any change in the Sovereign's relations with the Governments of the respective Dominions.

You are at liberty to show this letter, if you so desire, to the Prime Minister, Lord Birkenhead, Mr. Amery, or Lord Balfour.

Yours very truly,

STAMFORDHAM.

Sir Maurice Hankey, G.C.B.,

MR. L. S. AMERY (DOMINIONS OFFICE) to SIR SIDNEY LOW.

[Answered by No. 152.]

MY DEAR LOW,

Downing Street, 29th November, 1926.

I HAVE just been reading your article on the Imperial Conference in the Sunday Times, and have been a little perturbed by some inferences which you draw or seem to draw from our conclusions. We based ourselves entirely on two principles: one equality, the other the unity of a single, indivisible Crown.

The very essence of the constitution of the Empire as we have stated it is that it is a single body corporate of subjects of that Crown, owing loyalty to the Crown and consequently to each other. The actual machinery of government is divided up geographically and the different Governments are now stated to be as explicitly non-subordinate one to another as successive Governments in this country are unbound by each other. But just as the common element of the Crown preserves the sense of continuity and responsibility as between successive Governments of His Majesty here or in any Dominion, so it does also between co-existent but geographically discrete Governments of His Majesty. The British Crown is one in space as in time. Above all, as no loyal subject of the King can be at peace with the King's enemies though there is no definite obligation as to the extent of the aid which he should render, so too no Government of the Empire can be neutral in the proper sense when the King is at war anywhere, though, of course, it may not decide to do anything active. That unity of the Crown is the basis of all co-operation and development, and the one fatal heresy to guard against is the idea that there are many Crowns or that the King is King in different parts of the Empire in different senses. A personal union, such as that which once existed between England and Hanover, or between Austria and Hungary, is precisely what the British Empire is not. The change in the title was certainly not intended to convey any such idea. It is purely a geographically descriptive title and Ireland figures in it ((a) because it always has been mentioned (b) because it is not beyond the seas (i.e. the oceans). Otherwise the political units "Irish Free State," etc., would have been chosen. With reference to India alone there is this much of difference in political significance, that whereas the King is King in the ordinary sense in British India, he is only overlord or Emperor over the native States whose subjects are not directly his subjects.

I know you are much too sound a constitutionalist to share the "personal union" heresy, but there are several phrases in your article which might convey the wrong impression to the unwary, and I hope some day when you are writing again you will keep in mind the danger of a misinterpretation which is directly contrary to what we have so securely established at the Conference.

Incidentally there is another passage in the article which might suggest that the power of the British legislature here to legislate for the Dominions has been abolished. All that has been done is to state, what has been true for a generation or more, that it can only be exercised by consent, though we were all agreed that its legal existence might at any time prove useful and convenient, e.g., in connexion with merchant shipping or naturalization.

Yours sincerely,

L. S. AMERY.

MR. E. J. HARDING (DOMINIONS OFFICE) to SIR MAURICE HANKEY (CABINET OFFICE).

(Secret.)

MY DEAR HANKEY,

Downing Street, 4th December, 1926.

MANY thanks for your letter of 29th November* enclosing one from Lord Stamfordham. We have carefully read Sir Sidney Low's article, but we do not think that it can be taken as in any way an authoritative comment on the Report of the Inter-Imperial Relations Committee.

* No. 149.

For example, you will notice that Sir Sidney Low says that "the Report declares that the Parliament at Westminster does not possess, even in theory, the power of legislating upon the domestic affairs of any Dominion." This, however, is not at all the wording used in the Report, which places it on record (page 18 of the Summary of Proceedings, Cmd. 2768) that "the constitutional practice is that legislation by the Parliament at Westminster applying to a Dominion would only be passed with the consent of the Dominion concerned."

Again, the article suggests in certain passages a multiplicity of Crowns which are held by a single person. Such a conception is, however, most misleading. You will remember the emphasis laid by the Conference upon a single Crown as the emblem of the unity of the British Empire.

As the result of discussion here, we suggest that your answer to Lord Stamfordham might begin by commenting in the sense of the foregoing and then proceed on the following lines:—"It is, of course, difficult to speak with any certainty. But it does not seem likely at the moment that there will be, as a result of the Report of the Committee on Inter-Imperial Relations, any far-reaching departure from the present system."

"On the special point raised with regard to channels of communication, the change contemplated by the Report is that in future official communications between the Government in London and any Dominion Government so desiring should pass direct between Ministers (i.e., presumably between the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs here and the Secretary of State for External Affairs in a Dominion, or other Minister holding a corresponding office). It is, however, already the custom for the Governor-General to pass to his Ministers for consideration and action any communications which he receives from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, and, similarly, to pass on to the Secretary of State any communication which he receives from his Ministers for transmission to the Government here. Hence the main practical effect of the change suggested would seem to be that in future official communications from London to a Dominion Government would no longer be addressed to the Governor-General, and official communications from a Dominion Government to London would no longer be signed by the Governor-General. The right of the Governor-General to receive copies of all such communications which are of importance is carefully safeguarded."

"Looking at the matter more broadly, it will be seen that the Report of the Inter-Imperial Relations Committee draws a distinction between advice to the Crown, and advice to His Majesty in person. The Crown in a Dominion, i.e., the Governor-General, acting as His Majesty's representative, is of course advised direct by Dominion Ministers on all matters appertaining to the affairs of the Dominion, and the implication of the Report is that His Majesty's Ministers in Great Britain are not at liberty to intervene between the Governor-General and His Ministers. There are, however, certain matters affecting Dominion affairs where it is customary, or necessary, for His Majesty to be approached in person. As regards such matters, the Report of the Committee is mainly concerned with laying down the principle governing the present position, viz., that if His Majesty is approached on such matters through his Ministers in London, any advice which they may tender must not be contrary to the views of the Dominion Government concerned."

"As regards the actual method of approaching His Majesty, the words in the penultimate paragraph on page 18 of the Summary of Proceedings of the Conference (Cmd. 2768) were framed so as to permit of the present practice as regards submissions continuing in force. What precisely is the constitutional position of His Majesty's Ministers here in making such submissions may perhaps be open to discussion. But there seems no reason at the moment to suppose that any substantial variation from existing procedure is involved."

Mr. Amery has seen, and approved, this letter. I understand that he hopes to have an opportunity shortly of talking himself to Lord Stamfordham as to the position resulting from the Report of Lord Balfour's Committee.

Yours ever,

E. J. HARDING.

SIR SYDNEY LOW to MR. L. S. AMERY (DOMINIONS OFFICE).

[Answered by No. 154.]

45, Campden Hill Court, Kensington, W.8.

4th December, 1926.

MY DEAR AMERY.

I AM much obliged for your very interesting and informative letter of 29th November,* concerning an article of mine on the Conference Committee's Report on Inter-Imperial Relations. (I should have acknowledged it before, but there was a slight error in the address which appears to have caused some delay in delivery.)

I note with attention what you say about the Crown, and shall keep your observations before me when writing the supplementary chapter on the Imperial Constitution which I am preparing for the next edition of my Governance of England. Something of the kind I have myself, in less adequate terms, attempted to express. Writing twenty years ago I said that the Crown in our system is like the ether of the physicists, the source and essence of matter and energy. I added that this "immortal, omnipotent, all-embracing, infallible, and omniscient entity" is, in fact, an abstraction which might almost as well be called "the Will of the People" or the "Spirit of the Nation." In the Empire it is, as you point out, the sense of unity, continuity, corporate interest and sentiment. And I should accept your proposition that it is indivisible, one in space and time. All members of the Imperial realm are linked by a common allegiance.

It did not, however, occur to me that I was traversing these principles when I suggested that the Sovereign—not the Crown—is invested with a "multiple personality" since he functions separately in each of his "kingdoms" or nation-states. I am endeavouring to explain to the general reader the implications of the equality-of-status system as laid down in the Report; and I hope to do so without being guilty of the "personal-union" heresy. I describe the Commonwealth as an alliance of equal nations, though of course, an alliance of an exceptional and unique character. The Crown extends over all; but it is a spiritual thing, spiritually discerned. Its august earthly incarnation is "King of Great Britain" in one country, "King in Australia" in another, and it is in that discrete capacity that acts are done in his name in each sphere. It appeared to me that the Report insisted upon this point, since it declared that the King can only accept advice upon matters relating to the affairs of any Dominion from his responsible ministers in that Dominion. I do not criticize or condemn this arrangement; but it seems useful to point out that it leaves the King without responsible advisers upon affairs affecting more than one nation-state, and may require him to exercise his personal discretion when he receives conflicting or divergent advice from two of his Governments. In practice, no doubt, the difference would be adjusted by negotiation between the Cabinets. But the hiatus exists; and I believe that one of the next stages in our constitutional development will be to provide the Sovereign with extra-national advisers by means of an Imperial delegation, or an Imperial Committee of the Privy Council, or in some other form.

I note also that in your opinion the Report does not aim at abolishing the legislative sovereignty of the Imperial Parliament. I had drawn a different inference from the pointed references to "the Parliament at Westminster," the reservation of Dominion legislation, the Colonial Laws Validity Act, and other passages. But I am glad to learn that this reserved power, limited as it must be in practical operation, is to be maintained.

It seems desirable to make people grasp the fact that the self-governing part of the Empire consists of autonomous, separate, and politically-equal communities. But as the Report asserts, and as you have so rightly emphasized in your speeches, the Empire depends upon positive ideals. Co-operation, not individuation, is to be stressed, co-operation among the inter-Imperial economic, financial, diplomatic, industrial, intellectual, military, and migration agencies, which will express the Will to Unity more effectively than any political machinery. For all this the late Conference has laid down most valuable foundations, and you can be legitimately congratulated on your own large personal share in this notable achievement.

I am, &c.,

SIDNEY LOW.

SIR MAURICE HANKEY (CABINET OFFICE) to LORD STAMFORDHAM
(BUCKINGHAM PALACE).

(Secret.)

Offices of the Cabinet, 2, Whitehall Gardens, S.W.1.

DEAR LORD STAMFORDHAM,

6th December, 1926.

I HAVE now consulted the Dominions Office in regard to the article by Sir Sidney Low in the Sunday Times of 28th November, which was forwarded with your letter of 29th November.*

The view of the Dominions Office confirms generally the view I expressed personally to the King on Thursday last, but is framed in more cautious language. Although Mr. Harding's letter is written with a view to giving me material for a reply, I think it would be better if I sent you the letter† in full. I accordingly attach a copy herewith.

Yours sincerely,

M. P. A. HANKEY.

MR. L. S. AMERY (DOMINIONS OFFICE) to SIR SIDNEY LOW.

[Answered by No. 155.]

MY DEAR LOW,

Downing Street, 15th December, 1926.

It was good of you to write so fully in answer to my letter of 29th November,‡ and I have been much interested in reading what you say. There are, however, two points in your letter on which I think that I should comment, especially as you are preparing a supplementary chapter to the next edition of your book on the "Governance of England."

First, it seems to me incorrect to say that His Majesty the King acts in Great Britain as "King of Great Britain" and in Australia as "King in Australia." On the contrary, such a conception seems to me to be as wrong in theory as it certainly is in fact.

If you look, for instance, at the preamble to the Commonwealth Constitution Act of 1900 you will see that it refers to the desire of the people of the Australian States "to unite in one indissoluble federal Commonwealth under the Crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland . . .," and the second section of the Act says that its provisions referring to the Queen "shall extend to Her Majesty's heirs and successors in the sovereignty of the United Kingdom."

The preamble and provisions of the British North America Act of 1867 and of the South Africa Act of 1909 are similar. In the case of the Irish Free State, though the form of the Act of 1922 is different, you will remember the wording of Article 2 of the Articles of Agreement which defines the relationship of the Crown to the Irish Free State by reference to the law, practice and constitutional usage in relation to Canada.

It is true that the King is not the same juristic person throughout the whole of his Dominions. The Commonwealth and the States are in the purview of the Australian Constitution distinct and separate bodies, and the King, as Executive Head of the Commonwealth, is thus juristically distinguishable from the King as Executive Head of each of the Australian States. The same distinction exists between the King as Executive Head of the Dominion of Canada and as Executive Head of each of the Canadian Provinces. From the juristic point of view the King has as many distinguishable aspects as he has Governments, whatever may be the degree of autonomy or authority which they may possess. It cannot, however, be contended that there are seven different Kings in Australia, or ten different Kings in Canada, or as many different Kings as there are Colonies. The juristic conception does not therefore in any way affect the principle that there is only one King and one Crown for the whole of the Empire.

Secondly, the Report of the Inter-Imperial Relations Committee does not declare that the King can only accept advice upon matters relating to the affairs of any Dominion from his responsible Ministers in that Dominion. The wording of the Report (see page 17 of Cmd. 2768) is as follows:—"It is recognized that it is the right of the Government of each Dominion to advise the Crown in all matters relating to its own affairs. Consequently, it would not be in accordance with constitutional practice for advice to be tendered to His Majesty by His Majesty's Government in Great Britain in any matter appertaining to the affairs of a Dominion against the views of the Government of that Dominion."

The implications of this passage in the Report as I understand it, are (a) that His Majesty's Ministers in Great Britain are not at liberty to intervene between the Governor-General of a Dominion and his Ministers, and (b) that if His Majesty is approached on Dominion matters through His Ministers in London, any advice which they may tender must not be contrary to the views of the Dominion Government concerned.

It does not seem to me that even in theory, there is any "hiatus" as regards advice to His Majesty such as you suggest.

Yours sincerely,
L. S. AMERY.

SIR SIDNEY LOW to MR. L. S. AMERY (DOMINIONS OFFICE).

45, Campden Hill Court, Kensington, W.8.

17th December, 1926.

MY DEAR AMERY,

I AM obliged to you again for the trouble you have taken to explain the implications of the Inter-Imperial Relations Report.

You know what was in the minds of yourself and your colleagues in drafting this document. I, of course, have no such knowledge; particularly as the opportunities and facilities for contact with the representatives of the Home and Dominion Governments, granted to me during former Imperial Conferences, have not been accorded under the present Administration. I can only form my opinions from the published matter and public statements.

I should not venture to dispute the constitutional orthodoxy of your view as to the status of the King in his several "possessions." I gather that there is no intention to make any innovation either in theory or practice. I had derived a somewhat different impression from the Report; and so apparently have others, if I may judge from observations made in the Canadian Parliament, and elsewhere. It looked as if it were contemplated that the present conception of the Empire-Realm under the Crown should pass to that of an Alliance of separate nation-states or "kingdoms." General Hertzog seems to convey the same impression when he says (at Paarl on 14th December): "All that remained was a free alliance of England and the six Dominions . . . forming their own League of Nations . . . If to-morrow they wanted to go out they would go out." Allied States are free to break off from the alliance when they please; but is the position consistent with common and indissoluble association under a single Sovereign?

The Report does not totidem verbis abolish the Imperial powers of the Parliament of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. But it does (IV c.d.) seek to do away with its control over repugnancy, and substitutes reciprocal statutes "based upon consultation and agreement."

As to the question of advice to the Crown, I construed the passage in the Report to mean that in Dominion affairs the Crown must receive the advice of Dominion Ministers, and ought not to be advised by its Government in London. That seems to be the natural sense of the words, though I note that you say the intention is only to prevent the intervention of the British Cabinet between a Governor-General and his own Ministers; and to secure that the King's Ministers in London shall not give him advice contrary to that of the Dominion Government concerned. Does that quite do away with the "hiatus?" I do not see what would happen if different advice is tendered to the King by two different sets of advisers, though in practice the difficulty might be adjusted, as a rule, by negotiation between the Governments.

On these and other points there seems some obscurity in the Report. It may be cleared up by the Expert Committee which it is proposed to appoint, or by further elucidation in Parliament. On the other hand I can understand that a certain vagueness may be usefully maintained at present, and too rigorous definition avoided by those who speak with authority. This may be politic, even if it adds to the difficulty of unauthoritative outside commentators.

Some of the subjects we are discussing are touched upon in my essay on "The Problem of an Imperial Executive" in the volume I am sending you—if you can spare time to glance at it.

I am, &c.,
SIDNEY LOW.

- 27th October. Mr. J. R. Fisher appointed as Commissioner deemed to be appointed by Government of Northern Ireland. (48691/24.)
- 31st October. Notice in London Gazette notifying establishment of Boundary Commission. (50276/24.)
- 7th November. Boundary Commission inquired whether His Majesty's Government desired to submit any statement as to the work with which the Commission was charged, or to appear before Commission by Counsel, or to submit any evidence. Negative reply returned to all three questions. (52503/24.)
- 18th November. Conference held between representatives of Colonial Office and Home Office: certain preliminary conclusions reached, on which it was decided to consult other competent Departments and to advise Commission informally of administrative and other difficulties which would arise if award of Commission should become effective without sufficient notice being given. (10125/25.)
- 1925.
- 8th June. Letter received from Boundary Commission inquiring whether any power existed for Commission to delay effect of their determination so that Governments might have time to make necessary administrative arrangements and public might be informed. Commission added that they thought they might be able to issue their determination in about four or five months' time, at any rate before end of year. (27250/25.)
- 19th June. Irish Free State asked to delay reply to similar letter addressed to them in order that agreed reply might be sent in same terms on behalf of both Governments. (27250/25.)
- 22nd June. Irish Free State replied giving views as to reply to be sent to Commission on the lines that the Commission's award takes immediate effect but that no difficulty should arise for the Governments in making in advance a scheme for the necessary administrative arrangements—finally suggesting a Conference between the two Governments at an early date. (28547/25.)

- 1st July. Appropriate Government Departments invited to be represented on an Inter-departmental Committee to discuss administrative and other arrangements. Secretary of State consulted Secretary of State for Home Affairs as to inviting Government of Northern Ireland to be represented on Committee. (28547/25.)
- 3rd July. Secretary of State for Home Affairs replied that it would probably only embarrass the Government of Northern Ireland to invite them to Committee at once and that it would be best to inform them of results of Committee's conclusions. (28547/25.)
- 4th July. Reply sent to Irish Free State that matter had better be carefully considered by British Departments first, and suggesting Conference in September. (28547/25.)
- 10th July. First Meeting of Inter-departmental Committee. (Conclusions in 31898/25.)
- 13th July. Irish Free State replied suggesting that Conference between the two Governments should take place immediately and that reply to Commission should not be deferred. (31897/25.)
- 17th July. Second Meeting of Inter-departmental Committee (conclusions in 31898/25) as a result of which an interim report and an agenda for discussion with Irish Free State representatives were prepared (copies in 33640/25). N.B.—These documents could not be finally completed and submitted for approval prior to the meeting with the Irish Free State representatives, so it was arranged that Inter-departmental authority should be obtained for the appropriate sections of the report, and that the agenda should not be communicated to the Irish Free State in advance but used as material for the Chairman's statement at the meeting. (See 33741/25.)
- 20th July. Reply to Irish Free State agreeing to immediate Conference to be held 28th July "limited in its scope to the elucidation of technical difficulties," suggesting further Conference in September after examination of technical questions, and submitting draft reply to Boundary Commission. (31897/25.)
- 23rd July. Irish Free State reply agreeing to Conference on 28th July and concurring in reply to Commission, but doubting whether further meeting in September possible. (33741/25.)
- 28th July. Meeting held with Irish Free State representatives. Arrangements discussed on basis that no interval would occur between publication and effect of award. The various services were considered and it was agreed that memoranda should be exchanged between the competent Departments: the British Departments to prepare memoranda first in the case of "reserved" services, the Irish Free State Departments in the case of "transferred" services. (35031/25.)
- 29th July. Reply sent to Boundary Commission to the effect that Commission had no power to delay effect of their determination; that question of administrative arrangements necessary to give effect to award with least possible inconvenience to public was under consideration and would form subject of discussion between the two Governments not later than October, and that a further communication would be addressed to the Commission thereafter (a copy of this reply sent to Irish Free State who sent a similar reply). (33741/25.) (35792/25.)
- 6th August. Secretary of State while in Dublin discussed question with Mr. Cosgrave and Mr. O'Higgins (Vice-President of the Executive Council), who were strongly of opinion that shortest possible previous announcement of determination should be given. Secretary of State was doubtful, and said His Majesty's Government could not be regarded as committed to this view, since, if large changes were involved it was essential that Government of Northern Ireland should be consulted for some time before award took effect. (37243/25.)
- 16th October. Third meeting of Inter-departmental Committee, at which it was reported that the exchange of memoranda with the competent

Departments of the Irish Free State had taken place and that agreement had been reached in regard to "reserved" services: as regards "transferred" services the Government of Northern Ireland had refused to co-operate in advance and the necessary measures were accordingly considered: the position of staff in transferred areas was also discussed. (46943/25.)

- 22nd October. The Attorney-General was consulted and advised that Article 12 of the Treaty afforded no legal foundation for the view that the Commission had no power to transfer any portion of the Irish Free State to Northern Ireland. (46944/25.)
- 23rd October. Despatch to Irish Free State inviting the Free State Government to take part in Conference on 29th October. (46944/25.)
- 26th October. Memorandum submitted to Cabinet jointly by Secretary of State and Secretary of State for Home Affairs recommending that Commission should be asked to give the Governments a few weeks' notice of the nature of their award before it came into effect (the time could be occupied in endeavouring to persuade the Government of Northern Ireland to co-operate in giving effect to the award); and that at the meeting on 29th October the Irish Free State Government should be asked to join in making this request to the Commission, a renewed assurance being given to them that the British Government had no other thought than to carry out the award to the letter. (48158/25.)
- 28th October. Question was discussed by the Cabinet: conclusions are not on official record, but it is understood that no final decision was reached, and that Secretary of State was authorized to discuss question on provisional basis with Irish Free State representatives but not to enter into a final and binding agreement.
- 29th October. Meeting with Irish Free State representatives at which prior to the full meeting Secretary of State explained to Free State Ministers that Government of Northern Ireland were not at present prepared to discuss the administrative steps which would be required; further that while the general arrangements with regard to "reserved" services should be fully gone into, he was not then able to enter into a final or binding agreement with regard to them. The Free State Ministers explained that their view was that the Commission had no power to award Free State territory to Northern Ireland but that they would be prepared to discuss matters on the basis that it had. The meeting then discussed the arrangements proposed departmentally and approved them, together with certain proposals regarding staff. The Free State representatives also urged strongly that any areas to be transferred from Northern Ireland to the Free State should be occupied by British troops and handed over by them in a peaceable state, to Free State forces (whether civil or military). (49562/25.)
- 30th October. Letter from Mr. Tallents (Imperial Secretary to the Government of Northern Ireland), giving account of a conversation with Sir J. Craig which indicated that the Northern Ireland Government might be prepared to co-operate in carrying out a "reasonable" determination, and might possibly be induced to discuss in advance the necessary administrative arrangements "without prejudice"; also that it was desirable that an interval of two or three weeks should elapse during which the award should be gradually carried out, rather than abruptly. (49569/25.)
- 4th November. Note by Secretary of State for Home Affairs giving substance of conversation with Sir James Craig in which the further question of compensation to residents in transferred areas was raised. (50284/25.)
- 6th November. Letter from Commission stating that it appeared desirable that Commission should confer on 19th November with representatives of the two Governments as to (i) date of delivery of award (ii) procedure with regard to publication (iii) custody of documents. (50283/25.)
- 7th November. Publication in Morning Post of detailed forecast of award (substantially accurate). (50286/25.)

- 7th November. Despatch from Irish Free State proposing to inform Commission that arrangements were ready to carry award into effect; suggesting that it should be delivered on a Saturday afternoon, and expressing the hope that it might be issued before 31st December. (50606/25.)
- 10th November. Irish Press report of deputation from Donegal to Irish Free State Government to protest against any transfer of Irish Free State territory to Northern Ireland. (54434/25.)
- 11th November. The Cabinet decided to agree to a Conference with the Commission on the 19th; to arrange if possible a primary meeting with Irish Free State representatives on the 18th, at which the discussion of arrangements would be resumed, and objections pointed out to the use of British troops, while if a delay of two or three weeks intervened between announcement of terms of award and its promulgation, a peaceful transfer might be secured; that an endeavour should be made to dissuade Sir J. Craig from his demand for compensation; and that an Irish Affairs Committee should be set up. (51236/25.)
- 11th November. Despatch to Irish Free State proposing to reply to Commission agreeing to meeting on 19th November, and suggesting preliminary meeting with Irish Free State representatives on 18th November. (50283/25.)
- 18th November. Despatch from Irish Free State enclosing reply to Commission agreeing to meeting on revised date (24th November) and agreeing to meeting with British Government representatives on 23rd November. (52177/25.)
- 19th November. Debate in Dail on motion approving representations made by Irish Free State Government to Commission to effect that Commission had no power to award Free State territory to Northern Ireland, in course of which Mr. Cosgrave maintained that view strongly, and in addition stated that if the Morning Post forecast was correct, the Commission must have totally disregarded their duty and the principles on which they were supposed to act. (54434/25.)
- 20th November. Reply to Commission agreeing to meeting on 24th November. (52177/25.)
- 21st November. Telegram from Irish Free State reporting resignation of Dr. MacNeill from Boundary Commission and stating that, in their opinion, conferences on 23rd and 24th November could not in the circumstances be held. (52611/25.)
- 21st November. Letter from Commission suggesting that in spite of absence of Irish Free State representatives, representatives of His Majesty's Government should attend meeting on 24th. (52612/25.)
- 21st November. Statement by Mr. Cosgrave at public meeting that Dr. MacNeill had resigned from Commission as the principles on which their proposed award was to be based were such that he could not possibly submit to them. (54434/25.)
- 22nd November. Statement issued by Commission to effect that up to 20th November, Dr. MacNeill had worked in complete harmony with his colleagues, and had agreed to sink differences of opinion and to sign an unanimous report. (54041/25.)
- 23rd November. First meeting of Irish Affairs Committee as a result of which a reply was sent to the Commission that while such a Conference as was originally contemplated could not now be held, the British Government would send representatives to receive any communications which the Commission might wish to address to them. A copy of this letter was sent to the Irish Free State. (54042/25 and 52612/25.)
- 24th November. The Commission informed Secretary of State and Secretary of State for Home Affairs as representatives of His Majesty's Government (i) that they regarded Dr. MacNeill's resignation as void (ii) that their finding had been agreed substantially by 17th October, the delay since then having been due to the preparation of maps, but that their report and maps would be ready by 3rd December. They were willing to communicate the purport of their award to the British representatives at once, but the British representatives declined to

- receive it in the absence of Free State representatives. This was reported to the second meeting of the Irish Affairs Committee (54042/25). At the same time the Commission addressed two letters to the Free State Government stating as at (i) above, reporting the nature of their communication to the British representatives and inviting the Free State Government to send representatives to a meeting on 26th November. (54044/25.)
- 24th November. Debate in Dail in which Dr. MacNeill announced his resignation from post of Minister of Education and gave an explanation of his actions as member of Boundary Commission and in resigning therefrom. (54434/25.)
- 25th November. The Cabinet decided in regard to the Boundary Commission's invitation to a meeting on the 26th November only to accept such invitation if the Irish Free State were to be represented thereat: otherwise to suggest to the Commission that a written communication should be sent to both Governments. (54044/25.)
- 25th November. Telegram received from Irish Free State suggesting conference between Prime Minister and Mr. Cosgrave with a view to arriving at some settlement, proposed meeting with Commission to be postponed. (53186/25.)
- 26th November. Conference between Prime Minister and Mr. Cosgrave at which Prime Minister pointed out to Mr. Cosgrave impossibility of British Government refusing (without consent of Northern Ireland) to carry out award which Irish Free State would have insisted on their carrying out had it not been unexpectedly favourable to Northern Ireland. Mr. Cosgrave agreed, and consented to discuss with Sir J. Craig if a meeting could be arranged. (54046/25.)
- 26th November. Third meeting of Irish Affairs Committee. Question of compensation to Northern Ireland considered without final decision being taken. Sir J. Craig agreed to meet Mr. Cosgrave. (54042/25.) No record of subsequent proceedings is available: but Mr. Cosgrave returned to Dublin on the 26th November.
- 27th November. Telegram from Irish Free State suggesting further Conference with Messrs. O'Higgins and McGilligan (Minister of Commerce and Industry). (53500/25.)
- 28th November. Law Officers' report to effect that resignation of Dr. MacNeill did not invalidate proceedings of Commission or prevent two remaining Commissioners from making a valid award. (53498/25.)
- 28th November. Conversations with Irish Free State representatives took place at Chequers: in the course of which a letter was received from the Commission giving an outline of the award which the Commission proposed to make, and stating that the Commission proposed to complete and deliver their award on the 7th December. (54388/25.)
- 29th November. Conversations continued at Chequers, with the representatives of the Irish Free State and Sir J. Craig, resulting in certain propositions being drawn up (a) that present boundary should be left undisturbed (b) that rights of British Government under Article 5 of the Treaty should be waived (c) that certain concessions should be given to Northern Ireland as regards Lough Foyle and the Council of Ireland (d) that position of certain prisoners convicted in Northern Ireland should be reviewed by British Government. (54388/25.)
- 30th November. Letter from Mr. O'Higgins to Prime Minister suggesting that British and Free State Governments should jointly ask the Commission to postpone publication of award. (54387/25.)
- 30th November. The Cabinet decided that while it was impossible at that time to agree to complete waiver of British claims under Article 5, conversations might continue on the basis of a partial waiver.
- 1st December. Conversations proceeded with the Irish Free State representatives (including Mr. Cosgrave) on the basis that it was essential for the Irish Free State Government to have some compensation to be used as a lever to abate disappointment in the Irish Free State over the failure (as they regarded it) of the Boundary Commission. This would preferably be on the basis of large concessions made in Northern Ireland to the Catholic minority (e.g., restoration of proportionate representation): failing that (and the Irish Free State representatives reported that they had been unable to secure any satisfaction on these lines from Sir J. Craig) it would be necessary for them to ask for a waiver of British rights under Article 5. On these terms they would agree that the existing boundary should be maintained. It was agreed that conversations should be continued on the following day. (See notes of meetings in 54042A/25.)

- 1st December. Letter to Boundary Commission asking the Commission to postpone the issue of their determination pending a further communication; and offering an interview with the Prime Minister. The Commission replied agreeing to postpone their award, and asking for an interview. (54389/25.)
- 2nd December. Announcement made in Parliament to the effect that the Commission had agreed temporarily to postpone publication of their award. (54389/25.)
- 2nd December. Conversations with Irish Free State representatives continued. Offer made by Mr. Cosgrave in regard to Article 5 either (i) to take over and repay to British Government all sums expended by them in compensation for damage to property in the Irish Free State, and in addition to pay an extra 10 per cent. on the total sums awarded under the Irish Free State Damage to Property Act, 1923, or (ii) as an alternative, to pay, subject to allowances in respect of a moratorium, £250,000 a year for sixty years. This was considered by the Cabinet who finally decided by a majority to authorize the Chancellor to endeavour to make some favourable arrangement, but failing such, to accept Mr. Cosgrave's proposal at (i) subject to a satisfactory agreement on all outstanding financial questions.
- 3rd December. Agreement was reached on the main heads and a formal agreement was signed. A complete record of the negotiations from 23rd November—3rd December is in 54042A/25.
- 7th December. Irish Free State Bill for confirmation of agreement introduced into Dail. (55180/25.)
- 8th December. Similar Bill passed through all stages in House of Commons. Irish Free State Bill discussed in Dail Eireann.
- 9th December. United Kingdom Bill passed through all stages in House of Lords. Discussion in Dail continued.
- 10th December. United Kingdom Bill received Royal Assent (15 and 16 Geo. V. chap. 77). Discussion in Dail continued.
- 15th December. Irish Free State Bill passed final stages in Dail: Resolution carried in Dail declaring Bill to be necessary for immediate preservation of the public peace and safety and that accordingly provisions of Article XLVII of the Constitution should not apply. (57595/25.)
- 16th December. Irish Free State Bill and Resolution passed through Irish Free State Senate.
- 16th December. Copies of United Kingdom Bill and Debates sent to Dominions. (Despatch Dominions No. 528 on 55192/25.)
- 16th December. Telegram sent to Union of South Africa regarding Mr. Justice Feetham's services. (56341/25.)
- 17th December. Royal Assent signified by Governor-General to Irish Free State Bill (Act No. 40 of 1925). (57595/25.)
- 18th December. Letter from Mr. Justice Feetham to Prime Minister setting out principles on which award of Boundary Commission was to have been based, published in Times. (58362/25 and 57943/25.)
- 21st December. Despatches to other Dominions reporting assent given to Irish Free State Bill. (56688/25.)

XIII. IRISH FINANCIAL SETTLEMENT—SUMMARY OF CORRESPONDENCE REGARDING ARTICLE V OF THE ARTICLES OF AGREEMENT OF 6TH DECEMBER, 1921.

No. 157.

MR. THOMAS, as Secretary of State, in letter to Mr. Cosgrave enquired whether Irish Free State Government agreed to nomination of chairman of Commission under Article XII (not then appointed) being also appointed arbitrator under Article V. (20527/24.)

Mr. Cosgrave replied that he was unwilling to agree to this in advance, but did not anticipate any difficulty in reaching agreement as to an arbitrator for Article V. He added an assurance that "we consider Article V just as operative as any other Article of the Treaty." (20527/24.)

A memorandum on the liability of the Irish Free State under Article V was submitted by despatch to the Irish Free State "as a basis for discussion." It assessed the Irish Free State proportion of debt, etc. at 1.5 per cent. which amounted, on the total debt plus capitalized value of pensions, to £130½ millions. This with compound interest from December, 1921, and certain other items left for adjustment at the final settlement made a total of roughly £170 millions. (16983/25.)

Despatch from Irish Free State stating that consideration would be given to the memorandum. (19857/25.)

Despatch to Irish Free State expressing desire of His Majesty's Government that preliminary discussion should take place in early autumn, and asking for views on memorandum submitted on 21st April. (30967/25.)

Despatch from Irish Free State stating that consideration was being given to the question, but that while basis for claim of His Majesty's Government under Article V was comparatively simple, possible subjects of counterclaim by Irish Free State under that Article needed a very wide survey. Moreover, that pending settlement under Article XII it would be premature to enter on any discussion. Also that memorandum submitted on 21st April indicated expectations on behalf of His Majesty's Government so remote from ideas entertained by Irish Free State Government that any discussion would be futile in the absence of a considered exposition of the Irish Free State case. The despatch also enquired (i) as to details of value of transferred property, (ii) as to amount of war pensions payable to persons resident in Irish Free State. (48036/25.)

Despatch to Irish Free State presuming that in present circumstances* it is not desired that any action should be taken in the matter. (52354/25.)

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 160.]

(No. 171.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 27th March, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have given very careful consideration to your despatch No. 38 of the 2nd March,* and that they desire me to offer the following observations and suggestions on the form of passport enclosed therein.

* No. 158.

2. It will be evident to your Ministers that a passport is a document addressed primarily to foreign governments and their officials, and that consequently every care must be exercised to ensure that the terms and phraseology employed therein are such as will be readily intelligible and contain as few departures from universally recognized forms as circumstances may permit. As a matter of practical administration it will be found that any novel or unfamiliar turn of phrase, however legitimate from the strict constitutional point of view, tends to be productive of inconvenience, delay and embarrassment to the holder.

3. This aspect of the question has caused the Governments of the other Dominions to base the form of passport, issued under their auspices, as closely as possible upon the form issued from the Passport Office in London. This in turn has been modelled on the "International type" recommended by the International Conference on Passports which was held at Paris in October, 1920, under the auspices of the League of Nations. Comparison of a Canadian with a British passport, for example, will reveal that the differences are reduced to the minimum necessary to make it clear that the passport is issued by the Governor-General of Canada and not by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in London.

4. His Majesty's Government would accordingly suggest, for your Ministers' consideration, that in lieu of the phraseology proposed in the draft enclosed in your despatch under reference the following form of words should be used on the inside front cover:—

"We, Timothy Michael Healy, one of His Majesty's Counsel, Governor-General of the Irish Free State,

Request and require in the Name of His Britannic Majesty all those whom it may concern to allow the bearer to pass freely without let or hindrance, and to afford.....every assistance and protection of which.....may stand in need.

(Arms)

T. M. Healy."

5. In regard to the second page of the enclosure to your despatch, it may be observed that the London Passport Office has discontinued the practice of affixing to the inside cover instructions as to the method of application for a passport, on the ground that such instructions are prima facie of no great interest to persons to whom passports have already been issued. The page, of which loose specimens are enclosed, is now substituted.

6. In this connexion I feel it necessary to point out that the classification in the second paragraph under the heading "Information" is, in its present form, open to serious misinterpretation. By international usage, it will be within the power of your Government to issue passports only to such citizens of the Irish Free State who are in addition British subjects by birth or naturalization; any Free State citizens who are not also British subjects will normally apply for passports to the foreign governments whose subjects in law they are.

7. It will no doubt be of interest to your Ministers to know that in adapting the passport to book form the following measures have been taken to prevent forgery, erasures and insertion of additional pages:—

(a) The document consists of one continuous sheet folded and bound in such a way as to prevent substitution of pages.

(b) The paper is of a standard quality bearing a water mark.

(c) Over-printing of the pages provides an additional security against forgery.

(d) The use of fugitive ink renders it impossible for alteration or erasures to be made without detection.

8. In conclusion I would observe that in the event of your Ministers meeting with practical difficulties in arranging for the printing and binding of passport forms it is possible for this work to be undertaken on repayment by the Stationery Office in London, who would place the work with the contractors who execute it for the London Passport Office. This procedure has already been adopted at the request of the Government of Newfoundland.

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE,

Enclosure in No. 159.

REGULATIONS.

1. BRITISH passports are issued by the competent authorities throughout the British Empire and by British diplomatic and consular officers abroad. The charge for a British passport is 7s. 6d. Application should be made in the authorized form obtainable from those authorities.

2. Passports are issued in the United Kingdom at the Passport Office, Westminster, London, S.W.1, and at the Branch Passport Office, 36, Dale Street, Liverpool. Passports cannot be issued or renewed at the Passport Office for persons not at the time being in the United Kingdom.

3. Residents in the Irish Free State should make their applications through the Passport Department, Ministry of Home Affairs, Dublin, and residents in Northern Ireland through the Passport Department, Ministry of Home Affairs, Belfast. In the British Dominions or Colonies application should be made to the local authorities.

4. British subjects making their homes or staying for more than three months in a foreign country should be registered at the nearest British Consulate.

5. British passports are not valid beyond two years from the date of issue. They may be renewed for four further periods of two years each, after which, or if at any time there be no further space for visas, a fresh passport must be obtained. The fee for each renewal is 2s.

6. The passport is only available for travel to the countries named on page 4, but may be endorsed for additional countries. The possession of a passport so endorsed does not, however, exempt the holder from compliance with any immigration regulations in force in British or foreign countries or from the necessity of obtaining a visa where required.

7. Passports endorsed as valid for the British Empire are also available for travelling to territory under British protection or mandate, not, however, including Palestine, Mesopotamia, or Egypt, for which countries the passport must be specially endorsed.

Caution.

This passport is a valuable document, and should not be allowed to pass into the possession of any unauthorized person. If lost or destroyed, the fact should be immediately reported to the Passport Office, London, or to the nearest British authority, and to the local police authorities. New passports can only be issued in such cases after exhaustive enquiries.

IRISH FREE STATE.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 23rd May, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 161.]

(No. 139.)

MY LORD DUKE,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 22nd May, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Grace's despatch No. 171 of the 27th March,* relative to the proposed issue of passports by my Government, I have the honour to state that my Ministers agree that passports issued by the Irish Government should conform to the "International type" recommended by the International Conference of October, 1920, held under the auspices of the League of Nations.

2. In accordance with Your Grace's suggestions, and in order to avoid any misunderstanding, they agree to adopt the phraseology of the Request proposed in paragraph (4) of Your Grace's despatch, and they also approve of the change suggested in paragraph (5) with regard to the practice of affixing the instructions to the inside cover of the passport.

* No. 159.

3. My Government cannot accept the contention contained in paragraph (4), to the effect that the Irish Free State is precluded from issuing passports to all its citizens. At the same time they fully realize that such Irish citizens as do not also possess "Imperial" British citizenship can only receive as a matter of courtesy the good offices and assistance of British representatives abroad, and that such courtesy cannot be extended to them within the limits of the foreign country of which they were subject prior to becoming citizens of the Irish Free State. In this connexion, however, I would point out the only individuals to whom this would apply would be:—

(a) Persons not formerly British subjects, who have acquired citizenship of the Free State by virtue of Article 3 of the Irish Constitution.

(b) Persons who may in the future be granted local Certificates of naturalization.

In granting passports to applicants belonging to these two categories, my Government would be following the long established practice of Canada, South Africa, and the other Dominions.

4. With regard to the printing and binding of the passport forms, my Ministers are in a position to have the necessary arrangements made through the Stationery Office in Dublin; but they desire to thank Your Grace for the offer of assistance in this matter contained in paragraph (8) of your despatch and for the information contained in paragraph (7) with reference to the measures adopted to prevent forgery, erasures or insertions.

5. As the present temporary arrangement is productive of delay and inconvenience to residents in the Free State, my Government are making preparations for the taking over of this service at an early date, and I shall be grateful if Your Grace will give the necessary directions in order that the requisite forms and documents may be available when required.

I have, &c.,

No. 161.

IRISH FREE STATE.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 162.]

(No. 479.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 10th August, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to refer to Your Excellency's despatch No. 139 of the 22nd May* regarding the proposed issue of passports by the Government of the Irish Free State.

2. Since the receipt of that despatch my advisers have had the advantage of a personal discussion with your Minister of External Affairs on the various points outstanding and, in particular, on the question of the desire of your Ministers to be in a position to issue passports to all persons who are Irish Free State citizens as defined in Article 3 of the Constitution.

3. I understand that it is the desire of your Ministers that passports should be issued by them to persons who are either:—

(a) Citizens of the Irish Free State; or

(b) British subjects, whether by birth or naturalization, ordinarily resident in the Irish Free State.

4. The large majority of Irish Free State citizens are, of course, British subjects, as regards whom no difficulty arises. But a certain number may not be British subjects. It is not the practice of His Majesty's Government or of Dominion Governments to grant passports to persons who are not British subjects, but the exceptional position of the persons, not British subjects, who on the 6th December, 1922, acquired Irish Free State citizenship under Article 3 of the Constitution, is recognized.

* No. 160.

5. In so far as these persons are not nationals of any other State there would appear to be no objection to the grant of passports to them by your Government. But considerable difficulty arises in the case of those who are nationals of another State. The issue of Irish Free State passports to such persons is not unlikely in some cases to arouse criticism on the part of foreign Governments, who are extremely jealous of their right to grant passports to their own nationals. It must be understood that the status of such persons is not, as would appear to be suggested in your despatch, entirely similar to that of a locally naturalized person, who is, within the limits of the Dominion or Colony in which he was locally naturalized, a British subject by naturalization.

6. As far as His Majesty's Government are concerned they are prepared to waive any objection they might feel to the issue of passports by your Government to Irish Free State citizens possessing a foreign nationality on the understanding that this arrangement applies only to the definite class of persons who acquired such citizenship on the 6th December, 1922. It should be clearly understood that the holder of such a passport can only receive as a matter of courtesy the general good offices and assistance of His Majesty's Representatives abroad, and that this courtesy cannot be extended to the holder of the passport when within the limits of the foreign state of which he is citizen or subject. There should be written or stamped on the passport a qualifying clause to the above effect, which would be similar, mutatis mutandis, to that quoted in paragraph 32 (ii) of Chap. XXVI of the Consular Instructions. Further, His Majesty's Government attach particular importance both from the point of view of relations with foreign Governments and of the convenience both of the holder of the passport (which is, after all, the primary consideration) and of His Majesty's Consular Officers, to there being a clear indication on the face of the passport whether the holder is or is not a British subject. If it be desired to place in the space on the passport for recording the nationality of the holder the description "Citizen of the Irish Free State," it is important that where the holder is a British subject the fact should always be stated. In the case of all passports issued by other Dominion Governments the invariable description is simply "British subject, by birth, by naturalization, etc."

7. A further question regarding the issue of passports to British subjects arises owing to the geographical proximity of the Free State to this country. His Majesty's Government presume that your Ministers will not wish them to issue a passport in London to a person who, though ordinarily resident in the Irish Free State, may apply to the Passport Office in London, until reference has been made to the appropriate Free State authorities. It is suggested that on the receipt of such an application reference should be made, as in the case of the other self-governing Dominions, to the High Commissioner, who would be in close touch with the passport authorities both in Dublin and in London, and would be in a position, after reference to your Ministers in proper cases, to state whether passports should be issued or refused. Your Ministers will appreciate that in the issue of passports it is necessary as far as possible to consult the convenience of the general public and to make every effort to arrange that there shall be a minimum of delay in all ordinary cases.

8. Similarly His Majesty's Government presume that your Ministers will only grant passports in Dublin to persons actually resident in the Irish Free State and that any persons ordinarily resident in this country who may apply for passports in Dublin will be told that they should address their application to the Passport Office in London or to the Branch Passport Office in Liverpool.

9. There still remain the cases of persons normally resident in parts of the British Empire other than Great Britain and Ireland who may apply for a passport in the Irish Free State; your Ministers will doubtless agree that as a matter of convenience all such cases should be referred to the Passport Office in London, whence the necessary inquiries from the Dominion or Colonial Government concerned can most advantageously and expeditiously be made.

10. In this despatch I have only dealt with the issue of passports to British subjects and to persons who by virtue of Article 3 of the Constitution acquired Irish Free State citizenship on the 6th December last. The number of persons in the latter class is definite and decreasing. If and when legislation under the latter part of Article 3 is undertaken to provide for the future acquisition and termination of such citizenship further consideration of the question of passports will be necessary. I would, however, suggest that the reference to local naturalization as British subjects in the latter part of the third paragraph of your despatch under reply is hardly appropriate, and I would explain that it has been for some years the policy of His Majesty's Government to discourage local naturalization and to promote Imperial naturalization.

11. Your Ministers will doubtless in due course consider carefully the provisions of Part II of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914. Should your Ministers decide to adopt Part II of that Act it will then be possible for the Government of the Irish Free State by granting Imperial Certificates of British Nationality to remove difficulties in regard to the nationality of citizens of the Irish Free State.

12. I shall be glad to receive the observations of your Ministers upon the considerations set out in the preceding paragraphs and to be informed when your Ministers will be in a position to commence the issue of passports in Dublin, in order that the necessary information may be communicated to the Passport Authorities in this country and to His Majesty's diplomatic and consular officers abroad.

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

No. 162.

IRISH FREE STATE.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 28th November, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 163.]

(No. 339.)

MY LORD DUKE,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 27th November, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to refer to Your Grace's despatch No. 479 of the 10th August,* with reference to passports, and to state that the proposals contained therein meet with the general approval of my Ministers.

2. My Ministers note that His Majesty's Government have no objection to the issue of passports by the Government of Saorstát Éireann to Irish citizens who have not acquired the status of British subjects, and they agree (as suggested in paragraphs 6 and 10 of Your Grace's despatch) that the present arrangement shall apply only to such persons as have acquired Irish citizenship on 6th December, 1922, by virtue of Article 3 of the Constitution. When legislation, as contemplated by that Article is introduced into the Oireachtas, dealing with the future acquisition and termination of Irish citizenship, this matter will naturally come up for further consideration.

3. As suggested in paragraph 6 of Your Grace's despatch, my Ministers propose to have inscribed on the passports of all persons in the above-mentioned category, the following qualifying clause:—

"This passport is granted with the qualification that the holder is a citizen of the Irish Free State by virtue of Article 3 of the Irish Constitution, but has not acquired the status of a British subject, and that beyond the limits of the Irish Free State he can only receive as a matter of courtesy the general good offices and assistance of His Britannic Majesty's Representatives abroad. This courtesy cannot be extended to the holder when within the limits of the foreign state of which he was a subject or citizen prior to his acquiring Irish citizenship unless he has ceased to be a citizen or subject of that State in contemplation of the laws thereof or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect."

4. This qualifying clause will appear on all passports granted to Irish citizens who do not possess the status of British subjects, but these will be so few in number that they may be regarded as exceptional. With regard to passports granted to Irish citizens who do possess that status (i.e. the vast majority of applicants), my Ministers consider that in view of the fact that the "Request" in the passport is addressed solely in the name of His Majesty and not on behalf of the Irish Free

State in response to the desire expressed in Your Grace's despatch No. 171 of the 27th March*), the status of British subjects is clearly indicated in that Request, and needs no further definition in the body of the passport; whereas the majority of the Irish people would wish to have their Irish citizenship clearly stated.

5. The proposed arrangements contained in paragraphs 7, 8, and 9 of the despatch under reply meet with the complete approval of my Ministers.

6. With regard to the question of naturalization, in general, and the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, in particular, my Ministers have not yet had occasion to consider in detail the position as it affects the Irish Free State.

7. It is the intention of my Ministers to begin issuing passports in the immediate future and I shall be grateful if foreign countries and the British officials concerned are informed accordingly.

I have, &c.,

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 166.]

(No. 722.)

SIR, Downing Street, 14th December, 1923.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 339 of the 27th November,† regarding the issue of passports by the Government of the Irish Free State.

2. I have to request that your Ministers may be informed that, after very careful consideration, His Majesty's Government find themselves in full sympathy with the proposals set forth in your despatch under acknowledgment, except as regards the proposal to exclude the definition "British subject" from each passport held by an Irish Free State Citizen possessing that status.

3. His Majesty's Government find it difficult to recede from the view expressed in the sixth paragraph of my despatch No. 479 of the 10th August,‡ that it is necessary from the point of view of relations with foreign governments and of the convenience both to the holder of the passport and to His Majesty's Consular Officers that there should be a clear indication on the face of the passport whether the holder is or is not a British subject. It is indeed most desirable from both points of view that the same phraseology should be followed as authorized in paragraph 6 of Chapter XXVI of the General Consular Instructions: "British subject by birth," etc. It will be necessary for British consular officers abroad to use these descriptions in any case; and it is very desirable that the same descriptions should be used by the officials of the Irish Free State on the passports of their citizens possessing the status of British subjects, in order to avoid confusion. There is, however, no reason in such cases why the description "Citizen of the Irish Free State" should not follow that of the category of British subject to which the holder of the passport belongs.

4. His Majesty's Government concur in the terms of the qualifying clause adopted by your Ministers for insertion in the passports of all citizens who had not acquired the status of British subjects on 6th December, 1922, by virtue of Article 3 of the constitution of the Irish Free State; and I have to point out in this connexion that the retention of the words "British subject" on the passports of all Irish Free State citizens possessing that status is the only means likely to be regarded as satisfactory for foreign governments in explaining to all concerned that the holder of such a passport is a British subject as well as a citizen of the Irish Free State.

5. I trust that, on reconsideration, your Ministers will see their way to concur in this view. Subject to such concurrence, it is suggested that the 1st January, 1924, would be a convenient date for the complete transfer to your Government of the general issue, renewal and endorsement of passports for persons normally resident in the Irish Free State. If this suggestion is in accordance with your Ministers' wishes, steps will be taken to notify His Majesty's representatives abroad and all other authorities concerned of the new procedure contemplated.

MR. J. H. THOMAS (COLONIAL OFFICE) to MR. A. PONSONBY (FOREIGN OFFICE).

[Answered by No. 165.]

(Extract.)

DEAR PONSONBY, Downing Street, 9th February, 1924.
As I mentioned to you last night on the telephone, the Colonial Office has been asked to arrange for Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald, Minister for External Affairs in the Irish Free State, to see you on the subject of passports. It is probable that he will also raise the question of the separate representation of the Irish Free State at Washington. As the Foreign Office and Colonial Office are jointly interested in both these matters, it would probably save Mr. Fitzgerald's time if he were to discuss them with representatives of both offices together. I am not proposing that course, however, because I wish it to be clear to him from the outset that, so far as the Colonial Office is concerned, it is far from our wish to discourage his having direct access to the Foreign Office.

So far as passports are concerned, the point at issue is as follows. The Free State Government are properly anxious that arrangements should be made whereby in future passports can be issued by themselves to persons domiciled in their area. The Foreign Office insist that where such a person is a "British subject by birth" the fact must appear on the passport. They have no objection to the addition of the words "Citizen of the Irish Free State." The Free State desire the omission of the words "British subject by birth."

The Foreign Office is, of course, concerned with the more technical aspects of this question. In discussing these with Mr. Fitzgerald it is, however, essential that you should know the position which the Colonial Office will have to maintain with the Free State Government when dealing with the political issues raised by their demand. The Treaty settlement involved a definite concession on both sides. Subject to the reservation of certain minor rights in respect of naval defence the British Government offered to concede to the people of the Irish Free State all powers of Government to the same extent as in Canada, provided that the people of the Irish Free State were prepared, like the people of Canada, to retain their status as British subjects. The retention of a citizenship common to the whole British Commonwealth was the essence of the Agreement so far as Great Britain was concerned. We cannot therefore ask foreign governments throughout the world to recognize Irish passports from which the real international status of the holder is expressly omitted, without knocking the bottom out of the Treaty. To do so, moreover, would destroy all hopes that Northern Ireland would ever agree to unite with the South. In a matter like this we cannot afford to depart one inch from the spirit and letter of the Treaty.

I have reason to think that the Irish Free State have no objection to an admission of common citizenship on the face of the passports. It is the term "subject" which creates the difficulty. Great importance, I find, is attached to this word in the Home Office as well as in the Foreign Office. Those authorities must argue their own case, but it is possible that Mr. Fitzgerald may suggest that the situation would be eased by the use of some formula which would avoid the use of the word subject—e.g. "British citizen by birth." This would obviously raise a large question in which not only you, but also the Home Office as well as ourselves are interested.

Yours sincerely,
J. H. THOMAS.

MR. A. PONSONBY (FOREIGN OFFICE) to MR. J. H. THOMAS (COLONIAL OFFICE).

DEAR THOMAS,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 16th February, 1924.

ON receipt of your letter of the 9th instant,* I arranged to receive Mr. Fitzgerald here on the morning of the 14th, after consulting the Prime Minister as to the attitude which he would wish me to adopt in regard to the wording of Irish Free State passports, and the question of separate representation of the Irish Free State at Washington.

I enclose for your information a brief summary of my somewhat lengthy conversation with Mr. Fitzgerald. The line which Mr. MacDonald instructed me to take was:—

1. That the words "British subject by birth," etc., must be retained on the passports issued by the Irish Free State Government; and
2. that the question of Irish representation at Washington would not arise until a settlement has been reached in regard to the form of representation which the Canadian Government would have there.

This latter question was only touched on cursorily at the close of our interview.

May I suggest that you may like to communicate a copy of this correspondence to the Home Office, who are equally interested with our two departments in the passport question?

Yours sincerely,
ARTHUR PONSONBY.

Enclosure in No. 165.

EXTRACT FROM A SUMMARY OF A CONVERSATION BETWEEN MR. A. PONSONBY AND MR. D. FITZGERALD.

MR. FITZGERALD called to-day by appointment, and in a long discussion with me reiterated the reasons for which the Irish Free State Government object to the term "British subject by birth," etc., on Irish Free State passports. He declared that it was politically impossible for the Irish Free State Government to accept this designation at the present time. They had had to cope with a very delicate situation, which was now improving, and it was essential that no step should be taken which would revive the great difficulties which they hope they have now overcome. Mr. Fitzgerald explained that, to the average Irish citizen, the term "British" is synonymous with "English," and that now that the impression prevailed in Southern Ireland that the Free State had acquired its freedom, it would be quite impossible for the Government, in issuing passports under these new conditions, to describe the holders as "British subjects"—a term which would be interpreted by the applicants as "subjects of England." He expatiated on the disastrous effect which the issue of passports in this form would have from the point of view of propaganda, especially in the United States of America. He said that, in his view, the issue of the passport in the name of the King was quite sufficient indication of the nationality of the holder, and he urged that it should be left to the choice of the applicant to be described either as a "British subject" or as a "citizen of the Irish Free State." He also, in the course of conversation, suggested the possibility of adopting another form of words, such as "a citizen of the Irish Free State within the British Commonwealth."

I assured Mr. Fitzgerald that I fully sympathized with the difficulties which the Free State Government experienced in the delicate situation which they had passed through, but pointed out that the expression "British subject" was one universally employed on passports for describing persons of British nationality, that Irish Free State citizens who were British subjects should, in this respect, be treated in the same way as all other members of the British Empire in being so described, and that it was impossible in the issue of official documents of this nature to agree to any modification of the accepted practice on account of political and sentimental considerations which, as I hoped and believed, were of a temporary nature. It was also pointed out to Mr. Fitzgerald that any departure from the accepted practice would be a breach of the Articles of Agreement by which the Irish Free State was constituted, and might very possibly give rise to demands for similar departures on the part of the inhabitants of other parts of the British Dominions, which would lead to a most complicated and chaotic situation. No action of the kind proposed could, therefore, be contemplated without full consultation with all the other Governments of the British Empire, and in my opinion it would be most undesirable to raise such a question. Difficulties would also inevitably arise with foreign Governments, whose officials would not be disposed to accept, without further inquiry, descriptions of British subjects on their passports in terms with which they were hitherto entirely unfamiliar.

Mr. Fitzgerald continued to press his arguments, and to set forth his difficulties, and stated that the Irish Free State Government was so embarrassed by the requirement of using the term "British subject" on passports issued by them, that up to the present they had deferred issuing any passports at all. This position could not continue indefinitely, and the matter required urgent settlement.

I replied that a final decision on the question did not, of course, rest with me, but that I was glad to have had an opportunity of explaining the position as indicated above, to Mr. Fitzgerald.

ARTHUR PONSONBY.

SIR,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 4th March, 1924.

WITH reference to the Duke of Devonshire's despatch No. 722 of the 14th December, 1923,* regarding the issue of passports by the Government of the Irish Free State, I have the honour to state that my Ministers have given the matter further careful consideration and in order to meet the difficulties raised by His Majesty's Government, they would be prepared to agree to describe holders of passports, other than those described in paragraph 3 below, as "Citizen of the Irish Free State and of the British Commonwealth of Nations."

2. This description would, in the view of my Ministers, remove all possibility of confusion by His Majesty's consular officers abroad or by foreign governments.

3. In the case of persons who acquired Irish citizenship on 6th December, 1922, by virtue of Article 3 of the Constitution, the words "and of the British Commonwealth of Nations" would be omitted from the description on the passport and the qualifying clause set out in paragraph 3 of my despatch No. 339 of the 27th November, 1923,† would be inscribed in each case.

These Instructions were based on the Resolutions of the International Conference held at Paris in October, 1920, with which the self-governing Dominions expressed their concurrence.

3. In these circumstances, His Majesty's Government, having given full and careful consideration to your Ministers' proposal, regret that they do not see their way to introducing any amendments or modifications into the Instructions in question, and feel bound to adhere to the position set forth in my predecessor's despatch No. 722 of the 14th December last.*

SIR, Downing Street, 13th May, 1924.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's despatch No. 122 of the 7th April† stating that the issue of Irish Free State passports to the general public was begun as from the 3rd April.

2. It has been observed in certain examples of these passports which have been presented by the holders to the appropriate authorities in London for special endorsement, that the holder's nationality is described as "Citizen of the Irish Free State and of the British Commonwealth of Nations." His Majesty's Government regret that your Ministers have not seen their way to adopting the terminology employed in all other parts of the British Empire in respect of the description of national status, and for the reason given in earlier communications on the subject they have found it impossible to authorise the desired endorsement on the passports in question.

3. Arrangements have accordingly been made for the issue to the applicants of new passports on which their national status has been described as "British subject." It has further been judged necessary, in order to avoid possible misunderstanding, to inform British Consular and Passport Control Officers in foreign countries that in the event of any passport being presented to them in which the description "British subject," either by itself or before "citizen of the Irish Free State," does not appear they should decline to recognize the passport and should not affix any endorsement or visa to it.

4. Steps are also being taken to bring the circumstances to the notice of the other Governments within the Empire, including those of the other self-governing Dominions.

I have, &c.,

Foreign Office, 5th May, 1924.

Issue of Passports by the Irish Free State.

SIR, I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald to inform you that the question of the issue of passports by the Irish Free State has been under discussion between His Majesty's Government and the Government of the Irish Free State.

2. His Majesty's Government take the view that it is desirable that passports issued by the Government of the Irish Free State should conform generally to those issued in Great Britain and Northern Ireland and in the other Dominions, and especially that, under the description of the national status of the holder, the words "British subject" should appear as laid down in the General Consular Instructions (Chapter XXVI).

3. His Majesty's Government have agreed to the expression "Citizen of the Irish Free State" being inserted after the words "British subject." The Government of the Irish Free State have, however, issued passports describing the holder as "Citizen of the Irish Free State and of the British Commonwealth of Nations." His Majesty's Government cannot recognize any passport containing this description of the holder.

4. In the event of any passport being presented to you in which the description "British subject," either by itself or before "Citizen of the Irish Free State," does not appear, you should decline to recognize the passport, and should not affix any endorsement or visa to it.

Foreign Office, 17th May, 1924.

Issue of Passports by the Irish Free State.

SIR,

WITH reference to Foreign Office Circular of the 5th May, 1924, relative to the passports issued by the Government of the Irish Free State, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald to remind you that under the terms of the Constitution of the Irish Free State there is a certain category of persons who were domiciled in the Irish Free State at the time, and who thereby acquired the status of a "citizen of the Irish Free State," but are not British subjects.

2. His Majesty's Government have agreed to the issue of passports to such persons by the Government of the Irish Free State. In such cases the holder is described in the passport as "Citizen of the Irish Free State (see p. 5)," and on p. 5 of the passport the following clause is inserted:—

"This passport is granted with a qualification that the holder is a citizen of the Irish Free State by virtue of Article 3 of the Irish Constitution but has not acquired the status of a British subject, and that beyond the limits of the Irish Free State he can only receive as a matter of courtesy the general good offices and assistance of His Majesty's representatives abroad. This courtesy cannot be extended to the holder when within the limits of the foreign State of which he was a subject or citizen prior to his acquiring Irish citizenship unless he has ceased to be a citizen or subject of that State in contemplation of the laws thereof or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect."

3. I am to inform you that such passports may be recognized, and that the holders may be regarded as British-protected persons and accorded the good offices of British consular officers abroad to the extent indicated in the clause quoted in paragraph 2 above. The procedure to be followed in these cases is quite distinct from that prescribed in Foreign Office Circular of the 5th May for cases where the holder of an Irish Free State passport is both a British subject and an Irish Free State citizen.

MINUTE 589.

MINISTERS have the honour to refer to His Excellency the Governor-General's Minutes No. 61/657 and No. 61/658 of the 5th of July, 1924, with reference to the issue of passports by the Irish Free State Government, and to state that the request contained in the 2nd paragraph of the despatch, dated 11th June, 1924,* addressed to His Excellency by the Secretary of State for the Colonies has had the serious consideration of Ministers.

2. Ministers are of opinion that the question as to the description of citizens of the Irish Free State on passports issued by the Government of that Dominion is a matter between His Majesty's British and His Majesty's Irish Free State Governments respectively.

3. Ministers consequently realize that refusal on their part to recognize passports issued by the Irish Free State Government as requested by His Majesty's British Government because of any difference in opinion between the two Governments as to how the citizens of the Irish Free State are to be described will amount to their interference and judgment in a matter which does not immediately concern them. They feel, however, that their recognition of such passports for the present cannot prejudice the question at issue understanding as they do that the description upon which the Irish Free State Government insists clearly implies that citizens of the Irish Free State are also subjects of His Britannic Majesty.

Should any other description later on be agreed upon by the Governments concerned Ministers will be pleased to take the necessary steps to have the same recognized and adopted by the authorities of the Union.

Irish Free State Passports.

SIR,

WITH reference to Foreign Office Circular of the 5th May last, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Ramsay MacDonald to inform you that it has been decided that if a Consular Officer to whom is presented an Irish Free State passport, issued to a British subject, in which the description "British subject" does not appear, is satisfied that the holder is in fact a British subject, he may, if the applicant so wishes, give an ordinary British passport in exchange for the Irish Free State passport. It is very desirable to take all possible steps to ensure that all British subjects are in possession of passports which are in the recognized form, and Consular Officers are therefore authorized in those circumstances to waive the usual fee of 7s. 6d. for the issue of a passport, provided the Irish Free State passport is surrendered.

2. Any passport issued by the Irish Free State authorities and presented to you for endorsement or for any other purpose by the holder should be allowed to remain in his hands unless, as will no doubt generally be the case, he is prepared to exchange it voluntarily for a passport issued to him by you, such issue being gratis when the Irish Free State passport does not contain the description "British subject."

(No. 396.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 27th November, 1926.

WITH reference to the correspondence terminating with Your Excellency's despatch No. 80 of the 4th March, 1924,* and my predecessor's reply No. 217 of the 5th April, 1924,† on the subject of the description of the holder's nationality to be inserted in passports issued by the Government of the Irish Free State, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the opportunity of the Imperial Conference has been taken to discuss the matter further with Mr. Fitzgerald with a view to arriving at a solution of the question which would be satisfactory to both Governments.

2. It was felt that a settlement of the question should be sought that would be in accordance with the general principles underlying the Report of the Inter-Imperial Relations Committee. On this basis Mr. Fitzgerald suggested as a suitable settlement that Irish Free State passports should be issued by the appropriate Minister in the name of the King designated by his new title in full, and that the holder of such a passport should (if technically a British subject) be described therein as "one of His Majesty's subjects of the Irish Free State."

* No. 166. † No. 167.

3. His Majesty's Government in Great Britain have given careful consideration to this suggestion and are ready to concur therein on the understanding (which is believed to accord with the existing practice) that if any applicant for a passport desires to obtain a passport in which he is described as a "British subject" he can obtain such a passport.

4. His Majesty's Government in Great Britain will be prepared, on learning that this proposal and understanding are in accordance with the wishes of your Ministers, to instruct His Majesty's representatives abroad accordingly.

MR. H. F. BATTERBEE (DOMINIONS OFFICE) to MR. D. FITZGERALD

DEAR MR. FITZGERALD, Downing Street, 27th November, 1926.

We are sending by to-day's mail an official despatch* on the subject of the passport question on the lines agreed upon between us.

I understand from my talks with you that it is contemplated that (1) Irish Free State passports will be issued in future by the Minister for External Affairs instead of the Governor-General. This is clearly in accord with the general principles of the Report of the Inter-Imperial Relations Committee, and there would seem no possible objection to it; (2) that they will be issued by him in the name of the King (setting out his new title in full).

The latter change must clearly wait until the necessary legislation is passed and you will probably think it desirable that the former change should wait until both changes can be made together. There seems no reason, however, why the alteration in the description of the recipient of the passport should not be made at once.

As I told you on Wednesday—on hearing that the settlement now proposed is accepted, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs will be happy, pending the change, to instruct Consular and Passport Control Officers to waive the objection to any passports containing the description hitherto used by the Irish Free State authorities that may have been issued before the new arrangement comes into force.

Yours sincerely,

H. F. BATTERBEE.

(GOVERNOR-GENERAL).

(Private and Personal.)

MY DEAR GOVERNOR-GENERAL, Downing Street,
24th December, 1926.

I HAVE been thinking over the question of alteration of the existing practice as regards official correspondence with the Dominion Governments, which was contemplated in sub-section (b) of Section 4 of the Report of Lord Balfour's Committee on Inter-Imperial Relations.

As you will, no doubt, be discussing the matter with Mr. Cosgrave, you may like to know that our interpretation of the sub-section is that it would be most appropriate for any formal proposals for change to come, not from here, but from those Dominion Governments which desire it.

Similarly, it is hardly I think for us to suggest the procedure for keeping the Governor-General informed in the sense contemplated at the end of the sub-section in question, though we should of course wish to be assured that satisfactory arrangements had been made in this respect before any change takes place in the channels of communication.

One or two points have occurred to me in connexion with the matter generally. First, it would probably be convenient if the change could take effect, as regards official communications from here, on the same date for all the Dominions which desire a change. This would in any case involve some delay, since obviously it would be necessary to wait until the Prime Ministers of Australia and New Zealand have returned and have had an opportunity of consulting with their colleagues and of discussing the matter with the respective Governors-General. Apart from this, we should like good notice of a change, since various details will require adjustment. Perhaps a convenient date might be 1st July.

Secondly, it would seem desirable to arrange some uniform plan as regards ceremonial messages from His Majesty the King. These ought, I think, to be addressed to the Governor-General, and might be sent from here to the appropriate Dominion Minister in the form of a message from His Majesty to the Governor-General.

Yours sincerely,

L. S. AMERY.

PRIVATE and Personal. With reference to your telegram of 8th November, Private and Personal.* You will now have had opportunity of reading full Report of Committee of Imperial Conference on Inter-Imperial Relations. I had certainly gathered from conversation with your Prime Minister before his departure that he had not contemplated any change at present in official channels of communication as regards Newfoundland. I should be grateful if you would bear this in mind in any conversation with regard to Report generally which you may be having with your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 12.40 a.m., 30th December, 1926.)

TELEGRAM.

29TH DECEMBER. My Ministers have now considered the conclusions arrived at in the Imperial Conference as to official channel of communication between His Majesty's Government in Great Britain and His Majesty's Dominion Government.

My Ministers consider it advisable to institute procedure of direct communication between Government and Government recommended in the Conference discussion as soon as possible. It is understood that this would imply that cable or postal communication from His Majesty's Government in Great Britain for His Majesty's Government in Canada would normally be directed by the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, and that communications from His Majesty's Government in Canada for His Majesty's Government in Great Britain would be directed by the Secretary of State for External Affairs to the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs or to the High Commissioner for Canada in London, as circumstances indicate. It is also understood that the practice of direct communication between Prime Ministers as occasion requires is to continue. Provisions as to the transfer of cyphers and codes would also require consideration.

Arrangements will be made for supplying me with copies of all documents of importance.

My Ministers would be pleased to learn what would be the earliest date upon which it would be convenient for His Majesty's Government in Great Britain to begin the new procedure.—WILLINGDON.

IRISH FREE STATE.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 26.]

(No. 71.)

Sir,

Downing Street, 12th February, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request that the early consideration of Your Excellency's Ministers may be given to the question of the position occupied by the Irish Free State in regard to the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, and Part II of the Administration of Justice Act, 1920.

2. In this connexion I enclose copies of letters dated the 19th December and the 6th January addressed to the Law Officer of your Government, to which no reply has yet been received. The legal aspects of the question in regard to the Maintenance Orders Act are fully set out in these communications; the position with respect to Part II of the Administration of Justice Act is essentially the same, so that whatever decision your Ministers may take will doubtless apply with equal force to either Act.

3. I would further observe that, pending the receipt of an expression of your Ministers' wishes, action is being suspended by His Majesty's Government in regard to the issue of Orders in Council under the Maintenance Orders Act in respect of South Australia and the Northern Territory of Australia, and under Part II of the Administration of Justice Act in respect of Newfoundland, and also in respect of various Colonies and Protectorates under these enactments. It will therefore relieve the Governments concerned of embarrassment if a very early reply could be returned to this despatch.

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

Enclosure 1 in No. 1.

MY DEAR KENNEDY,

Treasury Chambers, 19th December, 1922.

A QUESTION has arisen upon the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920 (10 & 11, Geo. 5 c. 33), which is one of high importance as touching the reciprocal relations of the Irish Free State and the other members of the Commonwealth of Nations, although, having regard to its subject matter, the Act itself is not likely to operate to any great extent in the Free State.

The object of the Act is to facilitate the enforcement in England and Ireland of Maintenance Orders made in other parts of His Majesty's Dominions, and vice versa. Briefly, it provides that a Maintenance Order made by a court in a dominion outside the United Kingdom to which the Act extends may, by the prescribed procedure, be converted into an Order of a corresponding court in England or Ireland, and that His Majesty may by Order in Council extend the Act to any part of His Majesty's Dominions when he is satisfied that reciprocal provisions have been made by the Legislature of that part. A Maintenance Order means an order for the periodical payment of sums of money towards the maintenance of a person's wife or other dependents, and includes in Ireland an order for recovery of the cost of relief under the Irish Poor Law Acts.

The Act was passed as the result of arrangements with the Dominions, and, relying upon it, several of the Dominions passed Acts enacting reciprocal provisions, and thereupon the Act was extended to them by Order in Council, e.g., Queensland, Western Australia, Tasmania, New Zealand and a number of Protectorates.

This was done before the establishment of the Irish Free State, but recently a reciprocal Act, which was passed by the Legislature of the State of South Australia on the 12th of October last, has come to the Colonial Office with a view to the extension of the Imperial Act to that State. In the ordinary course this would have been done by a short Order in Council which, after reciting the material provisions of the Act and that a reciprocal Act by the Legislature of the State of South Australia had been passed, would have extended the Imperial Act to that State. In this form the Order would not, on the face of it, appear to apply to the Free State, but it would have the effect of giving powers to, and imposing duties upon, Free State courts and officers for the enforcement of Maintenance Orders of the South Australia courts and for making orders in the Free State courts which would be enforceable in South Australia under the South Australia Act.

The question is whether, now that the Free State has been established, such Orders in Council can continue to be made as before; and the Secretary of State would desire to know whether the Free State Government would see any objection to the Orders being made as above, and if you could ascertain this and let me know that the Government assent, an official communication would follow. If, on the other hand, the Free State Government consider that an Order in Council cannot be made so far as respects the Free State, then some alternative procedure must be devised, because there is now an obligation to extend the Imperial Act to the State of South Australia, that State having taken the necessary step to secure the reciprocity guaranteed by the Imperial Act.

Before the Free State was established the British Government would have honoured the obligation on the part of England and Ireland; and if, owing to the establishment of the Free State, the British Government's power and responsibility to do so is confined to England and so much of Ireland as is not within the Free State jurisdiction, then the obligation as regards the Free State has passed to the Free State Government which, to this extent, would stand in the place in which the United Kingdom Government formerly stood. If this position is accepted, there is then the question as to the best procedure to be adopted. The Order in Council here would discharge the British obligation as regards England and Northern Ireland, and I would suggest that the obligation on the part of the Free State Government might be discharged by a corresponding Order of that Government as regards the Free State.

Under the powers of adaptation given by Clause 12 of the Free State (Adaptation of British Enactments) Bill your Executive Council is given general powers to adapt existing British enactments, and presumably you will want to adopt provisions in such Acts authorizing things to be done by Order in Council; and I would submit to your better judgment the desirability of some adaptation on the following lines which would cover the Maintenance Order Act and others:—

"Anything which under any existing enactment could, prior to the [thirty-first day of March, 1922,] have been done in the case of Ireland by an Order of the King in Council or of the Lord Lieutenant in Council may, in the case of the Irish Free State, be done as respects the Irish Free State by an Order made by the Governor-General by and with the advice of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State, and any Order so made may be referred to as an Order of the Governor-General in Council, and accordingly, in the application of any such enactment to the Irish Free State, references to Orders of the Governor-General in Council shall be substituted for references, in whatever terms expressed, to Orders of His Majesty in Council or of the Lord Lieutenant in Council."

As a result of such adaptation, the Executive Council could make the necessary Order in Council under the Maintenance Orders Act. You will notice that the question as to the application of the Maintenance Orders Act could not be settled by the Free State adopting that Act under Section 3 of the Free State Constitution Act, because the effect of such adoption is to put the Free State in the position of a self-governing Dominion under the adopted Act; whereas what is wanted in the case of the Maintenance Orders Act is that the Free State (unless she agrees to an Order in Council being made here as regards both England and Ireland) should herself assume the same position under the Act in relation to South Australia as England assumes.

I should be grateful if you could let me have your views on the above as soon as possible, as the extension of the benefit of the Act to South Australia is urgent.

Yours, &c.,
F. GREER.

Enclosure 2 in No. 1.

MY DEAR KENNEDY,

Treasury Chambers, 6th January, 1923.

SINCE I wrote to you on the 19th ultimo with reference to the question of applying the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, to Southern Australia, an Ordinance of the Northern Territory of Australia passed in September last, has come to the Colonial Office, with a view to the extension of the Act to that Territory, and in considering the question will you please take this extension into account also.

I see that Section 10 of the Free State (Adaptation of Enactments) Act, 1922, contains a provision similar to that suggested in my letter, which would enable the Governor-General of the Free State, upon the advice of the Executive Council, to make an Order in Council applying the Act in question so far as the Free State is concerned, to Southern Australia and the Northern Territory, and the net point is, therefore, whether such an Order would be made followed by an Order by the Secretary of State as regards Great Britain and Northern Ireland, or whether one Order is to be made by the Secretary of State for the whole of Great Britain and Ireland.

As the extension of the Act to the Dominions is rather urgent, I should be grateful if you could let me have a reply at your early convenience.

Yours, &c.,
F. GREER.

REFERENCE my wire of this morning† and yours of yesterday re Colonial Office despatch 71 of 12th February.* Mr. Kennedy now states that on reconsideration he is of opinion that an adopting Act by Free State Parliament will be necessary under S.3 of Irish Free State Constitution Act, 1922, and he would be glad if a copy of the South Australia Reciprocal Act and of the Northern Territory Ordinance could be sent to him for reference. If possible he would like to have them sent by to-night's courier.

No. 4.

SIR FRANCIS GREER (OFFICE OF PARLIAMENTARY COUNSEL) to MR. H. KENNEDY (ATTORNEY-GENERAL, IRISH FREE STATE).

MY DEAR KENNEDY, Treasury Chambers, 16th March, 1923.

THE Colonial Office have sent me over a wire of yesterday† saying that on reconsideration you think that legislation by the Free State Parliament adopting the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, would be necessary as a preliminary to action in the Free State extending reciprocity to Southern Australia, etc., on the basis of their Reciprocal Act.

We considered that such legislation would be unnecessary for the purpose (see my letter of the 18th December) and, as you may perhaps have been influenced by something that I said with regard to the Colonial Solicitors Act in my letter of the 10th instant, I would like to make the matter clear.

Briefly, our view was that in the case of a United Kingdom Act providing for reciprocity as between the United Kingdom on the one hand and any Dominions on the other hand to which it may be applied by Order in Council, the future position is that as regards Great Britain and Northern Ireland an Order in Council can be made here applying the Act to a particular Dominion and thus establishing reciprocity between Great Britain and Northern Ireland on the one hand and the Dominion on the other hand; and that as regards the Free State in the same way an Order in the Executive Council can be made by virtue of section 10 of your Adaptation of Enactments Act applying the Act to a particular Dominion and thus establishing reciprocity as between the Dominion and the Free State. That would be the general rule, but there might be exceptional circumstances in the case of a particular Act like the Colonial Solicitors Act, 1920. Following the general rule the Free State could, by Order in the Executive Council, apply that Act to any particular possession which, by its legislation, had made provision for the admission of Free State solicitors to the profession in the possession, and thus establish reciprocity between that Dominion and the Free State. In the case of the Colonial Solicitors Act, however, the Free State would probably consider that reciprocity with Great Britain and Northern Ireland was more to its advantage than reciprocity with Dominions, and in that event it would as a preliminary place itself quoad Great Britain and Northern Ireland in the position of a Dominion by providing under S.3 of the Constitution Act that the Colonial Solicitors Act, 1920, might be applied to the Free State in the same manner as it may be applied to a self-governing Dominion. The same consideration would probably affect Part 2 of the Administration of Justice Act, 1920, which provides for reciprocal enforcement of judgments as between the United Kingdom on the one hand and the Dominions on the other hand. Really the question is whether a particular Act is to operate between the Free State and the Dominions or between the Free State and Great Britain. In the former case an order in the Executive Council would be all that would be necessary; in the latter case legislative adoption by the Free State Parliament would be required. Primarily that is the question for the Free State to decide.

* No. 1.

The Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act would come under the general rule if the course originally suggested in my letter of the 18th December last is to be followed, viz., that the Free State should give recognition to the Dominion Reciprocal Act by means of an Order in the Executive Council establishing reciprocity in the Free State. If, on the other hand, the Free State Parliament were to provide that the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act might be applied to the Free State as it may be applied to a Dominion, although this would lay the foundation for reciprocity as between the Free State and Great Britain under the Act, it would prevent reciprocity being established under the Act between the Free State and other Dominions; reciprocity with them could then only be established by substantive reciprocal legislation on the part of the Free State.

The General Order in Council under the Consequential Provisions Act has to be made on the 27th instant, and as the scheduling or non-scheduling of the Maintenance Orders Act will depend upon what you decide, will you let us know as soon as possible what the decision is.

Yours sincerely,

F. M. GREER.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 26.]

(No. 142.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 16th March, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to refer to my despatch No. 71 of the 12th February* and to the semi-official correspondence† which has subsequently passed between my Advisers and the Attorney-General of the Free State Government regarding the position of the Irish Free State under the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, and Part II of the Administration of Justice Act, 1920.

2. I am causing to be addressed to Your Excellency under separate cover a complete set of the existing Dominion and Colonial Acts and Ordinances in connexion with each of the two Imperial Acts; together with copies of all Orders in Council which have hitherto been made extending the provisions of the Imperial Acts to those Dominions and Colonies which have passed reciprocal legislation.

3. From these documents two conclusions will be apparent to your Ministers:

(a) That on the date of the establishment of the Irish Free State reciprocal arrangements had been made, in respect of each Imperial Act, as between Ireland and a very large number of Dominions and Colonies; and

* No. 1.

† See enclosures in No. 1, and 2, 3 and 4.

(b) that since the 6th December, 1922, action has been suspended by His Majesty's Government in extending by Order in Council the provisions of the Acts to the following Dominions and Colonies:—

Maintenance Order Act.

South Australia,
Northern Territory of Australia,
Barbados,
British Guiana,
Sierra Leone,
Kenya.

Administration of Justice Act—Part II.

Newfoundland,
New Zealand,
Fiji,
Federated Malay States,
Johore,
Southern Rhodesia,
Falkland Islands,
Colony of Gambia.

4.—This postponement of action occasioned by the necessity for ascertaining your Ministers' wishes in regard to the position of the Irish Free State has, as may readily be imagined, caused considerable inconvenience to the Oversea Governments enumerated above, and no small hardship to those individuals who are desirous of obtaining redress under the Acts. It is, therefore, not without strong reason that His Majesty's Government feel constrained to press for a very early intimation of your Ministers' views and intentions in the matter, in order that they may proceed without further delay to the consequential action to which they are committed by the passing of reciprocal legislation by the Oversea Governments; and, further, in order that they may advise those Dominion and Colonial Governments, in respect of whose reciprocal legislation Orders in Council were made previously to the 6th December, 1922, whether any change is necessitated in the application of the Acts to the Irish Free State.

I have, &c.,

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 14th May, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's despatch No. 217 of the 23rd of May, 1922,* and to the Official Secretary's note of the 25th of October, 1922,† I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, one sealed and six plain copies of an Order of His Majesty in Council† dated the 16th of April, applying the provisions of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, to the Northern Territory of Australia.

2. This Order in Council has been issued consequent upon the passing of Ordinance No. 11 of 1922 of the Northern Territory of Australia, but I shall be glad if you would invite the attention of your Ministers to the fact that the Ordinance refers throughout to the United Kingdom, whereas the Imperial Act applies to England and Ireland only. It will also be observed that Section 2 of the Order excludes the Irish Free State from the operation of the Imperial Act.

3. Since Scotland lies outside the scheme of the Imperial Act, it follows that it will not be possible for any provisional order made under Section 5 of the Northern Territory Ordinance against a person resident in Scotland to be enforced in that country. The position with regard to the Irish Free State is now under the consideration of the Free State Government.

* Not printed: it stated that Ordinances would be passed making the necessary reciprocal provision in respect of the Northern Territory, Papua and Norfolk Island. † Not reprinted.

4. I enclose copies of Provisional Rules† made by the Lord Chancellor under Section 7 of the Imperial Act, together with copies of a circular letter† issued by the Home Office to all Clerks to Justices in England.

5. I should be glad if you would invite the attention of your Ministers to paragraph 3 of the circular letter on the subject of Provisional Orders made in this country against defendants who are resident overseas. It would be convenient if His Majesty's Government could be informed as soon as possible as to the requirements of the Courts in the Northern Territory in connexion with such orders sent to them for confirmation, more particularly with regard to the documentary evidence which should accompany them.

6. It will also be observed, from paragraph 6 of the circular Home Office letter, that it is hoped that monies paid by a defendant overseas in pursuance of an Order will generally be forwarded to the Clerk of the Court by which the order was made, for payment to the complainant. In this connexion I have to draw attention to Rule 6 of the Provisional Rules as to payment in the converse case.

7. The Provisional Rules made by the Lord Chancellor relate only to Courts of Summary Jurisdiction, but a "Direction,"† copies of which are enclosed, has also been issued by the President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court, under Section 1 of the Act, regarding the registration in that Division of Maintenance Orders made by a Court of Superior Jurisdiction.

8. I shall be glad to learn whether Ordinances on the subject have yet been passed in respect of Papua and Norfolk Island.

I have, &c.,

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 2nd July, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 11.]

(No. 306.)

MY LORD DUKE, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 15th June, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 265 of the 25th May,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Grace copies of Minutes from my Ministers regarding the application of the Maintenance Orders Act, 1923, of the Union Parliament to the United Kingdom and parts of the Empire to which the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, of the Imperial Parliament have been applied.

2. I have received separate Minutes from my Ministers regarding the application of the Union Act to Southern and Northern Rhodesia, the Bechuanaland Protectorate, Basutoland and Swaziland and am giving them my attention as High Commissioner.

3. Although separate Proclamations have been drafted, I understand that it is the present intention of the Union Government to issue only one Proclamation which would cover all the countries to which the Imperial Act has already been applied, and that the date of the application of the Union Act to all those countries should, if possible, be identical.

4. Since these Minutes were drafted Ministers have received a copy of your despatch No. 119 of the 14th May† notifying the application of the provisions of the Imperial Act to South Australia and the Northern Territory of Australia, and it is their wish that those two countries should be considered to be included in the schedule to the second Minute. Similarly, they would be willing to include in the main Union Proclamation any other country to which the Imperial Act may be applied in the interval before the issue of the Union Proclamation, subject to the production of evidence of reciprocity as indicated in Minute No. 426.

5. This main Proclamation would, of course, be supplemented from time to time in respect of such additional countries as adopted reciprocal measures within the meaning of the Union Act.

6. My Ministers desire to learn in what terms the Union Act should be made applicable to the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland.

7. Additional copies of the Union Act can be supplied if required.

I have, &c.,

ARTHUR FREDERICK,

Governor-General.

Enclosure 1 in No. 8.

Prime Minister's Office, 13th June, 1923.

MINUTE NO. 424.

MINISTERS have the honour to advise His Royal Highness the Governor-General in connexion with his Minute No. 53/441 of the 1st of December, 1922, and previous communications on the subject of the application throughout British Possessions of the (Imperial) Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, that the Maintenance Orders Act, 1923 (No. 15) of the Union Parliament makes due provision for the enforcement in the Union of a maintenance order made in any part of the United Kingdom, upon the issue of a Proclamation by His Royal Highness declaring that there is in force in the United Kingdom a law providing for the enforcement therein of maintenance orders made by courts of the Union.

Ministers have taken due notice of the terms of the Imperial Act above mentioned, under which provision is made for the enforcement in the United Kingdom of maintenance orders made by the Union courts.

* 29224: not printed; it forwarded copies of the Union of South Africa Maintenance Orders Act No. 15 of 1923.

† 20025: not printed; it forwarded copies of Orders in Council of 16th April, 1923, relating to South Australia and the Northern Territory of Australia.

Ministers are prepared to recommend that His Royal Highness be pleased to issue a Proclamation, of which a draft is attached hereto, which will have the effect of applying the Maintenance Orders Act, 1923, to the United Kingdom, upon receipt of an intimation from His Majesty's Government that the complementary Order in Council applying the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, to the Union of South Africa will be issued in due course.

Ministers will be obliged if His Royal Highness will be good enough to ascertain from the Imperial Government the date from which the Order in Council will have effect in order that His Royal Highness's Proclamation may be given effect from the same date.

Ministers transmit for information four copies of the Maintenance Orders Act, 1923.

J. C. SMUTS.

PROCLAMATION.

BY MAJOR-GENERAL HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS PRINCE ARTHUR FREDERICK PATRICK ALBERT OF CONNAUGHT, KNIGHT OF THE MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER, A MEMBER OF HIS MAJESTY'S MOST HONOURABLE PRIVY COUNCIL, KNIGHT OF THE MOST ANCIENT AND MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE THISTLE, KNIGHT GRAND CROSS OF THE MOST DISTINGUISHED ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE, KNIGHT GRAND CROSS OF THE ROYAL VICTORIAN ORDER, COMPANION OF THE MOST HONOURABLE ORDER OF THE BATH, PERSONAL AIDE-DE-CAMP TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING, HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR SOUTH AFRICA, AND GOVERNOR-GENERAL AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN AND OVER THE UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

WHEREAS by the Maintenance Orders Act, 1923, provision has been made to facilitate the enforcement in the Union of South Africa of maintenance orders made by courts in any other part of His Majesty's Dominions or in British Protectorates or in British Mandatory Territories and vice versa;

And whereas by Section 1 of the said Act it is provided that the said Act shall apply from a date to be specified by me in respect of:—

- (a) any part of the United Kingdom;
- (b) any part of His Majesty's dominions outside the United Kingdom and the Union;
- (c) any Territory under the protection of His Majesty;
- (d) any Territory in respect of which a mandate is being exercised by the Government of any part of His Majesty's dominions;

whenever I have declared by Proclamation in the Gazette that in such part of the United Kingdom or in such part of His Majesty's dominions or in such Territory (as the case may be) there is in force a law providing for the enforcement therein of maintenance orders made by courts of the Union;

Now, therefore, under and by virtue of the powers vested in me by the said Act, I do hereby declare, proclaim and make known that in the United Kingdom there is in force a law to wit the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, providing for the enforcement therein of maintenance orders made by courts of the Union and that the said Maintenance Orders Act, 1923, shall apply in respect of the United Kingdom as from the day of 1923.

GOD SAVE THE KING.

Given under my Hand and the Great Seal of the Union of South Africa, at this day of One thousand Nine hundred and Twenty-three.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

By Command of His Royal Highness the Governor-General in Council.

Enclosure 2 in No. 8.

Prime Minister's Office, 13th June, 1923.

MINUTE No. 426.

MINISTERS have the honour to refer to the Minutes from His Royal Highness the Governor-General enumerated in the schedule accompanying this Minute on the subject of the application of the Imperial Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, throughout the British Empire.

Ministers have in separate Minutes approached His Royal Highness in regard to the extension to the United Kingdom, to Basutoland, and to the Protectorates of Southern Rhodesia, Northern Rhodesia, Swaziland and the Bechuanaland Protectorate, of the provisions of the Union Maintenance Orders Act No. 15 of 1923, which contains legislation complementary to the Imperial Act.

Ministers propose at an early date to take action towards the inclusion of South West Africa among the Territories to which this legislation should be applied.

Ministers have noted that His Majesty's Government has extended the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, to the Territories set out in the schedule hereto by the Orders in Council mentioned therein, and they have in contemplation the extension of the Union Act thereto. For this purpose it is necessary that they should be placed in a position to decide whether the legislation on the subject in these Territories is such as will enable them to address to His Royal Highness a request to issue the Proclamations required by Section 1 of the Union Act.

Ministers therefore have the honour to ask that His Royal Highness be so good as to cause steps to be taken to procure for their information copies of the relevant legislation of these Territories.

Ministers at the same time forward herewith for the information of the Governments of the Territories concerned sixty copies of the Union Act.

Ministers beg further to request that when Orders in Council extending the Imperial Act to other British Possessions are transmitted to them they may be accompanied by copies of the relevant legislation of such British Possessions.

MY LORD DUKE,

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch No. 37 of the 14th October last,* forwarding copies of Provisional Rules made by the Lord Chancellor under Section 7 of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, I have the honour to transmit herewith copy of a despatch which I have received from the Honourable the Premier relating to the above subject.

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 9.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

13th June, 1923.

WITH reference to the Secretary of State's despatch No. 37 dated the 14th October, 1922, regarding the enforcement of original orders made in England under the provisions of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, I have the honour to inform you that Part IV of "The Maintenance Act, 1921" (Tasmania), contains provisions which are practically identical with those of the English Act.

The requirements of the Tasmanian Courts, in the case under review, will be substantially the same as those of English Courts, and no documentary evidence beyond the certified copy of the order, the depositions, and a statement of the grounds upon which the order might be opposed, will be required by the Tasmanian Courts.

* No. 39837: not printed; it asked for information as to the requirements of Courts in Tasmania.

It is proposed to make regulations similar to the Provisional Rules made under the Imperial Act, by the Lord Chancellor, and the Directions of the President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court.

Copies of the regulations framed will be forwarded in due course for transmission to the Secretary of State.

I have, &c.,

WITH reference to Your Grace's despatch No. 28 of the 10th March last,* relative to Rules made under the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, I have the honour to state that I am informed by the Premier that the Crown Solicitor advises that the documentary evidence which should accompany Provisional Orders made by the Courts of reciprocating States should comprise:—

2. Original deposition of each witness (one of whom should give as accurate a description as possible of the defendant) signed by the witness and by the judicial officer or officers before whom the deposition is taken.
3. All exhibits, including if possible a photograph of the defendant, certified to by an officer of the Court in which they are tendered.
4. A statement of the grounds upon which the making of the order might have been opposed if the person against whom the order was made had been a party to the proceedings signed by the judicial officer or officers who made the Order.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 242.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 26th September, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Royal Highness's despatch No. 306 of the 15th June,† regarding the application of the Union of South Africa Maintenance Orders Act, 1923, to the United Kingdom and parts of the British Empire to which the Imperial Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, has been applied, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Imperial Act does not apply to Scotland, and that it will consequently be impossible to provide by Order in Council here and by Union Proclamation for the establishment of reciprocity between the Union of South Africa and the United Kingdom as a whole. Since Scotland lies outside the scheme of the Imperial Act there is no law in force in Scotland providing for the enforcement there of maintenance orders made by Courts of the Union.

* 30308: not printed; it asked for information as to the requirements of Courts in Queensland.

2. The position of the Irish Free State in relation to the Imperial Act is at present receiving the consideration of the Free State Government, and a further communication on this subject will be made to you in due course.

3. In view of the passing of the Union Maintenance Orders Act, 1923, an Order in Council will be issued as early as possible applying the Imperial Act, as regards England and Northern Ireland, to the Union of South Africa. I will inform you by telegraph of the date from which it is proposed that the Order in Council shall take effect, in order that the Union Proclamation regarding the application of the Union Act to England and Northern Ireland may, in accordance with the desire expressed by your Ministers, be given effect from the same date.

4. As regards the wish of your Ministers to apply the Union Act by means of a single Proclamation to all those parts of the British Empire to which the Imperial Act has been extended by Order in Council, I would explain that the Imperial Act provides for reciprocity only as between England and Ireland on the one hand and other parts of the Empire on the other hand, and that similar reciprocity as between other parts of the Empire, inter se, can accordingly only be arranged by mutual agreement between the territories concerned. It would be most convenient, therefore, that your Ministers should communicate direct with the Governments of any Territories with which it is desired that reciprocity should be established. In accordance with the request made in paragraph 5 of Ministers' Minute No. 426 of the 13th June, I enclose copies of the relevant legislation* in force in all Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates, etc., to which the Imperial Act has been extended by Order in Council. A complete set of the Rules made under the legislation of the various Territories is not in my possession, but in cases where it is desired to establish reciprocity such Rules could no doubt be obtained from the Territory concerned.

6. The Secretary of State for India has suggested that the Union Government should make arrangements for reciprocity direct with the Government of India. A copy of the Indian Maintenance Orders Enforcement Act, 1921,* is enclosed, together with copies of Rules made thereunder.

7. I am informed by the Secretary of State for Home Affairs that arrangements are being made for the extension of the provisions of the Isle of Man Legislation to the Union of South Africa, and a further communication on this subject will be sent to you as early as possible.

8. The request of your Ministers that copies of Orders in Council extending the Imperial Act to other British Possessions shall, when transmitted to you, be accompanied by copies of the relevant legislation, has been noted, and action will in future be taken accordingly.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 5th November, 1923.

With reference to my despatch No. 196 of the 14th of May,† I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the information of your Ministers, one sealed and six plain copies of an Order of His Majesty in Council, dated the 11th of October, 1923, applying the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, to Norfolk Island, and certain Colonies.

2. This Order has been issued consequent upon the passing of Ordinance No. 5 of 1923, of the Territory of Norfolk Island, which was published in the Commonwealth of Australia Gazette No. 52 of the 26th of July. It will be observed that Section 2 of the Order excludes the Irish Free State from the operation of the Act; the position with regard to that country is now receiving the consideration of the Free State Government.

3. I enclose copies of Provisional Rules‡ made by the Lord Chancellor under Section 7 of the Imperial Act, together with copies of a circular letter‡ issued by the Home Office to all Clerks to Justices in England.

4. I should be glad if you would invite the attention of your Ministers to paragraph 3 of the circular letter on the subject of provisional Orders made in this country against defendants who are resident overseas. It would be convenient if His Majesty's Government could be informed as soon as possible as to the requirements of the Courts in Norfolk Island in connexion with such orders sent to them for confirmation, more particularly with regard to the documentary evidence which should accompany them.

5. It will also be observed, from paragraph 6 of the Home Office circular letter, that it is hoped that monies paid by a defendant overseas in pursuance of an Order will generally be forwarded to the Clerk of the Court by which the Order was made, for payment to the complainant. In this connexion, I have to draw attention to Rule 6 of the Provisional Rules as to payment in the converse case.

6. The Provisional Rules made by the Lord Chancellor relate only to Courts of Summary Jurisdiction, but a "Direction,"‡ copies of which are enclosed, has also been issued by the President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court, under Section 1 of the Act, regarding the registration in that Division of Maintenance Orders made by a Court of Superior Jurisdiction.

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Wellington, 9th October, 1923.

WITH reference to Mr. Churchill's despatch No. 210 of the 14th October, 1922, and to your despatch No. 51 of the 10th March,* asking to be informed of the requirements of Courts in New Zealand in connexion with Provisional Orders made in England and Ireland against defendants who are resident overseas, I have the honour to inform Your Grace that my Ministers advise me that Regulations under the New Zealand Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1921, have now been made and gazetted, and came into force on 1st October. A pamphlet of instructions to Magistrates, embodying these Regulations, has been drawn up, and three copies of such pamphlets are enclosed.†

2. Ministers state that it will be observed that no further provision is made for any documentary evidence in connexion with the confirmation of Provisional Orders than that prescribed by Section 5 of the New Zealand Act, and as long as the documents mentioned in paragraph 3 of Sir John Anderson's printed memorandum of 9th August, 1922 (which include those prescribed by Section 5), are transmitted, as has hitherto been the case, the requirements of the New Zealand Courts in this connexion will be met.

3. Moneys payable under an Order made in England and registered or confirmed in this country, will be sent through the High Commissioner in London to the Clerk of the Court by which the Order was made, for payment to the Complainant.

I have, &c.,

JELICOE,

Governor-General.

MY LORD DUKE,

2nd November, 1923.

WITH reference to your despatch dated 14th May, 1923, No. 196,‡ regarding Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Ordinances in Commonwealth Territories, I have the honour to inform Your Grace that I am advised by my Acting Prime Minister that steps are being taken to amend the Northern Territory Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Ordinance, 1922, so as to make it applicable only to those parts of the United Kingdom to which the Imperial Act applies.

In addition, regulations are being prepared to facilitate the carrying out in the Northern Territory of the reciprocal arrangements for the enforcement of maintenance orders provided for in the Ordinance. Copies of the amending Ordinance and Regulations will be forwarded as soon as available.

In compliance with the request contained in the fifth paragraph of the despatch under reference, I forward herewith, for the information of Your Grace, six copies of a statement showing the evidence required for confirmation by Northern Territory Courts of provisional maintenance orders made in England or Ireland or in a reciprocating State.

With regard to the question asked in the final paragraph of your despatch, I desire to state that an Ordinance on the subject, for the Territory of Norfolk Island, No. 5 of 1923, has been passed, and that six copies thereof were forwarded to the Colonial Office under cover of a Library despatch dated 17th August, 1923.

An Ordinance in respect of Papua has not yet been passed, but the Papuan Administration has been asked to take the necessary action as soon as possible.

(No. 80.)

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Sydney, 1st November, 1923.

IN continuation of my despatch No. 77 of the 18th October,* regarding the passage by the Legislature of the State of a measure for the reciprocal enforcement of maintenance orders, I have the honour to state that Ministers desire to draw Your Grace's attention to Section 12 of the Act referred to, which provides that—where the Governor is satisfied that reciprocal provisions have been made by the legislature of any part of His Majesty's Dominions outside the United Kingdom for the enforcement within that part of maintenance orders made by courts within New South Wales, the Governor may, by proclamation published in the Government Gazette, declare such part to be a reciprocating State for the purposes of this Act, and thereupon such part shall become a reciprocating State within the meaning of this Act.

2. As the several despatches hitherto received on this subject have only indicated the adoption by certain portions of the Dominions of reciprocal legislation in respect of the United Kingdom itself, it will be necessary, before any Proclamation can be issued under Clause 12 in respect of these portions of the Dominions, to ascertain whether the legislation passed by them (or any of them) covers reciprocity with New South Wales. Ministers would be glad to receive advice from Your Grace on this point.

THE ACTING GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 14th January, 1924.)

(No. 613.)

MY LORD DUKE,

Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 21st December, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Grace herewith, with reference to your despatch No. 291 of the 5th November, 1923,* copy of Minute from Ministers with enclosure on the subject of the procedure for obtaining confirmation in Union Courts of any provisional order issued under the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920 (Imperial).

I have, &c.,

J. ROSE-INNES,

Acting Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 22.

MINUTE No. 882.

Prime Minister's Office, 19th December, 1923.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the Minute No. 7/3266 of the 30th ultimo from His Royal Highness the Governor-General covering a despatch (No. 291) from the Secretary of State for the Colonies dated the 5th November, 1923, relative to procedure under the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, of the Parliament of Great Britain.

2. With reference to paragraph 3 of that despatch Ministers have the honour to transmit herewith a memorandum by the Union Law Advisers on the subject of the requirements which it is thought will be necessary for obtaining confirmation in Union Courts of any provisional order issued in England, Northern Ireland or in any other country which has become a proclaimed country under Section 1 of the Maintenance Orders Act, 1923, Act 15 of 1923 of the Union Parliament.

J. C. SMUTS.

MAINTENANCE ORDERS ACT, 1923 (ACT No. 15 OF 1923).

Memorandum by Union Law Advisers.

THE Maintenance Orders Act, 1923 (Act No. 15 of 1923) of the Union Parliament was promulgated on the 23rd May, 1923. By Section 1 of the Act, however, it applies only in respect of any British Dominion, Possession, Protectorate or British Mandatory Territory, when the Governor-General has issued a proclamation declaring that there is similar legislation in force in that Dominion, Possession, Protectorate or Mandatory Territory.

At the present date (12th December, 1923) the Act has been applied to England, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man (in the United Kingdom) as from the 1st November, 1923, and to Northern and Southern Rhodesia, Basutoland, Swaziland and Bechuanaland Protectorate in South Africa as from the 17th August, 1923. These countries and territories have therefore become "proclaimed countries" within the meaning of the Act.

2. In the case of England, Northern Ireland and the Isle of Man, if a maintenance order has been made by any court therein and a certified copy thereof is transmitted by the Secretary of State to the Governor-General, a copy of the order will, under Section 2 of the Union Act, be sent to that Magistrates Court in the Union which, upon inquiry, is considered, by reason of the residence within its limits of the person on whom the order is made, to have jurisdiction over that person. The order shall be then registered in that court. On registration, it will be capable of being enforced as if it were a judgment of that court.

* No. 17.

For an order to be regarded as capable of being transmitted for registration, the copy of it must be certified, by the proper officer of the court which made it, to be a true copy. (See definition of certified copy in Section 10.) An affiliation order is not a maintenance order for the purposes of the Act. Otherwise a maintenance order is defined in Section 10 as including any order for the periodical payment of sums of money towards the maintenance of the wife of the person against whom the order is made or of any person whom, under the law of the country in which it was made, that person is liable to support.

3. Where the proclaimed country makes a maintenance order which is provisional only and which therefore needs confirmation by a Union Court before it is capable of being enforced in the Union, there must be sent to the Union—

- (a) A certified copy of the order;
- (b) The depositions of the witnesses on whose evidence the provisional order was made; and
- (c) A statement of the grounds on which it might have been opposed.

If the Union Minister of Justice is satisfied that the person against whom the order was made is resident in the Union he will have the order and the documents aforesaid transmitted to the Magistrates Court having jurisdiction where such person is believed to be resident. That Court will then have such person summoned, in accordance with the Union Magistrates Courts Act, to appear and show cause why the order should not be confirmed. The service of the summons upon such person and the deposit of the order and documents aforesaid in the Magistrates Court raises a prima facie case against him, for the depositions are under Section 9 of the Act made evidence in the proceedings before the Magistrates Courts of the Union. There will therefore be a case which he must answer. The onus is therefore upon him to convince the Court on fact and law that the order shall not be confirmed. It is open to him to raise any defence which he might have raised in the proclaimed country to the granting of the provisional order but no other defence. As the certificate of the Court which granted the provisional order in the proclaimed country stating what that defence might have been is conclusive evidence as to what that defence might have been (Section 5 (3) of Act), the proceedings before the Magistrate are obviously much circumscribed. It would seem that nothing short of the defendant traversing and controverting the facts stated in the depositions will prevent the provisional order against him from being confirmed. (Section 5 (4) of Act.)

The only oral evidence which the Court will hear is obviously that of the defendant and of the witnesses (if any) called by him.

It may be, however, that the Court will not be satisfied either with the plaintiff's prima facie case as disclosed in the depositions or with the defendant's evidence in rebuttal thereof. In such an event the Act (Section 5 (4)) provides for the Court sending the case back to the Court of the proclaimed country which made the order and adjourning the proceedings till the further information or evidence is obtained. The Magistrates Courts of the Union will be instructed to state specifically in remitting the matter, on what points further information or evidence is required.

4. It follows from what is stated in paragraph 3 of this memorandum that the confirming court in the Union cannot, under the Act, require at the first hearing any other evidence in support of the confirmation of the provisional order than is referred to in that paragraph, viz.: (a) a certified copy of the provisional order, (b) the depositions of the witnesses on whose evidence the provisional order was made; and (c) a statement of the grounds on which the making of the provisional order might have been opposed in England or other proclaimed country. The only question which remains therefore is as to the form of these documents. With regard to (a) its form has been indicated in paragraph 2 of this memorandum, and in this connexion it may be mentioned that Section 8 of the Union Act provides that any document purporting to be signed by a Judge or officer of a Court in a proclaimed country shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to have been so signed without proof of the signature or judicial or official character of the person appearing to have signed it; and the officer of the Court by whom the document is signed shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to be the proper officer of the Court to sign the document.

It seems, therefore, that no objection can be raised in the Union Court as to the authenticity or proper authentication of a certified copy of an order or of any deposition, statement or document, or, if raised, is likely to be successful.

With regard to (b) it is thought that one of the depositions should if possible be by a person able to identify the defendant as the person whose photograph is attached and marked by a letter or number, and that all the information as to the address where he is believed to be residing in the Union—as to his full name and age—and as to his personal description should be contained rather in the depositions than in the certified copy of the order. That certified copy should, however, refer to the depositions by a letter or number and as being attached to the certified copy. It would be well if the depositions were also signed by the prescribed officer. The certificate of marriage or certified or office copy thereof should, if possible, be attached to the depositions where the plaintiff is the wife of defendant, and it would perhaps be well if the deponent is able to identify the marriage certificate which she produces and which is attached as that which records the marriage between herself and the defendant—as is done in divorce proceedings. The photograph apart from its value in the proceedings before the confirming court, will be useful in any investigations and inquiries which it may be necessary for the Union authorities to make in order to trace the exact whereabouts of the defendant before the papers can be sent by the Department of Justice to the proper court and service of the summons be effected upon the defendant.

With regard to (c) we cannot with advantage add anything to the view expressed in the Home Office circular of 9th August, 1922, as to the form which the statement of possible grounds of opposition should take.

5. Power is given under Section 7 of the Act to make special rules under the Magistrates Courts Act as to procedure under the Maintenance Orders Act. Up to the present time no such special rules have been made, and it is not thought desirable that they should be until a necessity for them has been disclosed by some experience of the working of the Act, and that short departmental instructions to Magistrates will suffice. It seems, however, at present that the Maintenance Orders Act and the existing Magistrates Court rules contain all that is necessary. In any case no such special rules could deal with questions of sufficiency of evidence.

Services and execution of process will be effected in accordance with the existing Magistrates Courts Act and rules with two modifications which are in favour of the plaintiff:—

- (i) The Government police serve and execute all process under the Maintenance Orders Act;
- (ii) No court fees are payable nor are any fees charged in respect of service or execution of process.

Any enforcement in the Union of a maintenance order from a proclaimed country such as England and any confirmation in the Union of a provisional order made in a proclaimed country will cause little or no expense to the plaintiff.

6. We do not think that we can at present, with advantage, say more as to the manner in which the maintenance order, made under the laws of a proclaimed country can be effectively enforced except perhaps to point out that by a simple endorsement on any summons or writ issued by any Magistrates Court, it can be served or executed within the district of any other Magistrates Court. This is owing to the application to these maintenance orders by Section 7 (1) of Act 15 of 1923, of Section 4 of the Magistrates Courts Act, of 1917. There should be little chance therefore of the defendant evading service or execution by moving to another district at the first hint of the proceedings against him. Further the use of the services of the Union police should make it not difficult to trace him if he does move.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE ACTING GOVERNOR.

[Answered by Nos. 28 and 34.]

(No. 11.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 1st February, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatches No. 77 of the 18th of October,* and No. 80 of the 1st of November,† on the subject of the New South Wales Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1923, and to transmit to you for the information of your Ministers one sealed and six plain copies of an Order of His Majesty in Council dated the 16th of January,‡ applying the provisions of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act 1920 to New South Wales.

2. I should be glad if you would invite the attention of your Ministers to the fact that the enclosed Order in Council excludes the Irish Free State. The position of the Free State in regard to the Imperial Act of 1920 is at present receiving the consideration of the Free State Government.

3. In view of the discussion on this subject which took place in the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales (see page 766 of Debates of 6th September, 1923), it may be desirable to explain that the Imperial Act of 1920 extends to Wales, but does not extend to Scotland; it will not therefore be possible for an Order made under the New South Wales Act of 1923 against a person resident in Scotland to be enforced in that country.

4. I enclose copies of Provisional Rules‡ made by the Lord Chancellor under Section 7 of the Imperial Act, together with copies of a circular letter‡ issued by the Home Office to all Clerks to Justices in England.

5. I should be glad if you would invite the attention of your Ministers to paragraph 3 of the circular letter on the subject of provisional Orders made in this country against defendants who are resident overseas. It would be convenient if His Majesty's Government could be informed as soon as possible as to the requirements of the Courts in New South Wales in connexion with such Orders sent to them for confirmation, more particularly with regard to the documentary evidence which should accompany them.

6. It will also be observed, from paragraph 6 of the Circular Home Office letter, that it is hoped that monies paid by a defendant overseas in pursuance of an Order will generally be forwarded to the Clerk of the Court by which the order was made, for payment to the complainant. In this connexion, I have to draw attention to Rule 6 of the Provisional Rules as to payment in the converse case.

7. The Provisional Rules made by the Lord Chancellor relate only to Courts of Summary Jurisdiction, but a "Direction,"‡ copies of which are enclosed, has also been issued by the President of the Probate, Divorce and Admiralty Division of the High Court, under Section 1 of the Act, regarding the registration in that Division of Maintenance Orders made by a Court of Supreme Jurisdiction.

8. With reference to your despatch No. 80 of the 1st of November, I enclose for convenience of reference a list‡ completed up to date of the Dominions, Colonies and Protectorates in which legislation has been passed reciprocal to the Imperial Act of 1920, and to which that Act has accordingly been extended by Order in Council. The Act has been similarly extended also to British India and the Isle of Man. In the great majority of these cases provision has been made for reciprocity with other parts of the Empire outside England and Ireland; but such reciprocity can only be established by mutual agreement between the parts of the Empire concerned. It would, therefore, appear most convenient that your Ministers should communicate direct with the Governments of any Territories with which it is desired that reciprocity should be established.

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Adelaide, 21st January, 1924.

WITH reference to Your Grace's despatch No. 36 of the 14th May last,* I have the honour to transmit herewith 4 copies of the Rules† under the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1922, confirmed at the Executive Council, at Adelaide, the 25th of October, 1923.

With regard to paragraph 4 of Your Grace's despatch above mentioned, my Ministers state that it is difficult to make a general statement of the evidence required, but may safely say that the evidence that will satisfy the requirements of an English Court as to the desirability of making a maintenance order will satisfy a South Australian Court. The evidence of the relationship of the complainant to the defendant should be evidenced by a marriage or birth certificate.

As regards paragraph 5 attention is respectfully drawn to Rule 7 of the South Australian Rules attached.

The person through whom the payments are to be made shall collect the moneys due under the maintenance order in the same manner as if it were made in his favour, and may take proceedings in his own name for enforcing payment, and shall send the moneys, when so collected, to the Court from which the maintenance order originally issued.

2. I feel constrained to remind you that, owing to the fact that since this matter was first brought to the attention of your Ministers twelve months ago, I have received no information of their intention therein. I have been precluded from offering any advice or suggestion to the large number of Dominion and Colonial administrations who are, and have been, engaged in providing the reciprocal legislation contemplated in the two Imperial Acts; and further, that those persons who desire to avail themselves of the facilities of which the provision was contemplated under the Acts of 1920 have been debarred from the exercise of rights to which they would appear to have an undoubted moral claim.

3. I have to request that you will move your Ministers to give this long-delayed question their very early consideration, in order that His Majesty's Government may be able to inform the other Governments concerned of their position in this matter relative to the Irish Free State.

2. My Ministers had hoped that it would have been found possible to enact the Courts of Justice Act before the end of last year, but owing to various delays this Act has only become law within the past month, and it was their intention immediately after the passing of the Act to introduce legislation dealing with the matters referred to in the despatches under reply.

3. A Bill entitled the Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments and Orders Act, 1924, has now been drafted and will, it is hoped, be introduced into the Oireachtas before the end of the present month. A copy of this Bill will be forwarded for your information as soon as printed copies are available.

4. The present draft deals with civil causes in the Superior Courts and with Maintenance Orders which are in the nature of civil proceedings. Further legislation will be necessary to cover the reciprocal execution of warrants and other matters in criminal cases. The provisions of this latter Act cannot be effectively settled until the rule-making authority, created by the Courts of Justice Act, 1924, has settled the procedure in these matters. Every effort will, however, be made to expedite the enactment of the necessary legislation.

I have, &c.,
J. H. THOMAS.

Enclosure in No. 32.

SIR, Downing Street, 24th June, 1924.

WITH reference to the last paragraph of my predecessor's Circular despatch of the 30th September, 1922, on the subject of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, I have the honour to transmit to you a statement showing the Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates, etc., to which the Act has been applied by Order in Council, and indicating the territories in which the legislation contains provision for its extension to other places.

2. As it is desirable that the respective laws of the various territories should be extended to maintenance orders made in Courts in other parts of the Empire, I have to suggest that you should open communication with any other territory with which you may consider reciprocal arrangements are required, with a view to the issue of the necessary Notices or Orders for that purpose. I am aware that in a few instances Colonial Governments have already taken steps for the extension of the local legislation to maintenance orders made in neighbouring administrations, but it appears to me that a wider application of the procedure under the various Colonial Ordinances is desirable. I do not, however, consider it necessary that each Colony or Protectorate should extend reciprocal arrangements to all others in which the necessary measures have been adopted, and I am content to leave to the local authority in each case the selection of the Dominions, Colonies or Protectorates with which it is desired to reciprocate. I shall be glad if you will inform me as soon as any such extensions are effected.

3. I take this opportunity to remind you that it is desirable that copies of the Rules of Court made under the local laws, as well as the laws themselves, dealing with this subject should be exchanged between administrations which extend their legislation to each other. I would also observe that, in a few cases, I have not yet received copies of the Rules made locally as requested in paragraph 6 of my predecessor's Circular despatch of the 30th of September, 1922.

I have, &c.,
J. H. THOMAS.

SIR,

Downing Street, 8th August, 1924.

WITH reference to paragraph 4 of my despatch No. 81 of the 10th of July,* regarding reciprocity between New South Wales and the Isle of Man in the enforcement of maintenance orders, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Government of the Isle of Man will be prepared to take the necessary steps to extend the Isle of Man Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1921,† of which a copy is enclosed, to New South Wales on the understanding that the New South Wales Government will similarly undertake to extend the New South Wales Act to the Isle of Man.

I would suggest accordingly that, if your Ministers agree, arrangements might be made to extend the New South Wales Act to the Isle of Man on a specified date, so fixed as to enable notice of the date to be given one month in advance to the Isle of Man Government, who will then take the necessary steps to extend the Isle of Man Act to New South Wales on the same date.

IN continuation of my despatch No. 69 of the 29th August last,* regarding the passing by this Government of reciprocal legislation in connexion with the Imperial Administration of Justice Act, I have now the honour to state, at the instance of Ministers, that owing to the pressure of other business during the Parliamentary session just closed, it has not been found possible to pass the New South Wales legislation in this matter, but it is hoped that this will be effected during the next session. The Attorney-General has borne the brunt of the session's work, and has had to concentrate on controversial issues.

RESOLUTION VIII.: CARE OF SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

The Conference, having considered the Minute addressed to the Prime Minister on the 15th March, 1917, by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, concurs in the proposals made therein, and humbly prays His Majesty to constitute by Royal Charter an Imperial War Graves Commission for the purposes stated by His Royal Highness, and along the lines therein set forth as embodied in the draft charter submitted to the Conference. The Conference places on record its very deep appreciation of the generous action of the French Government in allotting in perpetuity the land in that country where our men are buried, and urges that similar arrangements should be made, if possible, in the terms of peace with all Governments—Ally, Enemy, or Neutral—for a similar concession in Gallipoli, Mesopotamia, Africa, and all other theatres of war. The Conference desires to record its grateful appreciation of the work already done by the Prince of Wales and his Committee in caring for the graves of those who have fallen in the common cause of the Empire, and its satisfaction that His Royal Highness has consented to become the President of the permanent Commission.

RESOLUTION XII.: CARE OF SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

That the Imperial War Graves Commission be requested as soon as possible after their appointment and organization to prepare an estimate of the probable cost of carrying on the work entrusted to them and to submit the same to the Governments of the United Kingdom and Oversea Dominions with their recommendation as to the proportion that should be borne by each.

IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE, 1918.RESOLUTION I.: IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION.

The Conference desires to place on record its appreciation of the labours of the Imperial War Graves Commission and is in favour of the cost of carrying out the decisions of the Commission being borne by the respective Governments in proportion to the numbers of the graves of their dead.

IRISH FREE STATE.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 46.]

(No. 115.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 21st February, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acquaint you, for the information of your Ministers, that His Majesty's Government have recently had under consideration the question of the future care and maintenance of the graves of British Naval, Military and Air Force personnel in the Irish Free State.

2. His Majesty's Government are not in possession of full information as to the total number of such graves as no complete records were kept prior to about 1915. It is believed, however, that the number of burials between the 4th August, 1914, and the evacuation of the Free State by British Military Forces exceeds 2,000, and that there are probably some 7,000 or 8,000 graves dating from before the 4th August, 1914.

3. The Imperial War Graves Commission, whose powers were originally limited to the graves of members of His Majesty's Naval and Military Forces who died on Active Service between 4th August, 1914, and 31st August, 1921, have recently obtained an extension of their Charter permitting them, if they so desire (and not otherwise) to provide also for the marking and maintenance of British Naval, Military and Air Force graves other than those of men killed in the European War. In this connexion I would invite reference to my despatch Dominions No. 30 of the 26th January,* transmitting to you the text of the Charter and the Supplementary Charters of the Commission. His Majesty's Government are considering the possibility of approaching the Commission with a view to their co-operating in the maintenance of all such graves within the area of the Irish Free State, in accordance with arrangements of which I now proceed to indicate the outlines:—

4. The graves in question may be divided into three classes:

(a) War graves.

(b) Pre-War graves.

(c) Post-War graves.

(a) War Graves.—It appears to His Majesty's Government that the care of these graves in the Free State may properly be entrusted to the Imperial War Graves Commission, subject to appropriate participation in the expenses of the Commission being made by your Government as by the Government of every other Dominion. Should your Ministers desire that the Free State, in common with the other Dominions, should be represented on the Commission, His Majesty's Government will be glad to request His Majesty the King to grant, and the Commission to accept, a Supplementary Charter in order that such an appointment may be made.

(b) Pre-War Graves.—In accordance with the general principle of the transfer of War Department property in the Irish Free State to your Government, and with the practice obtaining in the other Dominions, His Majesty's Government feel that the responsibility for these graves should be transferred to your Ministers, to whom it would be open to carry out the work either through the existing Departments of Government or, should they prefer it, through the agency of the Imperial War Graves Commission under the terms of the Supplementary Charter of the 19th December, 1923, at the expense of Irish Free State funds.

(c) Post-War Graves.—It is proposed that the Commission should be invited by His Majesty's Government to undertake the charge of these graves at the expense of British funds. It is understood that no difficulty need be anticipated in identifying these particular graves.

5. Before approaching the War Graves Commission in the above sense, His Majesty's Government desire to learn whether your Ministers concur generally in this proposal, and will be prepared to assist the Commission in these tasks if they undertake them.

6. Should your Ministers concur in these proposals, and should the Commission accept the invitation addressed to them, their first task would be the identification and registration of such graves, and for this purpose it is assumed that they would send over an Inspector or Inspectors who would be instructed to get into touch with the Ministry of Defence of the Irish Free State in the hope that the Ministry would be able to afford them assistance, and, if necessary, protection in the carrying out of their duties. I have to explain that a similar procedure has been followed in the case of Northern Ireland where the Inspectors of the Commission are now completing their task of registration.

7. I shall be glad to receive at the earliest convenient date an expression of your Ministers' attitude towards the above proposals.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your despatch Dominions No. 30 of the 26th January,* transmitting copies of an order in Council of the 19th December approving the grant of a supplemental charter to the Imperial War

* Not printed: content explained above.

Graves Commission, and of your despatch No. 115 of the 21st February* relative to the future care and maintenance of the graves of the British Military and Air Force personnel in the Irish Free State.

2. My Ministers have carefully considered the proposals made in the despatch under reply as to participation in the expense of the Imperial War Graves Commission, and regret that they cannot accept the financial responsibility which membership of the Commission involves.

3. They desire me, however, to inform you that they are willing to take over the entire care and maintenance of all British graves whatsoever in the Irish Free State. They will be glad to learn at an early date if this suggestion meets with the acceptance of His Majesty's Government.

I have, &c.,

RESOLUTION XIII.: IMPERIAL MINERAL RESOURCES BUREAU.

That it is desirable to establish in London an Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, upon which should be represented Great Britain, the Dominions, India, and other parts of the Empire.

The Bureau should be charged with the duties of collection of information from the appropriate Departments of the Governments concerned and other sources regarding the mineral resources and the metal requirements of the Empire, and of advising from time to time what action, if any, may appear desirable to enable such resources to be developed and made available to meet the metal requirements of the Empire.

That the Conference recommends that His Majesty's Government should, while having due regard to existing institutions, take immediate action for the purpose of establishing such a Bureau, and should as soon as possible submit a scheme for the consideration of the other Governments summoned to the Conference.

IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE, 1918.

RESOLUTION XVI.: IMPERIAL MINERAL RESOURCES BUREAU.

The Imperial War Conference, having considered the memorandum by the Minister of Reconstruction on the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, as amended, agrees that the number of representatives of the mineral, mining, and metal industries on the Governing Body of the Bureau should be increased from four (as originally agreed) to six. The Conference further approves the proposal for a Charter of Incorporation as set out in paragraph 3 of the memorandum and the proposals in paragraphs 7 and 8 as to the allocation of expenditure.

Secretariat Note.—Copies of the Fourth Annual Report of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, together with the Statement of Accounts for 1922, were sent to the Dominions by despatch Dominions No. 158 of the 9th of May, 1923 (21705/23). Copies of the Fifth Annual Report with the Statement of Accounts for 1923 were sent to the Dominions by despatch Dominions No. 186 of the 17th of April, 1924, and to Southern Rhodesia by despatch No. 351 of the 27th of August, 1924 (16724/24).

See also pages 269-289 as to the proposed amalgamation of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau with the Imperial Institute.

RESOLUTION XV.: DOUBLE INCOME TAX.

The present system of Double Income Taxation within the Empire calls for review in relation—

- (i) to firms in the United Kingdom doing business with the Oversea Dominions, India, and the Colonies;
- (ii) to private individuals resident in the United Kingdom who have capital invested elsewhere in the Empire, or who depend upon remittances from elsewhere within the Empire, and
- (iii) to its influence on the investment of capital in the United Kingdom, the Dominions, and India, and to the effect of any change on the position of British capital invested abroad.

The Conference, therefore, urges that this matter should be taken in hand immediately after the conclusion of the War, and that an amendment of the law should be made which will remedy the present unsatisfactory position.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 19th May, 1924.)

(No. 72.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 2nd April, 1924.

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch dated 14th November, 1922, No. 412,* covering a copy of a memorandum on the subject of Double Income Tax, prepared by the Board of Inland Revenue, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to forward herewith a copy of a statement in regard thereto submitted by the Commonwealth Commissioner of Taxation.

I have, &c.,

FORSTER,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 48.

Federal Commissioner of Taxation,
Post Office Buildings, Melbourne,
29th January, 1924.

SUBJECT: DOUBLE INCOME TAX.

MUCH unavoidable delay has arisen in connexion with the consideration of the memorandum by the Board of Inland Revenue, London, relative to relief from double income taxation between the Commonwealth and the United Kingdom. The delay is regretted, but at the same time it has permitted the consideration of a number of aspects of the question submitted by various taxpayers, that the reasonable conclusion of the discussion with the Imperial authorities seems now to be possible.

It is clear that the Board of Inland Revenue is granting relief from United Kingdom income tax along lines which are so liberal as to involve the Imperial Exchequer in a loss of some revenue. The Board of Inland Revenue does not seek to find whether or not an amount of Australian income tax has actually suffered double taxation, or to ascertain the actual extent of the double taxation. Paragraph 3 of the Board's memorandum makes this abundantly clear.

It is, however, impossible for the Commonwealth to proceed along similar lines.

The following comments on the Board's memorandum are submitted:—

Paragraphs 3 and 4.—In the example stated in these paragraphs on page 3 of the memorandum of the Board of Inland Revenue, it seems clear that in the first year the United Kingdom will be granting a rebate in respect of £400 which has not been doubly taxed.

If the Commonwealth rates of tax in the two years involved rebate of tax, the rebate would be calculated on £600 in the first year and £300 in the second year, as these amounts represent the income falling to be doubly taxed.

Paragraph 5.—The Board has drawn the correct inference from page 4 of the Governor-General's despatch which the Board is discussing, i.e., the Commonwealth relief will be allowed in respect of the actual amount of income upon which double income tax has been paid by the taxpayer.

Paragraph 6.—The Board is in error in assuming that the Commonwealth relief will be allowed on an actual amount which the taxpayer shows has been subject to both Commonwealth and United Kingdom income tax for the same year of assessment. If the underlined words had been omitted from the assumption, the assumption would then have been correct.

For the purpose of the relief from Commonwealth tax, the actual year of assessment in either the United Kingdom or the Commonwealth is immaterial. The only material fact in this connexion is that double tax has been paid on the income at some time or other since the date when the Commonwealth law on the subject became operative. The underlined word "any" in the phrase "any person who has an amount of income which is liable to income tax for any year of assessment under this Act and in the United Kingdom" does not contemplate a comparison of the rates of corresponding years of assessment, irrespective of the year or years on the basis of which assessments are computed. The word means that when income has been assessed in both countries at any time, however far apart the times may be, relief from double tax is permitted by the Commonwealth law.

It is impossible for the Commonwealth to adopt the suggestion that as a general rule the Commonwealth year of assessment ending on the 30th June should be regarded as corresponding to the United Kingdom year of assessment ending on the following 5th April. Each taxpayer will be required by the Commonwealth Taxation Department to prove two things:—

- (1) The amount of his income which has been doubly taxed in the United Kingdom and in the Commonwealth; and
- (2) The appropriate rate of United Kingdom income tax which he has paid on the doubly taxed income.

This reply deals also with the remarks of the Board of Inland Revenue in paragraph 8 of the Board's memorandum.

Paragraph 9.—This paragraph discusses the proposal of the Commonwealth Taxation authorities that certificates identifying income and stating rates of tax might be issued by both the United Kingdom and Commonwealth Taxation Departments.

It is recognized that extreme difficulty would be experienced by both authorities in compiling such certificates if the compilation were to be undertaken by the authorities. I think it is unnecessary that the authorities should undertake this work, as several cases recently dealt with by the Commonwealth Taxation Department for rebate purposes have been considered in the light of certified statements of account submitted by reputable public accountants showing the dissection of accounts forming the basis of the taxpayers' assessments in the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth and in respect of which the rebate was claimed.

The accounts were accompanied by the certificate issued by the representatives of the Board of Inland Revenue, which, in the cases in point, were in such a form as to permit this Department to act upon the accountants' statements and allow the rebate.

It is thought that claimants for rebate should be obliged to prepare a proper dissection of their accounts and submit them to the assessing authority for certification that the accounts were those used in its assessment for a year to be specified, leaving to the rebating authority to decide upon the acceptance or rejection of the dissection of the accounts submitted to it to show the amount of income upon which double tax has been paid.

The dissection of accounts which the Commonwealth Taxation Department would need would require to show the totals of the gross Australian and ex-Australian income in the accounts, together with the total deductions allowed by the United Kingdom taxation authority separated into two classes, viz.:—

- (1) Those applicable to the taxpayer's income as a whole (Australian and ex-Australian incomes combined); and
- (2) Those allowed in respect of either Australian or ex-Australian income only.

The certificate of either taxing authority as to the amount of income assessed by it and the appropriate rate of tax charged in the assessment based upon the accounts referred to, would enable the other taxing authority to determine the amount of the rebate to be allowed. Apparently, however, the United Kingdom authorities do not desire such a certificate from the Commonwealth authorities. If this be so, the only certificate to be obtained by an applicant for relief from double taxation will be the certificate of the United Kingdom authorities as indicated above.

Paragraph 11.—The Board of Inland Revenue has correctly expressed the meaning of "British rate" in sub-Section (2) (c) of Section 5 of the Commonwealth Act.

Paragraph 12.—The practice of the Board of Inland Revenue stated in this paragraph has been noted.

Paragraph 13.—It is noticed that the United Kingdom relief from double taxation paid by a company on dividends distributed to shareholders who are not Australian residents is first granted to the company, and is subsequently granted to the shareholder (paragraph 13) notwithstanding the fact that the company in nearly every instance deducts the dividend tax from the dividends paid to the non-Australian residents. Furthermore, an ordinary shareholder in a company which has paid double income tax does not suffer a payment of tax in respect of the undistributed income.

It would appear that the relief granted by the Board of Inland Revenue proceeds on the assumption that any tax paid by a company is paid on behalf of the shareholders. Whilst this may be the case it does not follow that the shareholders' dividend has been subject to any part of the Commonwealth tax on undistributed profits, and the tax on the undistributed profits will not be taken into consideration in the shareholders' assessment for the purpose of relief to him from double taxation.

The position under the Commonwealth law in regard to relief from double tax to be granted to companies and shareholders is as follows:—

Companies—

(a) Undistributed income.—The company only is entitled to the relief from double tax.

(b) Distributed income—

(i) Paid to Australian shareholders.—The company will have paid tax in the United Kingdom and in the Australian State concerned on the full profits.

The Australian shareholders who are taxpayers will have paid Commonwealth tax (and, in the case of Western Australia, in some instances, the State tax) on the dividends.

An Australian shareholder who has paid United Kingdom tax by deduction is the person entitled to apply to the Commonwealth for relief from double tax.

If the Australian shareholder has received the dividend free of tax, he will have difficulty in proving double taxation on his dividend.

(ii) To absentee shareholders:—

(a) Where the absentee shareholder, depositor or debenture holder is separately assessed:—

In some cases the Commonwealth Taxation Department assesses the absentee separately at the rate appropriate to his total taxable income from Australian sources. In these cases the absentee is the person entitled to the relief from double taxation.

(b) Where the shareholder, depositor, or debenture holder is not separately assessed, but the company pays on the distributions to them at the flat rate.

If the company pays dividends and/or interest to the absentees free of income tax, the company is the party entitled to the relief from double taxation.

If the company deducts the flat rate of 7d. (or the corresponding rate in force at the time) from the dividend or interest payable to the absentee, the absentee is the person entitled to the relief from double taxation. It is probable, however, that in these cases the Commonwealth would not be called upon to grant any relief because the flat rate of Commonwealth tax would probably be less than half the United Kingdom rate payable on the same income.

Attached is a schedule containing an illustration of the calculation of the Commonwealth rebate to a company and to a shareholder in a company. It is thought that this illustration may assist the Board of Inland Revenue to a fuller appreciation of the Commonwealth position.

R. EWING,
Commissioner of Taxation.

The Secretary to the Treasury,
Melbourne.

A company with its headquarters in the United Kingdom derives income during the year ended 30th June, 1920, as follows:—

From sources in the United Kingdom ...		50,000
From sources in Australia:
Victoria	25,000
New South Wales	25,000
		50,000
		£100,000

Dividends amounting to £40,000 are paid out of current profits. The company consists of five shareholders resident in the United Kingdom who are absentees for the purposes of the Federal Income Tax Assessment Act, and who have no other source of income. The following dividends are received by them:—

A—£24,000. B—£14,000. C—£1,500. D—£380. E—£120.

Rebate under Section 18 to the Company Assessments of the Company.

United Kingdom: Income Tax.—If the "Statutory Income" of the company, upon which the assessment for the United Kingdom financial year 1921-22, commencing on the 6th April, 1921, and ending on 5th April, 1922, is £90,000 (being the average of the profits derived during the three years ended on 30th June, 1918, 1919 and 1920) the income tax payable in the United Kingdom would be £90,000 at 6s. in £ = £27,000.

Commonwealth: Income Tax.—For the financial year 1920-21 commencing on the 1st July, 1920, and ending on the 30th June, 1921.

Income derived in Australia	50,000
Less deduction under Section 20(1) $\frac{10,000}{100,000}$ of £40,000
= £20,000, i.e., the proportion of the total distribution which was made out of income derived in Australia	20,000
-Taxable income	£30,000

Total tax at 2s. 8d. in £1 on £30,000 = £4,000.

Amount taxed to company under Section 20(2), i.e., on dividends paid to absentee shareholders—

£20,000 at 8d. = £666 13s. 4d.

Shareholders A, B and C are individually assessed as the rate of Federal Income Tax on that proportion (50 per cent.) of the dividends received by them exceeds the absentee rate of 8d. in the £1 paid by the company.

State Assessments.—Under the Income Tax Act of Victoria and New South Wales dividends are taxed at the source, i.e., the company is taxed on both distributed and undistributed income.

Victoria: Income Tax.—For the financial year 1920-21 commencing on the 1st July, 1920, and ending on 30th June, 1921.

Taxed on £25,000 at 1s. in £1 = £1,250.

New South Wales.—For the financial year 1920-21 commencing on 1st July, 1920, and ending on 30th June, 1921.

Taxed on £25,000 at 2s. 6d. in £1 = £3,125.

Commonwealth Rebate: Section 18.

Assuming the company has deducted the absentee tax of 8d. in the £1 from the amount of the dividend paid to each shareholder.

Income Doubly Taxed: Section 18(1)(i).

Income taxed in Commonwealth assessment.

Undistributed income, £30,000 at 2s. 8d. = £4,000.

The income taxed in Commonwealth assessment which has also been taxed in the State assessments is (in this example) regarded as having been derived from each State proportionately to the incomes taxed in each State assessment.

£25,000 has been taxed in each State, therefore the £30,000 taxed to the company is regarded as having been derived equally in each State.

Victoria: £15,000 at 1s. in £1 = £750.

New South Wales: £15,000 at 2s. 6d. in £ = £1,875.

Sum of Commonwealth and State Rates.

Victoria	12d.	New South Wales	30d.
Commonwealth	32d.	Commonwealth	32d.
	44d.		62d.

As neither of these two rates is greater than the British rate, the rate of rebate will be the excess of each of these rates over one-half the British rate (3s.).

Rate of Rebates.

Victorian income (44-36)—8d. in £1.

New South Wales income (62-36)—26d. in £1.

The Commonwealth proportion of the rebate is therefore—

Victorian income $32/44$ of 8d.—5818.

New South Wales income $32/62$ of 26d.—13419.

Each States' proportion of the rebate is therefore—

Victorian income $12/44$ of 8d.—2182.

New South Wales income $30/62$ of 26d.—12581.

The amount of Commonwealth rebate is—

On income derived in Victoria £15,000 × 5818 £363 12s. 6d.

On income derived in New South Wales £15,000 × 13419 £838 13s. 9d.

Total Commonwealth rebate £1,202 6s. 3d.

The amount of rebate by the State is—

Victoria £15,000 × 2182 £136 7s. 6d.

New South Wales £15,000 × 12581 £786 6s. 3d.

Total State rebate £922 13s. 9d.

"No State Government has yet intimated its intention to be a party to the arrangement, so that a taxpayer, who at present pays the three taxes, will not obtain any relief from a State Government. This, however, will not affect the amount of the rebate to be allowed by the Commonwealth under the Section."

Rebates under Section 18 to a shareholder.—Shareholder received a taxable income of £12,000 calculated as follows:—

Dividend Received.	Exempt proportion of dividend received.	Taxable proportion of dividend received.
£24,000	£12,000	£12,000

Assuming the whole of this dividend was paid after the close, on 30th June, 1920, of the company's financial year, "A" would be taxed on it under Federal law in the financial year 1921-22 as income derived by him from sources within Australia during the year ended 30th June, 1921. "A" might be taxed in the United Kingdom on his dividends by deduction of tax by the company during the financial year 1921-22, which commenced on the 6th April, 1921, and ended on the 5th April, 1922.

Unless the State tax paid by the company on the distributed income has been deducted by the company from the dividends, "A" will not have suffered triple taxation.

Assuming that "A" is married and therefore entitled under Section 18 of Finance Act, 1920, to a personal allowance of £225, and that he received his dividends free of State taxation, he will have paid the following taxes:—

Federal Income Tax Financial Year 1921-22.

Tax on £12,000. Paid by company (absentee rate) ...	£400 0 0
Paid by "A" personally	£3,874 10 0
Total	£4,274 10 0

Average rate of Federal income tax—8549d.

United Kingdom Income Tax: Financial year 1921-22.

Dividends received.	Marriage allowance.	Taxable income.	Amount of Tax.	Rate of Tax.
£24,000	£225	£23,775	£7,098 15s. 0d.	71659d.

United Kingdom Super Tax: Financial year 1922-23.

Dividends received,	Amount of tax,	Rate of tax,
£24,000	£5,062 10s. 0d.	50.625d.

No concessional deductions are allowed for income tax, vide Davis v. Commissioner of Inland Revenue.

Commonwealth Rebate.

"A" has been taxed in the Commonwealth at 85.49d. in £ on £12,000. Of this amount £11,888 (half of £23,775) has been subsequently taxed in the United Kingdom for income tax and the whole £12,000 for super tax.

The United Kingdom income tax rate is ... 71.659

The United Kingdom super tax rate is ... 50.625

The British rate for the purpose of Section 18 is the sum of these two rates, i.e., 122.284d.

As the Commonwealth rate is not greater than the British rate, the rate of rebate is the excess of the Commonwealth rate over one-half the British rate, i.e. (85.49—half of 122.284)=24.348. The amount of the rebate under Section 18 is, therefore:—

$$£12,000 \times 24.348 = £1,217 \text{ 8s. 0d.}$$

R. EWING.

RESOLUTION XXI.: IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

The time has arrived when all possible encouragement should be given to the development of Imperial resources, and especially to making the Empire independent of other countries in respect of food supplies, raw materials and essential industries. With these objects in view this Conference expresses itself in favour of:—

- (1) The principle that each part of the Empire, having due regard to the interests of our Allies, shall give specially favourable treatment and facilities to the produce and manufactures of other parts of the Empire.
- (2) Arrangements by which intending emigrants from the United Kingdom may be induced to settle in countries under the British flag.

No. 49.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SIR G. FULLER (PRIME MINISTER) to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 28th March, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 50.]

Australia House, Strand, London, W.C.2,

27th March, 1923.

SIR,

PURSUANT to the intention expressed in my letter to you of 17th instant,* I now venture to address a further communication to you on the subject of a tariff preference in Great Britain being accorded to the products of irrigation settlements established in the Overseas Dominions.

I am, of course, well aware of the fact that the question of tariff preference, so far as Australia is concerned, is entirely within the province of the Commonwealth Government, ably represented in London by the Right Hon. Sir Joseph Cook as High Commissioner, but it is also one which vitally affects the capability of the Government of the State of New South Wales, of which I am the Head, to carry to a successful issue the proposals for the settlement of British immigrants on our irrigation areas. These proposals have been already presented to you in the form of an Agreement entered into between the respective Governments of the Commonwealth and of the State. For this reason I have deemed myself entitled—and I hope, Sir, that you will agree with this view—to make direct representation to His Majesty's Government explaining the position of the State in relation to the matter, and stressing its vital importance to the practicability or otherwise of our scheme of immigration framed under the provisions of the Empire Settlement Act.

I feel sure that the Imperial Government fully realizes the mutual advantages which will accrue to the Motherland and to the Overseas Dominions from a bold policy of immigration, both from a defence and a commercial standpoint, to say nothing of sentimental considerations. It is quite unnecessary for me to recapitulate them, when they are given utterance daily by the leaders of public thought in Britain.

But I may, perhaps, be pardoned for inviting attention to a fact which is less generally recognized, that there are tremendously large possibilities, and the best opportunities, for the settlement of British migrants on the irrigation areas either in existence or about to be established in Australia, particularly in New South Wales. This form of settlement is far removed from the ordinary difficulties of pioneering, and affords to new settlers better facilities for social life, with a minimum of risk and hardship.

In the scheme of settlement which the Government of New South Wales has submitted to the Imperial Government, the irrigation areas within the confluence of the Murray and Murrumbidgee Rivers, in the South Western portion of the State, play a very important part. The Governments of Victoria and South

* Not printed: it dealt with the question of Oversea Settlement.

Australia are also similarly interested to a very large extent. The irrigation areas already established have been highly successful in their operations, with the result that, when the requirements of the Australian markets have been satisfied, there is, even now, an exportable surplus of commodities. There are boundless possibilities of extension for this industry provided that a satisfactory market can be secured abroad. The intrinsic quality of the fruit, its flavour and sweetness, compare most favourably with any similar products from any part of the world. The initial difficulties which almost invariably attend the commencement of a new industry, such as grading and perfection in details of processing, are now being rapidly overcome. The heavy yields of fruit on these areas permit a close subdivision of the land, and ten, fifteen or twenty acres, or according to the varying quality of the soil, is regarded as a sufficient holding to ensure the settler a good livelihood.

Our chief competitors abroad in the canned and dried fruits industries are California and the countries bordering on the Mediterranean.

California has a home market comprising 110 millions of people to cater for before export has to be considered. The tendency has been to make the profits from the American market, and to export the surplus at prices which frequently partake of a "dumping" character. It supplies the bulk of the canned fruits and dried tree fruits consumed in Great Britain.

The dried grape fruits on the British market come from Spain (raisins), Greece (currants and sultanas), and Smyrna (sultanas). Supplies of sultanas are also obtained from Persia and Afghanistan.

The standard of living in these countries (Mediterranean and the Levant) is far below that of the English-speaking communities, particularly that of Australia. The low wage and inferior conditions of living enable these countries to place fruit on the European markets at prices with which Australia, with her long sea-carriage and comparatively high living standard, cannot compete.

Settlement on the irrigation areas in Australia is proceeding very rapidly, and with the advent of the British settlers it is no exaggeration to estimate that in the year 1926 there will be an exportable surplus of between 70 and 80 per cent. of dried fruit production. It will thus be readily appreciated that the extension of the overseas markets for irrigation products, dried and canned fruits, is of vital importance to the Australian soldiers already settled on those areas, and to the British immigrants whom it is proposed to establish there.

To summarize the position briefly, therefore, I would say, that the State Governments of New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia are anxious to develop their irrigation resources to the fullest possible extent. They are now prepared to offer large areas of irrigable land on the Murray for immediate British settlement, provided that Great Britain will take such steps as will ensure a reasonable market for high quality dried and canned fruits. In order to stabilize the industry thoroughly, it is imperative that a substantial measure of preference should be given in regard to Dominion commodities of this nature—not so as to increase the prices of such fruits in Britain, but with the object of allowing the Dominions a fair trade margin. It is clearly recognized that Britain is unlikely to grant preference on Dominion articles of prime necessity in a way which would increase the cost of living, but neither canned nor dried fruits come within this category.

As the Premier of the principal Australian State affected by these considerations, I submit that I have not violated any constitutional rule of procedure in thus demonstrating the position in which my Government is placed by this aspect of proposed British settlement within the boundaries of the State, but at the same time I recognize that it is not within my province to suggest the manner in which that policy should be given effect. That is entirely a matter for the Government of the Commonwealth, represented in Britain by the High Commissioner, in whose hands I am perfectly prepared to leave the further discussion of the subject. Sir Joseph Cook, who has been furnished with a copy of this and of my previous letter to you, will be able to present for your consideration remarkable figures illustrating the effect of Australian preference on goods of British manufacture in contradistinction to the small cash benefit Australia has received as a result of the measure of British preference accorded to Australian commodities under the existing tariff.

I content myself, in conclusion, with an earnest prayer that, before I return to Australia, I shall receive from the Imperial Government an assurance that this vitally important question will receive the most favourable consideration, so that the tremendous effort which my Government proposes to make in the settlement of British people in our State will not be endangered by the possibility of refusal of the claim which we consider is fair and reasonable, amply justified as a measure of co-operation in a great national movement already too long delayed.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE W. FULLER,

Premier, New South Wales.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO SIR G. FULLER (PRIME MINISTER).

[Answered by No. 51.]

DEAR SIR GEORGE,

Downing Street, 28th April, 1923.

I AM sorry that I have been unable to answer earlier your letter of the 27th March.*

I am much impressed with the importance which irrigation is assuming in Australia, and with the opportunities which it appears likely to create for British settlers, and I am very glad to receive your full and interesting account of the possibilities of future development on these lines.

I am sure you will understand that, while all the schemes which are put forward for the encouragement of settlement in the Dominions overseas have to be closely examined here, such examination is carried out with a strong desire to help to ensure the success of the schemes.

I am glad to see that you have sent a copy of your letter to Sir Joseph Cook, since, as you say, the particular suggestion which you make for assisting the development of the irrigation areas is a matter for the Commonwealth authorities, and was, in fact, brought up by them for consideration last year. I anticipate also that Mr. Bruce will raise it again at the coming Imperial Economic Conference, and you will appreciate that, until we know what particular proposals the Commonwealth Government wish to put forward, we cannot go very far. In any case I feel bound to say that, in my opinion, it is very doubtful whether any pronouncement of policy could be made before the Conference meets.

I am sending a copy of this letter to Sir J. Cook.

Yours very truly,

DEVONSHIRE.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SIR G. FULLER (PRIME MINISTER) TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 16th May, 1923.)

c/o Agent-General for New South Wales, Australia House,

YOUR GRACE,

Strand, London, W.C.2, 3rd May, 1923.

I AM most grateful for your letter of 28th April† in reply to mine of 27th March,* regarding the question of preference to canned and dried fruits grown upon irrigated areas in the Dominions, in relation to the scheme of land settlement which I have submitted to His Majesty's Government.

The reception of my proposals by the Oversea Settlement Committee, acting under Your Grace's instructions, have given me every reason to believe that the Imperial Government wishes to help forward schemes of land settlement in the Dominions in every possible way consistent with an assurance of their practicability.

My representations on this subject were made with the full knowledge of the vital importance of the preference aspect to the success of the migration schemes we have undertaken under the provisions of the Empire Settlement Act, and it is with every confidence that I look forward to the result of the deliberations of the Economic Conference in October next.

There is no room for doubt but that the question will be raised on behalf of the Commonwealth of Australia, and perhaps on behalf of other Dominions also, at the forthcoming Conference, and it seems equally certain that the question will be viewed sympathetically by the representatives of His Majesty's Government.

I am encouraged in this view by the excellent article written in the current issue of the Empire Review by Colonel Amery, on "Empire Settlement and Development," and I crave indulgence for quoting the following passage:—

"Men, money and markets, indeed, form an inseparable trio which have to go together to insure really successful development. It is no use spending large sums on irrigation works to enable many thousands of new settlers to grow fruit, unless that fruit, fresh, dried, or preserved, can find a market. And if our policy, and that of the Dominion Governments, is to take steps to promote settlement, it must be equally our policy to provide the market facilities as well as the capital to make settlement a success. In other words co-operation in settlement must be accompanied by co-operation in economic policy."

These, and other pronouncements of prominent British statesmen, as well as Your Grace's own exceedingly courteous reception of my representations, have led me to form the most optimistic outlook in this regard.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE W. FULLER,

Premier, New South Wales.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

SIR G. FULLER (PRIME MINISTER) TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 15th May, 1923.)

c/o Agent-General for New South Wales, Australia House,

YOUR GRACE,

Strand, London, W.C.2, 11th May, 1923.

I AM proposing to leave London on my return journey to Australia on 23rd instant, and, before taking my departure, beg to express my deep sense of gratitude for the extreme courtesy and cordiality with which you, Sir, have received me personally, and for the close attention which you have bestowed upon the various matters upon which I have had the honour to address you.

I venture to make one further observation, viz., that I trust that the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference will carefully consider the question of the marketing of Australian products in Britain. At the present time there is very great room for definite improvement in the methods adopted in this regard. I realize, of course, that, so far as the general organization of the marketing of Australian products is concerned, it is largely a matter for the Australian producer and the Australian Governments; nevertheless, there are several ways in which His Majesty's Government could materially assist. For instance, the limitations imposed on the marketing of fresh fruit and meat by the privileged markets in London—Covent Garden and Smithfield—should, I think, be very carefully reviewed, and the co-operation of His Majesty's Government in this matter, and the extension of port and rail facilities would be greatly appreciated by the overseas producers.

The problems to be discussed do not merely affect Australia or even the Dominions as a whole, as the difficulties being experienced by the primary producers in the Dominions are practically identical with those of England, and they may be capable of common solution.

It is a matter, of course, upon which the views of Australia will be voiced by its Prime Minister, and I am despatching to Mr. Bruce a communication outlining in detail a scheme which will, I think, serve as a basis for consideration from the Australian standpoint.

I have, &c.,

GEORGE W. FULLER,

Premier, New South Wales.

CORRESPONDENCE ARISING OUT OF THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE, 1918.

RESOLUTIONS XII: INTER-IMPERIAL PARCELS DELIVERY.

The Conference considers it desirable, for the purpose of encouraging Imperial trade, that the present facilities for inter-Imperial parcels delivery should be enlarged, improved, and co-ordinated, and recommends that the proposals contained in the Board of Trade memorandum should be examined by the Governments represented at the Conference with a view to the preparation of a detailed scheme designed to promote this object.

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, St. John's, 15th January, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your predecessor's despatch, Dominions No. 457 of the 10th November, 1921,* on the subject of proposals for an Imperial Heavy Parcels-Post Scheme, and to inform you that consideration has been given to the proposals outlined in the Memorandum forwarded in the despatch referred to.

2. My Ministers point out that their present facilities for the handling of parcel-post matter are taxed to the utmost, and that they could not therefore undertake the additional responsibility which would be entailed under the proposed scheme. Further, winter conditions in this country would make it impossible to carry the additional load.

3. Under the circumstances, therefore, my Ministers regret that they cannot see their way to adopt the proposals outlined in the memorandum.

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, Ottawa, 16th February, 1923.

WITH reference to Mr. Winston Churchill's despatch Dominions No. 457 of the 10th November, 1921,* transmitting copy of a memorandum relating to proposals for an Imperial Heavy Parcels-Post Scheme, I have the honour to inform you that the limit of weight for parcels passing by post within Canada is fixed by law at eleven pounds. In the circumstances, the Post Office Department does not feel in a position at present to give a favourable answer in regard to the proposal for this scheme, in so far as it would affect the postal service of Canada, as they could not give to those resident in other parts of the Empire a privilege which is refused by law within this Dominion.

I have, &c.,
BYNG OF VIMY.

Secretariat Note.—The question of placing this subject on the Agenda for the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, was considered; but in view of the replies received from the Dominions as set out above and in Dominions No. 83 the proposal was dropped. A modified form of the scheme was, however, the subject of informal discussion between the British and some of the Dominion Post Offices during the latter part of 1924.

RESOLUTION XV.: CHANNELS OF COMMUNICATION.

(1) That this Conference is of the opinion that the development which has taken place in the relations between the United Kingdom and the Dominions necessitates such a change in administrative arrangements and in the Channels of Communication between their Governments as will bring them more directly in touch with each other.

(2) That the Imperial War Cabinet be invited to give immediate consideration to the creation of suitable machinery for this purpose.

TELEGRAM.

[Answered by No. 57.]

PERSONAL. I have read carefully your Secret Personal despatch of 29th October and your letter to Masterton Smith.* I am sending official reply† by despatch, but in the meantime wish to assure you there has been no intention whatever of weakening Governor-General's position. You will have noticed in recent telegrams on foreign situation use of formula at end of messages "please inform your Prime Minister," which I think entirely meets your point, though I am not referring to it in my despatch. Phrase "Your Government" in telegram mentioned in your letter was of course a slip. Phrase "following for your Prime Minister from me," was, I think, adopted by my predecessor only in telegrams on Near East crisis, with object partly of differentiating his messages from those sent by Prime Minister on same subject and partly of showing that messages contained his personal appreciations of situation.—DEVONSHIRE.

MY LORD.

Downing Street, 5th March, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's Secret and Personal despatch of the 29th of October last,‡ on the subject of telegraphic messages from the Secretary of State for the Colonies for your Prime Minister.

2. I find that the phrase "Following for your Prime Minister" in telegrams to the Governors-General of the self-governing Dominions, as distinct from phraseology designed to show that the message is one from the Prime Minister in this country to a Dominion Prime Minister, has been in use for some considerable time. It appears first to have been employed after the Peace Conference, and from time to time both Lord Milner and Mr. Churchill adopted it, mainly in regard to international matters arising out of the Peace Settlement.

3. So far as I am aware, no exception has been taken to this phrase in other Dominions, and in many cases the converse, viz., "Following from my Prime Minister" has been used in telegraphic messages from Governors-General to the Secretary of State.

4. I have made careful inquiry into the whole matter, and I can assure you that in adopting phrases of the kind to which you refer, my predecessors had no intention whatever of weakening the position or authority of the Governor-General in New Zealand or in other Dominions, to the maintenance of which they attached, as I do myself, great importance.

Board of Trade have had their attention drawn to the provisions of the Mining Ordinances of 1923 of the Territory of New Guinea, and to similar legislation which they understand to have been brought into operation in Papua, and have taken the opportunity of expressing their views on the legislation in the Northern Territory relating to Mineral Oil.

2. The Board of Trade point out that in spite of the right to acquire additional leases, the discoverer has a preferential right to leases over only $1\frac{1}{4}$ square miles, and that outsiders who have incurred none of the risks or cost of prospecting may apply for and possibly obtain leases over all the surrounding areas. Even if a company succeeds in acquiring a number of leases, drilling obligations will presumably be imposed in regard to each area, and this may involve uneconomic working of the leased properties regarded as a whole. It is thought possible that it may be claimed that the system of small areas will induce competition and prevent undue accumulation of areas in one hand. The Board, however, are of the opinion that it will be liable in practice either to fail in this object if the successful prospector is able to secure an indefinite number of leases, or if effective, to prevent him from obtaining an adequate return for his efforts. In general, the Board of Trade take the view that the system of small areas will not conduce either to the discovery of possible oil resources or to their development on an adequate scale.

3. I transmit this expression of the opinion of the Department of His Majesty's Government which deals with such matters in case it may be of assistance to your Ministers.

I have, &c.,
J. H. THOMAS.

Secretariat Note.—In accordance with the statement made in No. 40 in Dominions No. 83, the Northern Territory Mineral Oil and Coal Ordinance was amended by Ordinance No. 8 of 1923 to provide for a reward grant of a lease of 640 acres of land. A similar provision was introduced in New Guinea by Ordinance No. 34 of 1923, and in Papua by Ordinance No. 1 of 1924.

RESOLUTION XIX: NATURALIZATION.

This Conference is of opinion that legislation should be passed throughout the Empire restricting, for a period after the War, so far as in the circumstances of each country may be possible, the naturalization of citizens of present enemy countries, and also the acquisition by them of any form of political rights or of land or mining privileges.

[The Government of the Dominion of Canada abstained from voting; the Government of the Union of South Africa recorded dissent.]

RESOLUTION XX: NATIONALITY AND NATURALIZATION.

The Conference refers to the Resolution X passed by the Imperial War Conference, 1917, recognizing the desirability and importance of securing uniformity of policy and action throughout the Empire with regard to naturalization, and recommends that a special Conference, representative of all parts of the Empire, should be held at the earliest practicable date to examine and report in the light of that Resolution upon any question connected with nationality or naturalization which any Government represented at the special Conference may desire to raise, and upon any suggestions which may be made for the amendment of the existing law.

MY LORD DUKE, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 25th May, 1923.

I HAVE the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to ask that the question of amending the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, so as to permit of the grant of naturalization to persons resident in mandated territories, may be brought before the Imperial Conference.

My Prime Minister informs me that the Permanent Mandates Commission at its session in August, 1922, adopted, for submission to the Council of the League of Nations, a resolution that Mandatory Powers to which "B" and "C" mandated territories had been entrusted might make arrangements, in conformity with their own laws, for the individual acquisition of their nationality by inhabitants of these territories.

The Commonwealth Government is advised that an amendment of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, will be required before Imperial naturalization can be conferred upon residents (not being in the service of the Crown) of mandated territories. The amendment required would seem to be that residence in "B" or "C" mandated territories should count as residence in His Majesty's Dominions, for the purposes of qualifying by residence for naturalization.

* No. 62.

As the Imperial Act was drafted in consultation with the Dominions, the question of amending it is considered by my Ministers to be a suitable matter for joint consideration at the Imperial Conference.

The Commonwealth Government accordingly suggests that this matter be placed on the agenda for the Conference to be held in October next.

2. In view of the terms of Resolution X of the Imperial Conference of 1911, His Majesty's Government cannot but view with disappointment the decision of the New Zealand Government to maintain the existing system of local naturalization and not to adopt the scheme of Imperial nationality contemplated in that Resolution and embodied in the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914.

3. His Majesty's Government share the view of successive Governments since the Act of 1914 was passed that the scheme of Imperial nationality embodied in that Act, and more particularly in Part II thereof, which has already been adopted by Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia and Newfoundland, is in the best interests of the British Empire as a whole. They hope that it may yet be found possible to give full effect to the scheme through the acceptance of Part II by those parts of the Empire which have not hitherto seen their way to adopt it.

STATEMENT to following effect will be made to Parliament to-day by Prime Minister:—

Begins: The question of the development of airships has recently been considered by the Committee of Imperial Defence and the Imperial Shipping Committee. The Committee of Imperial Defence attaches considerable strategic value to airships, whilst the Imperial Shipping Committee considers that it is by means of an airship service that the carriage of mails can most cheaply be expedited to the Far East and Australia. The Government has, therefore, decided to resume the development of airships, and to proceed, if possible, by means of a commercial service rather than by direct State operation. Proposals have been placed before them by my Honourable and Gallant Friend the Member for Uxbridge, under which a bi-weekly service of six large airships to India will eventually be set up. The Government have accepted the scheme in principle subject to the details of the contract being satisfactorily settled by the Treasury. The House of Commons will have an opportunity of considering the scheme when the details have been provisionally agreed. The administration of the scheme in so far as it is a matter of commercial aviation will come under the Air Ministry. Ends.

Please inform Ministers.

—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

SECTION VII (b) IMPERIAL WIRELESS SCHEME

It is agreed that His Majesty's Government should take steps for the erection of the remaining stations for which they are responsible as soon as the stations are designed; that the Governments of Australia, the Union of South Africa, and India should take similar action, so far as necessary, and that the Governments of Canada and New Zealand should also co-operate.

The above scheme was accepted by the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth subject to giving full freedom of action to Australia to decide the method in which Australia will co-operate.

18TH JANUARY. Wireless communication within the British Empire. Your telegram 14th July, 1922,† and my telegram 9th September, 1922.‡

My Ministers desire to point out that there will be comparatively little value in a wireless station in South Africa unless direct communication with Great Britain can be established, and they accordingly hope that His Majesty's Government will soon be able to come to a decision regarding a wireless station in England sufficient in power to operate with the South African Station, the erection of which within eighteen months has been undertaken by the Marconi Company in terms of agreement which was forwarded to you in my despatch 18th October, 1922, No. 540.* As early as possible after the meeting of the Union Parliament on 19th instant, a Bill ratifying that agreement will be introduced. A powerful English Wireless Station capable of working with the South African Station will, therefore, be necessary at an early date. The question of whether the station shall be a Government station or a station operated under a private licence will be, of course, for His Majesty's Government's decision, and my Ministers' wish is only to lay stress on the fact that the matter is one of great urgency.—ARTHUR FREDERICK.

6TH MARCH. Prime Minister made following statement in House of Commons last night:—

Begins: Policy to be adopted with regard to Imperial wireless communications has been recently under review by the Imperial Communications Committee under the Chairmanship of the First Lord of the Admiralty, and the recommendations of that Committee have now been approved by the Government.

In view of developments in the science of wireless telegraphy, and other circumstances which have arisen since the late Government decided upon the policy of a State-operated wireless chain, it is not considered necessary any longer to exclude private enterprise from participation in wireless telegraphy within the Empire.

The Government has, therefore, decided to issue licences for the erection of wireless stations in this country for communication with the Dominions, Colonies and foreign countries, subject to the conditions necessary to secure British control and suitable arrangements for the working of the traffic.

At the same time, the Government has decided that it is necessary in the interests of national security that there should be a wireless station in this country capable of communicating with the Dominions, and owned and operated by the State. A station of this kind will, therefore, be erected as early as possible, and it will be available for commercial traffic as well as for Service messages. Ends.

22ND MARCH. Your telegram of 6th March,* Wireless. Under the agreement recently entered into by the Commonwealth Government, provision made for the erection of high-power reciprocal station in Great Britain within period of two years from 28th March, 1922, date of agreement. Under clause No. 12, that reciprocal station has to provide for a service on the basis of 12 hours per day for 300 days in the year at the rate of 20 words a minute. Further, under clause No. 5, there is a definite maximum charge per word. It is anticipated that the Australian station will be erected and operating approximately 12 months. It is essential that the reciprocal station in Britain should also operate by that date and able to give the service defined above and at the rate(s) set out in the agreement. Ministers would be glad to learn when the Government station contemplated in your telegram of 6th March will be operating and whether the service mentioned can be guaranteed. Most essential that Australia requirements should be fully supplied and that there should be no undue delay to the traffic occasioned by sharing the service with other Dominions. Please cable fully in regard to the above, setting out what you consider the minimum service to Australia will be and whether the rate(s) contemplated in the Commonwealth agreement will be varied.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

AMERY has asked that following personal message from him as Chairman of Imperial Communications Committee may be communicated to your Prime Minister:

Begins: You will have seen that British Government has decided that while no longer excluding private companies from inter-Empire wireless traffic from this country it will still proceed with immediate erection of its own station capable of communicating effectively with every part of the Empire as we consider it preferable from Imperial defence point of view as well as for promotion of real competition not to rely exclusively on a particular commercial organization. Recent statement of New Zealand Postmaster-General suggests possibility that you may also be contemplating erection of Government station of sufficient power to communicate direct with us. Such station would, of course, also be able to communicate with rest of Empire and world, including any station that Pacific Cable Board may decide to erect in Canada to supplement Pacific Cable. I have asked our experts to estimate cost and capacity of such a station in case this may be of use to you in considering the matter, and, if you should decide to construct your own station, we should readily place any special knowledge or experience of our own at your disposal.

Estimate for New Zealand station with four eight-hundred-foot masts, capable of giving outward service averaging eight thousand words of five letters per normal day, is capital cost one hundred and sixty thousand pounds, annual charges fifty-five thousand. Station with eight masts, giving average twelve thousand words, would cost two hundred and eighty thousand pounds initial outlay, and seventy thousand annual charges. Capital cost excludes cost of land and residences, but assumes separate steam plant and might be reduced by utilization local electricity supply or water power. Annual charges cover interest and amortization of capital as well as salaries, wages, fuel, etc. Estimate of words includes service messages and repeats. Additional initial outlay of, say, five thousand would enable four-mast station to be so arranged as to be capable of easy extension to eight-mast station, and this might be best policy, extending when development of traffic warrants.

Am informed that general conditions for wireless in New Zealand favourable. We could get through satisfactorily to you for about sixteen hours per day, Canada likewise. Reception here and in Canada from New Zealand would be not quite so good, particularly in English afternoon, but New Zealand communication with India and South Africa would be best during English afternoon and evening hours, thus enabling convenient adjustment of traffic. Should be grateful for early reply as to your plans. Ends.

Your telegram 22nd March.* Every effort being made to press forward construction of new Government station in this country with all speed, but Postmaster-General doubts whether station of such power, whether constructed by Government or private company, can be completed in less than eighteen months. Orders for masts just placed, but, as time required for construction and erection of masts about twelve months, it seems clear whole station cannot be completed in that time. Postmaster-General considers eighteen months a safe estimate.

Power of station not finally settled, but Postmaster-General is advised that, in any case, it will be capable of maintaining a service with Australia as good as that specified in Commonwealth Agreement with Amalgamated Wireless, and station will be designed with this object in view. It had been contemplated that rates for public traffic with Dominions handled by Government station should be three-quarters of corresponding cable rates, but Postmaster-General would have no objection to adoption of the lower rates, viz., two-thirds of existing cable rates proposed in Commonwealth Agreement provided Commonwealth Government can see their way to reduce existing Commonwealth terminal rate of 5d. per word correspondingly.

As His Majesty's Government are confident that proposed Government station here will fulfil requirements as set out in Clause 12 of Commonwealth Agreement, they would strongly urge Commonwealth Government to use it as the "corresponding station" contemplated in Agreement. If Commonwealth Government agree to this, His Majesty's Government would be prepared to reserve use of station here for such periods as may be required for dealing with Australian traffic, and to carry such traffic with all possible expedition.

Postmaster-General desires to point out that existence of State-owned cable route between this country and Australia would facilitate co-operation between cable and wireless services with a view to obviating delay when conditions for wireless exceptionally unfavourable.—THOMAS.

MR. SIR L. WORTHINGTON-EVANS: The company in question is the Eastern Telegraph Company. It will have the same chances of obtaining a licence as the Marconi Company, so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned. The question of corresponding stations in India or the Dominions would be one for the Government concerned.

LETTER SENT TO [THE RIGHT HONOURABLE W. L. MACKENZIE KING, C.M.G.] [GENERAL THE RIGHT HONOURABLE J. C. SMUTS, K.C., C.H.] ON THE 3RD OCTOBER, 1923, SIGNED BY POSTMASTER-GENERAL.

I AM anxious to explain to you the present situation in regard to the Imperial Wireless Scheme. The question will come up in the course of the Imperial Economic Conference, but for reasons which will appear later I am anxious that you and [General Smuts] [Mr. Mackenzie King] should know without delay how matters stand.

As you are aware, it was the original idea of the late Government that the wireless services between Great Britain and the rest of the Empire (as distinct from those between Great Britain and foreign countries), should be owned and worked by the State; and when the Dominions and India found themselves unable to co-operate on these lines, the Imperial Government still proposed that the stations in this country devoted to Empire communication should be State-owned.

Mr. Bonar Law's Government, however, decided to admit private enterprise to such communication, while at the same time proceeding as quickly as possible with the erection of the super-power Government station, which (in addition to the existing Government station near Oxford) is also destined to take part in Empire services. This new station will be situated near Rugby. It is making good progress, and we hope that it will be completed in about twelve months' time.

Meanwhile we have been in negotiation with the Marconi Company as to the issue to them of licences for both Empire and foreign communication. One of the principal points before us has been the necessity of securing a reasonable load of traffic for the Government station. To carry on a communication service requires, of course, a station at each end of the "line"; and our difficulty has been that, for the present at least, the distant stations will mostly be controlled by the Marconi Company. Hence some sort of arrangement has been necessary with them to ensure that the Government station will have distant stations with which to communicate.

The Company at first proposed that the Empire services should be pooled between themselves and the Government, the Company providing two new super-stations for this purpose and the Government one, and the revenue being divided roughly in the proportion of two to one. After considerable negotiation, a scheme was threshed out, the outline of which I announced to the House of Commons on the 24th July last—see the accompanying extract from my speech. Formal agreements to give effect to this scheme were subsequently drafted; and there was no reason, so far as the Post Office was concerned, why these should not have been signed within a few days, when Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Marconi called to see me on the 17th September, and unexpectedly announced that they could not proceed with the pooling arrangement unless the proposed working of the Empire stations from the General Post Office by Government operators—which the Government had regarded as an essential part of the scheme—was abandoned.

The Company offered as an alternative to give facilities at their distant stations for communication with the Government stations here, with a view to indiscriminate competition between the Government service and that of the Company. This does not seem to us to be a very practicable proposition. If a station controlled by the Company in (say) [Canada] [South Africa] had to listen out for signals from two stations in this country, and to transmit to these two stations, the arrangement would be a wasteful one; and, moreover, the [Canadian] [South African] station, being financially interested to a greater extent in communication with the Marconi station here than in communication with the Government station, would be under a constant temptation to give preferential service to the former.

The arrangement which commends itself to us, and which we think is the best possible in the circumstances, is a "regional" allocation of traffic, under which the Government stations here would undertake the duty of communication with certain Dominions, while the Company would be licensed to carry on communication with others.

We at first proposed that the new Government station should communicate with India; but the Company were very much averse from this, as they see great financial possibilities in the Indian traffic. We then proposed that the Government stations should communicate with Canada and South Africa; and the present position is that we have definitely offered a licence to the Company for communication with any station outside Europe with which they may make arrangements in that regard, except stations in Canada and South Africa. The Government would undertake communication with Canada and South Africa; and would reserve the right to carry on communication with any stations elsewhere in the Empire.

There are additional reasons which have actuated us in making this proposal. First, the value of the traffic with Canada and South Africa together is estimated roughly to be about one-half of that with India and Australia together, so that (at the outset at least) each party will benefit in the same ratio as under the proposed pool. Secondly, as regards Canada, we shall be able to work the wireless service in conjunction with the Imperial Cable Service, in such a way that one can help the other in case of need; while as regards South Africa, we have the assurance of the Union Government that they are only concerned that a suitable station in Great Britain—whether privately-owned or State-owned—shall be available for communication with the South African station as soon as the latter is ready.

I should be glad to know that our use of our licensing powers in the manner proposed will not be distasteful to your Government. I imagine that what [Canada] [South Africa] is mainly concerned about is that the wireless service with this country should be efficient and that the charges should be reasonably low. I can assure you that this is entirely in accordance with our own intentions. As above mentioned, our new station is making good progress, and so far as I can judge it will be completed well in advance of the new stations of the Marconi Company. It will have a power of 1,000 kilowatts, will embody the latest principles, and will, I am confident, be capable of giving a service second to none in the world.

Enclosure in No. 86.

EXTRACT FROM POSTMASTER-GENERAL'S SPEECH IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS, ON THE POST OFFICE ESTIMATES, 24TH JULY, 1923. (COL. 268.)

"THE wireless telegraph services of the British Empire are to be conducted through stations provided by the Company and by the Government, respectively, in agreed proportions, the Company at the outset to provide two stations and the Government one station, apart from the existing stations at Leaffield and Carnarvon. The stations are to be maintained at the cost of the parties providing them. The revenue of the stations is to be pooled and divided between the Companies and the Government in agreed proportions, based upon the effective power of the stations contributed by each. The whole of the services are to be worked from the General Post Office by Government operators, and a proportionate part of the cost, including overhead charges, is to be charged against the Company. The unrouted traffic is to be allocated as between the cables and the wireless on the principle of the least delay at the transmitting point. The rates to be charged to the public are to be settled by mutual agreement. Whenever possible, the rates are to be lower than the cable rates. The Government has to have the power to admit other parties to the pooling arrangement provided that it is satisfied that they are able to provide a station of substantially equal efficiency, and the Government retains its right to license other parties to conduct wireless services without admitting them to the pool. The Government is to have the power of expropriation at specified intervals on terms to be agreed probably at the end of the first ten years, and subsequently at suitable periods."

I AM directed by the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury to forward, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, the enclosed copy of a Report from the General Post Office with regard to the payment to the Newfoundland Government of a tax in respect of the landing at Harbour Grace of one of the Imperial Cables.

My Lords understand that the question of the policy to be followed, in regard to claiming Crown Exemption from taxation in respect of its commercial activities, is to be discussed at the forthcoming Imperial Conference. In these circumstances the Duke of Devonshire will no doubt agree that a decision on this case should if possible be deferred for the time being, and they will be glad if His Grace will cause such steps as he may consider necessary or desirable to be taken vis-à-vis the Newfoundland Government, with a view to keeping the question open until the contemplated general agreement has been achieved.

With reference to the last paragraph of the Postmaster-General's report, I am to request that the Secretary of State, if he sees no objection, will cause representations to be made to the Newfoundland Government with a view to the waiver of the Customs due in question.

I am, &c.,
G. L. BARSTOW.

Enclosure in No. 88.

SIR,

General Post Office, London, E.C.1, 6th April, 1923.

I AM directed by the Postmaster-General to state, for the information of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury, that a question has arisen with regard to the payment to the Newfoundland Government of a tax in respect of the landing at Harbour Grace of one of the Imperial Cables.

The facts are as follows:—

Under the Newfoundland Telegraph Companies (Taxation) Acts of the 15th of June, 1905, and the 16th of May, 1918, a tax is payable to the Newfoundland Government in respect of all telegraphic cables landed in the Colony. As Their Lordships are aware, the Post Office bought a cable landing at Harbour Grace from the Direct United States Cable Company on the 5th of November, 1920. The cable was not at first worked by this Department, but was leased to the Western Union Cable Company until the 30th of June, 1922, since when the cable has been controlled and worked by the Post Office. The Government of Newfoundland have apparently made unsuccessful attempts to collect the tax in respect of the cable in question from the Direct United States Cable Company and from the Western Union Cable Company, and have now demanded payment of it from the Post Office as from the 1st of July, 1920. The amount in question is 8,000 dollars a year.

The Solicitor to the Post Office has advised that the Postmaster-General, as an officer of the Crown, is not bound by the Acts in question, the general principle that Statutes do not bind the Crown, unless by express words, being applicable to Colonial Legislation. The only question, therefore, seems to be whether or not ex gratia payment should nevertheless be made; and on this question the Postmaster-General will be glad to receive Their Lordships' decision. It will of course be understood that no services are rendered by the Newfoundland Government in return for the payment, if any be made.

I am to explain that the position of the Newfoundland Government with regard to the Imperial Cables was discussed at an interview with the Newfoundland Premier, Sir Richard Squires, by Mr. Pike Pease (then Assistant Postmaster-General) in September last, when Sir Richard Squires pressed the claim for payment of the tax, emphasizing the point that the Imperial Cables are worked as ordinary commercial undertakings in competition with the routes of the American Cable Companies, and that if his Government waived the tax in the case of the Imperial Cable the Companies also might reasonably claim exemption.

The Newfoundland Government recently entered into an Agreement with the Commercial Cable Company for a period of 15 years, under which they agreed to hand to that Company all unrouted traffic handed in at Newfoundland Post Offices for Great Britain and countries beyond. This question was discussed with Sir Richard Squires, at the interview in question, when he said that the Newfoundland Government must keep faith with the Company; but that if (as is possible) this Department were able in connexion with the renewal of the Company's landing rights and other facilities in this country at the end of 1924, or in some other connexion, to induce them to agree to a modification of their rights under the Agreement with the Newfoundland Government, the latter Government would be willing to hand over a substantial part of the traffic in question to the Imperial route.

I am to add that Customs dues have had to be paid by this Department on stores sent to Newfoundland for the maintenance of its cable. When similar claims were made at Halifax the Colonial Office was good enough, at the Postmaster-General's request, to make representations to the Canadian Government which resulted in the waiver of the charges, and the Postmaster-General will be glad to know whether Their Lordships would wish similar representations to be made to the Newfoundland Government. On this point, also, as well as on the question of unrouted traffic, Sir Richard Squires held out hopes of a concession in favour of the Post Office.

I am, &c.,
G. E. P. MURRAY.

Treasury.

SIR,

Downing Street, 20th June, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request you to bring to the notice of your Ministers a question which, as I am informed by the Postmaster-General, has arisen in connexion with a claim for the payment by him to the Newfoundland Government of a tax in respect of the landing at Harbour Grace of one of the Imperial Cables operated by the General Post Office on behalf of His Majesty's Government.

2. The cable in question was bought by the General Post Office in November, 1920, from the Direct United States Cable Company, and was leased to the Western Union Cable Company until the 30th of June, 1922. Since that date it has been controlled and worked by the General Post Office. It is understood that a claim is now made by the Newfoundland Government under the provisions of the Newfoundland Telegraph Companies (Taxation) Acts of 1905 and 1918, for payment by the Postmaster-General of tax at the rate of eight thousand dollars a year as from the 1st of July, 1920, in respect of the landing of this cable.

3. Leaving on one side any questions which may arise out of the ownership of the cable between the 1st of July and the 5th of November, 1920, and the fact that up to the 30th of June, 1922, the cable was leased to a Commercial Company, it appears to His Majesty's Government that this claim conflicts with the general principle that Statutes do not bind the Crown unless by express words. Your Ministers will, however, be aware that the question of the policy to be followed in regard to the taxation of State-owned or controlled economic enterprises, is to form one of the subjects for discussion at the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference (see in this connexion my predecessor's Confidential despatch Dominions No. 180 of the 7th of June, 1922,* and my telegram of the 11th of June†), and in the circumstances I would suggest, for your Ministers' consideration, that it would be desirable for the particular question of the payment of this claim to be kept open until a decision has been reached on the question of general policy.

4. The Postmaster-General further informs me that Customs dues have up to the present been levied by the Newfoundland Government on Stores sent to Newfoundland for the maintenance of this cable, and that this matter was discussed semi-officially with your Prime Minister when he was in this country in September last. Unless your Ministers would prefer to postpone this question also until after discussion has taken place at the Economic Conference, I would ask them to consider the possibility of granting waiver of Customs charges on Stores sent to Newfoundland for the maintenance and working of the Imperial Cable Station at Harbour Grace. I may add in this connexion that a similar concession has been made by the Canadian Government in respect of Stores, etc., sent to the Imperial Cable Station at Halifax.

(Received in Colonial Office, 21st December, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 91.]

SIR, General Post Office, London, E.C.1, 10th December, 1923.
I AM directed by the Postmaster-General to refer to the letter from this Office dated the 6th April last,‡ and the Treasury communication of the 7th May,§ with regard to a claim by the Government of Newfoundland for payment by this Department of a tax in respect of the landing at Harbour Grace of one of the Imperial Cables.

I am to state, for the information of the Lords Commissioners, that the Prime Minister of Newfoundland is pressing for a settlement of this claim. As Their Lordships are aware, the position is affected by the relative resolution passed by the Imperial Economic Conference; but it is not clear precisely how the agreement not to make the proposed legislation retrospective bears on the claim in question which is in respect of the period commencing 1st July, 1920, and the Postmaster-General would be glad to receive Their Lordships' instructions as to the answer to be given to the Newfoundland Government.

I am, &c.,
G. E. P. MURRAY.

TREASURY to GENERAL POST OFFICE.

(Received in Colonial Office, 21st December, 1923.)

SIR, Treasury Chambers, 21st December, 1923.
I HAVE laid before the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury your Report of 6th April‡ and 10th instant|| relative to a claim by the Government of Newfoundland for payment of a tax in respect of the landing at Harbour Grace of one of the Imperial Cables.

Their Lordships do not regard the understanding reached at the Imperial Economic Conference, that the proposed legislation regarding the taxation of State commercial enterprises will not be applied retrospectively, as having any direct bearing on the present claim, and I am to convey to you their authority to make an ex gratia payment to the Newfoundland Government of landing tax as claimed in respect of the period from 1st July, 1922, when you assumed operating control of the cable.

My Lords are not satisfied that a claim lies against your Department for tax in respect of the period 1st July, 1920,—5th November, 1920, when the cable was owned by the Direct United States Cable Company, or in respect of the period 5th November, 1920,—1st July, 1922, when it was leased by the Western Union Cable Company. A decision in regard to the latter period would appear to depend on the terms of the relevant lease.

I am, &c.,
G. L. BARSTOW.

MY LORD, Downing Street, 6th March, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a Memorandum prepared in the Admiralty regarding the future of the Naval Wireless Telegraph Station at St. John's, Newfoundland.

2. For the reasons explained in the first three paragraphs of the Memorandum, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty are anxious that the question of the future of the St. John's Station should be settled in the very near future, and, pending the reply of the Newfoundland Government, to whom a copy of the Memorandum has been forwarded, their Lordships would be grateful to learn, at your Ministers' early convenience, whether, in the event of the St. John's Station being dismantled, the proposed Wireless Telegraph Station at Geiser's Hill, Nova Scotia, would, in time of war or emergency, be capable of carrying out the work summarized in the sixth paragraph of the Memorandum, and if so, whether arrangements could be made for it to become available for this purpose.

I have, &c.,
J. H. THOMAS.

Enclosure in No. 92.

(M. 01635.)

FUTURE OF NAVAL WIRELESS TELEGRAPH STATION AT ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND.

THIS station is at present in the charge of a Care and Maintenance Party. A portion of the Care and Maintenance Party is now due for relief, and the Admiralty do not wish to incur the expense of sending out the reliefs if the station is not going to be further required.

2. Moreover, the plant on the station is nearly obsolete, and if the station is to be of use in time of war it must at some near date be modernised.

3. The station is not a necessity to the Admiralty in time of peace, since sufficient facilities are provided on the station by commercial shore Wireless Telegraph Stations. The Admiralty therefore would not be justified in incurring the expense of keeping the station open in time of peace.

4. The Government of Newfoundland have been asked whether they are prepared to take the station over and bring it up to date, but no reply has been received.

5. If the reply of the Newfoundland Government were in the negative the Admiralty need for the station in time of war or emergency would depend upon whether a suitable alternative station was available in Canada.

6. The Admiralty need a station in these waters in war or emergency to:—

(a) Work with His Majesty's Ships on waves between 1,850 and 3,400 metres at ranges up to 2,000 miles.

- (b) Work with armed merchant cruisers (escort) on similar waves at similar ranges.
- (c) Carry out point to point work with Bermuda, on any convenient wave, in the event of breakdown, overload, or cutting of the Direct West India Cable.
- (d) Transmit by "I" (intercept) method service to ships, in conjunction with Bermuda.

The number of hours per day devoted to such services would depend on the theatre of war, and would vary from time to time. Under the worst conditions, a full time service might be required for working with the Navy.

7. Inquiries made of the Director of Naval Service of Canada when in this country indicated that the proposed station in Nova Scotia (which, it is understood, is to be erected at Geiser's Hill) could carry out these duties.

8. If, therefore, the Canadian Government can confirm that the Geiser's Hill Station will be able to carry out these duties and can undertake that it will be available for the purpose, the Admiralty would have no further need for the station at St. John's in time of war. In the case, therefore, of the Newfoundland Government not requiring St. John's Station, the Admiralty would, as soon as Geiser's Hill Station is ready, dismantle the station at St. John's, withdrawing the Care and Maintenance Party, and dispose of the buildings, mast and plant.

9. The Admiralty, therefore, desire from the Newfoundland Government a reply to the inquiry addressed to them as to whether they wish to take over the St. John's Wireless Telegraph Station. The Admiralty also desire from the Canadian Government information as to whether the Geiser's Hill Wireless Telegraph Station would in time of war or emergency be capable of and available to carry out the work summarized in paragraph 6 above.

2. For the reasons explained in the first three paragraphs of the Memorandum, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty are anxious that this question should be settled in the very near future, and I should therefore be grateful to be informed at the earliest possible date whether your Ministers desire that the station should be transferred to the Newfoundland Government on the conditions laid down in Mr. Churchill's despatch No. 27 of the 8th of February, 1922.

3. A copy of the enclosed Memorandum is being sent to the Governor-General of Canada with a request for the observations of the Canadian Government on the suggestions regarding the Wireless Station at Geiser's Hill, Nova Scotia.

Enclosure in No. 94.

FROM DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Ottawa, 9th April, 1924.

WITH reference to the Confidential despatch to His Excellency from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated 6th March, 1924, in regard to the inquiry of the Admiralty whether, in the event of the St. John's Naval Wireless Telegraph Station being dismantled, the proposed station at Geiser's Hill would be capable of carrying out certain indicated work, I have the honour to state that the matter has been considered in the Department of National Defence, and of Marine and Fisheries.

The Department of National Defence explains that all Wireless Telegraph Shore Stations in Canada are operated under an agreement whereby the Canadian Government may assume control in time of emergency, and it is stated that the station at Geiser's Hill will, therefore, when completed, be able to carry out the duties enumerated in the Admiralty memorandum. A report,* however, is submitted, a copy of which is enclosed, showing that no work on the transatlantic leg has been commenced, so that it is doubtful when the station will be in a position to commence working with Great Britain or Bermuda. It is further suggested that the Marconi Company has a station in operation at Louisburg, which could fulfil Admiralty requirements, and which could be taken over by the Government of Canada in time of emergency.

The proposal to use the radio station which the British United Press are licensed to install and operate at Geiser's Hill does not commend itself to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, which points out that this licence has now been issued for a year, and that little or no progress has been made with the erection of the station. Existing plans apparently contemplate an equipment of only three masts, each 80 feet high, and a 10 k.w. tube transmitter. It is suggested as an alternative proposal that there are now in operation by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada at Glace Bay, Cape Breton Island, four transmitters, as follows:—

1. "GB" tube, 7,600 metres, 50 k.w. transatlantic.
2. "DO" tube, 3,000 metres, 15 k.w. Inter-station Montreal.
3. "VAS" (No. 1) tube, 2,200-2,800 metres, 6 k.w. Long-distance ships.
4. "VAS" (No. 2) tube, 2,200-2,800 metres, 10 k.w. Long-distance ships.

Under Canadian regulations the Dominion Government has power to take over and use any radio stations in time of emergency, subject to payment of reasonable compensation. All the above stations are in first-class working order and have trained personnel. The range of "VAS" (No. 2) is approximately 1,500 miles, and that of "DO" approximately 2,000 miles, over water. The k.w. capacity mentioned above is in-pot to the tube plates. The antennas are supported on standard Marconi masts, about 400 feet in height. It is intimated that, if the Admiralty is of opinion that one of these stations might meet with its requirements, the Department of Marine and Fisheries would be pleased to discuss the question with the licensees, the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of Canada, Limited, and see what arrangements could be made.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to communicate the views of these two Departments as above expressed to the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

I have, &c.,

W. H. WALKER,

'Acting Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Stations using call signs DO, VAS (No. 1) and VAS (No. 2) seem best suited for Admiralty requirements. Lords Commissioners of Admiralty inquire whether Canadian Government would be willing to accept responsibility for taking over, operating and using appropriate Glace Bay Stations in time of war or emergency for the purposes stated in Admiralty memorandum enclosed in my despatch 6th March, Confidential,† including responsibility for payment of any compensation which may prove necessary. If such assurance can be given, provided that Newfoundland Government do not express wish to take over St. John's Station, Admiralty propose to take steps for dismantling latter. THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 133.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 6th April, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 381 of the 4th of October* regarding the validity of marriages contracted between Australians and foreigners, and to request you to inform your Ministers that the question of the validity of marriages between British subjects and foreigners has on many occasions in the past formed the subject of consideration by His Majesty's Government.

2. As regards such marriages contracted in foreign countries according to the lex loci, it has long since been found necessary, in order to satisfy the requirements of foreign marriage laws, to authorize His Majesty's consular officers to issue certificates in individual cases, varying from a statement that the publication of banns in this country is not required in the case of such marriages, to statements that the parties, having gone through the antecedent formalities required by law for enabling them to be married at His Majesty's consulate under the provisions of the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892, there is no obstacle to the celebration of their marriage. Certificates according to the particular requirements of the foreign law concerned have, in this way, for a good many years past, been issued by His Majesty's consular officers in France, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Hungary and Sweden. On the other hand, in the case of marriages contracted in this country the French Government have since 1904 authorized French consular officers in this country to issue certificates to French citizens marrying British subjects to the effect that the formalities of French law have been complied with: while in the case of Belgium, by an agreement of November, 1888, a similar certificate is issued by the Belgian Legation.

3. Under the provisions of the Foreign Marriage Act, 1892, and of the Foreign Marriages Order in Council, 1913, His Majesty's consular officers are in many cases empowered to solemnize marriages between parties of whom one is a British subject. This Act and Order in Council form the subject of Chapter XXX of the Consular Instructions. In this connexion reference is invited to Viscount Milner's despatch Dominions No. 506 of the 17th of December, 1920,† and connected correspondence, as to officers who are empowered to issue the certificates required by Article 10 of the Foreign Marriages Order in Council, 1913. I enclose a copy of a printed memorandum, which, while summarizing in a convenient form the formalities to be observed under the Act and Order in Council, exhibits also information which has been compiled as regards foreign lex loci marriages and marriages between British subjects and various classes of foreigners. Copies of this memorandum were forwarded in the late Viscount Harcourt's despatch No. 468 of the 30th of July, 1914.‡

4. On 29th November, 1906, "The Marriage with Foreigners Act, 1906" (6 Edward VII, chapter 40) was passed. This Act in section 1 provides that any British subject desiring to be married in a foreign country to a foreigner according to the law of that country may give notice to the Registrar, or, if abroad, to the marriage officer (i.e., His Majesty's consular officer) and apply for a certificate that after proper notices have been given no legal impediment to the marriage has been shown to exist. In section 2, as regards marriages in the United Kingdom, it is provided that, where arrangements have been made with a foreign country for the issue by the proper officers of that country of certificates that after proper notices have been given no impediment according to the law of that country has been shown to exist, His Majesty may by Order in Council require the production of such certificate before the marriage can be solemnized. Section 3 provides for the issue of an Order in Council making general regulations prescribing the forms to be used, etc.

* No. 148 in Dominions No. 83.

5. After the passing of this Act a considerable correspondence, which extended over several years, took place with foreign governments with a view to ascertaining the possibility of giving effect, in the case both of sections 1 and 2 of the Act, to the arrangements contemplated. While it was found that in the case of some countries a certificate of the nature contemplated by section 1 was unnecessary, and that, in the case of some, no arrangements of the nature contemplated by section 2 were possible, the correspondence showed that in the case of a number of foreign countries such arrangements were possible, though the requirements of the various foreign laws created difficulties as to the forms of certificates which would be required. Concurrently with this correspondence His Majesty's Representatives abroad were instructed to obtain and communicate to the Foreign Office the texts of the marriage laws of foreign countries, with a view to a more complete study of the question, and these laws as received were translated, and have been published in Parliamentary Paper Miscellaneous No. 11, 1911 (Cd. 5993) of which a copy is enclosed.

6. As the outcome of the correspondence referred to above, the preparation of the form of certificate to be given by the Registrar (and mutatis mutandis by His Majesty's consular officers) under section 1 of the Act of 1906 was commenced, but various difficulties have so far delayed its completion. When this has been done it will be possible again to approach foreign governments in the matter and to endeavour to bring about the further arrangements contemplated under section 2 of the Act.

7. It is noted that Ministers suggest that the matter might be discussed at an Imperial Conference, and a copy of the correspondence is accordingly being sent to the other Dominions and to the Secretary of State for India.

SIR,

Downing Street, 25th July, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, copies of the final Report,† dated the 20th April, 1922, of the Committee which was appointed in May, 1921, to consider questions arising in connexion with the liability of Dominion and Foreign Governments to United Kingdom taxation.

2. The subject of this Report is, as your Ministers will be aware, on the Agenda for the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference, but they will no doubt be glad of an opportunity of considering the recommendations of the Committee beforehand; and His Majesty's Government, for their part, would welcome an expression of your Ministers' views before the meeting of the Conference.

3. It will be observed that the Report has not yet been published, and is therefore still confidential.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

26th June, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to inform you, in connexion with the Secretary of State's Confidential despatch No. 180 of the 7th June, 1922, that consideration has been given to questions arising from a report furnished by the Colwyn Committee appointed to consider the subject of liability of Dominion and foreign Governments to United Kingdom taxation.

These questions, it is thought, involve certain considerations of policy, but as regards the legal aspect of the matter, your Ministers desire to rest upon the opinion of the 15th June, 1921, expressed by eminent law officers of the United Kingdom, which was to the effect that Dominion property in Great Britain, except where it is in the occupation of private individuals as tenants, and Dominion Government trading agencies, in respect of their profits there, are exempt from British Income Tax or British Excess Profits Duty.

Your Ministers very much regret the delay which has occurred in acquainting you with the views of the Government upon this question.

I have, &c.,

Premier.

14TH SEPTEMBER. Your telegram of 11th June* regarding recommendation(s) in the final Colwyn Committee Report. Canadian Ministers approve principle(s) outlined in the summary of the recommendation(s) in Article No. 114, pages 46 and 47 of the final Report. They assume that any agreement arrived at will bind not only the Dominions but also reciprocally bind the United Kingdom. My Ministers call attention to the fact that several provinces of Canada may be interested in the matter in their own right, and the Canadian Government could not bind the provinces either as to tax(es) imposed by the provinces or tax(es) to which it might be sought to render them liable. It is desirable that attention be directed to the fact that the Canadian National Railway and the Canadian Government Merchant Marine while nominally taking the form of Corporations are actually Government enterprises, inasmuch as entire Stock of Companies is owned by Canadian Government.—BYNG.

Memorandum for His Excellency the Lieutenant-Governor.

THE Premier presents his duty to the Lieutenant-Governor and, with reference to Dominions despatch No. 180 of the 7th June, 1922,* begs to inform His Excellency that Ministers agree generally with the recommendations of the Colwyn Committee on the question of the liability of Dominion and Foreign Governments to United Kingdom taxation, but they point out that in the case of the Australian States the relations of the States with one another and with the Commonwealth will have to be specially provided for.

In view of the desire of the Secretary of State for the Colonies for an early reply, as indicated in his telegram of January last, the Premier suggests that the views expressed above be transmitted to the Colonial Office by cable.

Copies of a memorandum‡ which has been prepared under the direction of the Attorney-General are attached hereto for His Excellency's information. This memorandum indicates some of the difficulties alluded to above, and will no doubt be of interest to the authorities of the Colonial Office.

Mr. Lawson therefore recommends that copies be transmitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies when the cablegram suggested above is being confirmed.

In connexion with this matter, the Premier wishes to add that a request was received some time ago from the Consul-General for the United States, that Victorian taxation should not be levied on the earnings in Victoria of vessels belonging to the United States Shipping Board. The Consul-General was informed that the request would receive consideration, but, at the same time, it was intimated to him that the matter was one which concerned the Imperial Government as well as this State.

* No. 162 in Dominions No. 83. † No. 112. ‡ Not printed.

In view of the recommendations contained in the Colwyn Committee's Report and of the reference to this subject made in Dominions despatch No. 166 of the 26th April, 1921,* no decision has yet been made by Ministers, and it is proposed to await the outcome of the consideration of the Report referred to before committing the Victorian Government in any way. In the meantime Ministers would be glad to have the benefit of any observations which the Secretary of State for the Colonies may wish to offer regarding this specific application.

Premier.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 19th July, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Sir W. H. Irvine's despatch No. 27 of the 17th of October last,† and to request you to convey to your Ministers an expression of my thanks for the memorandum forwarded therein on the subject of the liability to United Kingdom taxation of Dominion and Foreign Governments, which has been read with much interest.

2. The questions raised were discussed at the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, and I have already addressed you on the subject of the resolution of the Conference in regard to Shipping Taxation in my despatch Dominions No. 297 of the 30th of June.‡ I hope shortly to be in a position to send a further communication in regard to the resolution of the Conference on the subject of Immunity of State Enterprises. In the meantime, on the facts before them as to the status of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, His Majesty's Government would, for their part, feel debarred at present by International Law from pressing a claim for tax in respect of any profits made by the Corporation, if the Corporation took the plea of sovereign privilege.

No. 115.

THE PACIFIC CABLE BOARD TO THE COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 12th January, 1923.)

SIR,

Queen Anne's Chambers, S.W.1., 11th January, 1923.

I AM directed by the Pacific Cable Board to refer to the Chairman's letter dated 21st May, 1920,* on the subject of proposals for duplicating the Board's Cables, and to transmit, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, copies of further memoranda,† dealing with the project for the laying of a direct cable between Auckland (New Zealand) and Suva (Fiji), and of one between Sydney (New South Wales) and Southport (Queensland). The memoranda also explain the circumstances which have led the Board to consider it expedient to defer measures for providing additional channels of communication north of Fiji.

The approval of each of the Partner Governments has been obtained to the laying of a direct cable between Auckland and Suva and between Sydney and Southport, and contracts for the manufacture and laying of such cables have been placed.

The date specified for the completion of manufacture and laying of both cables is 14th August, 1923.

The new Auckland-Suva Cable will be brought to land at Suva Point and will be trenched into the Station.

The Board were required to take out a landing licence in respect of the landing at Suva in 1902 of the Fanning Island and Norfolk Island Cables, and they assume that there will be necessity for a new licence in respect of the additional cable which they now propose to land at Suva.

If a new licence is necessary, I am directed by the Board to request that the Fiji Government may be moved to grant it, and to enquire whether the detailed information required for the purpose should be furnished to you or direct to the Governor of Fiji.

I am, &c.,

FRED. J. ADYE,
Secretary.

MEMORANDUM ON THE DUPLICATION SCHEME.

1. A Memorandum, dated 29th April, 1920,‡ giving the views of the Pacific Cable Board on the duplication of the Pacific Cable, was communicated to the contributing Governments. A copy of this Memorandum is attached.

The New Zealand Government replied on 12th August, 1920, and the Canadian Government on 8th February, 1921,§ expressing their concurrence in the proposals contained in the Memorandum. The Commonwealth Government replied on 19th December, 1921,|| agreeing to the proposal for duplication, but leaving the question of route to be settled by the Representatives in London.

2. Since April, 1920, the conditions have changed in several respects:—

(i.) The traffic passing over the Pacific Cable has been maintained at an unexpectedly high level. The maximum reached during the war period was 9,084,000 paying words, in 1919-20, and it was expected that there would be a rapid fall in the number. There has, in fact, been a considerable increase, notwithstanding the depression of trade. The traffic for the first quarter of the current year was at the rate of about 9,700,000 words per annum, and in a recent week it was at the rate of over 11,000,000 words per annum. This means that the cable is working at its fullest capacity, and if a revival of trade brings any further growth of traffic it will be impossible to deal with it. This makes an increase in the capacity of the Pacific system more urgent than it was in 1920.

(ii.) On the other hand, there are strong reasons against immediate action for duplicating the long Fanning-Bamfield section. A new method of "continuous loading" has been invented which promises to increase very greatly the speed of long cables. An order has been given by the Western Union Company for the manufacture of a considerable length of cable on the new system, and if this is found to attain in practice the results indicated by laboratory experiments it will completely alter the conditions of the problem.

It is inadvisable, therefore, to proceed with the duplication of the Fanning-Bamfield cable until the value of this new invention is more clearly known.

For cables of more moderate length (up to, say, 1,500 miles) the new invention is of less importance.

(iii.) Wireless telegraphy has made great advances in the last few years. The development of "valve" transmission and reception has made it possible to use wireless over greater distances, and with increased speed and certainty. It is still subject to disturbances which cannot as yet be controlled, and there is probably no service over any considerable distance which works uninterruptedly throughout the twenty-four hours. But its use for long distance commercial services is rapidly increasing.

Australia has taken steps for establishing a high-power station. Canada is considering what steps to take, and Canadian representatives are shortly coming to London to discuss the question.

It is clearly worth examining whether wireless telegraphy ought to be adopted as an auxiliary to the Pacific Cable.

(iv.) When the Memorandum of 1920 was prepared, the traffic exchanged with the United States was about one-third of the total traffic passing over the cable. The proportion has now fallen to one-fifth, mainly owing to the large increase in the week-end traffic with the United Kingdom. This alters the conditions of the problem as regards the suggested connexion via Honolulu.

3. A note by the Manager in the Pacific is attached, in which he strongly urges that the Board should proceed at once to lay the Auckland-Suva and Sydney-Southport sections for the purpose of obtaining security against complete interruption of the cable at Norfolk Island (which has been shown by experience to be the weakest spot), and for giving greater elasticity in the disposal of traffic for New Zealand and Australia.

The carrying out of this duplication is in accordance with the general approval of the contributory Governments and I recommend that steps be taken at once to obtain their formal approval in accordance with the Act of 1911, and to invite tenders.

A report by the Consulting Engineers is attached, from which it appears that they estimate the cost of these two cables (including laying) at £399,000. On this basis the total cost (including a new office building at Suva) is estimated by Mr. Milward at £410,000.

4. As regards the Northern sections, I suggest that no steps for cable duplication be taken this moment, and that the question of wireless communication be considered.

For this purpose it is essential to have accurate information as to the conditions affecting wireless reception in Vancouver Island, Fanning and Fiji. Experimental receiving stations can be erected at these places at very small cost, and observations can be taken of messages received from San Francisco, Australia, the Philippines and other distant stations over a sufficient period to show what may be expected as regards working conditions.

I recommend that steps be taken at once to have these experimental tests made, and that the question of wireless communication be discussed with the Canadian representatives during their visit.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 1st February, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of the Importation of Animals Act, 1922 (13 George V. Chapter 5) which was introduced into Parliament last session as the result of Resolutions passed in the House of Lords and House of Commons in July, 1922, regarding the importation of Canadian cattle, and of a Conference with Canadian Ministers held in London in October.

2. It was agreed at the Conference with Canadian Ministers that the legislation dealing with this matter ought to be capable of adaptation to the requirements of other parts of the Empire and the Bill* (of which I enclose a copy) when introduced into the House of Commons, contained a clause (Clause IV) which was designed to render possible the importation of animals from other British Dominions (as defined in Clause 12) subject to the Regulations necessary to meet the varying conditions.

3. When, however, the Bill reached the Committee stage in the House of Commons objections were raised to Clause IV, and ultimately it was withdrawn. The question whether it would be possible to re-introduce the Clause was carefully examined by His Majesty's Government, but, owing to the shortness of the Session, it was deemed advisable not to press for its reinsertion.

4. Your Ministers will, however, observe from the enclosed extract† from my speech during the Second Reading of the Bill in the House of Lords that, after expressing my regret for the deletion of Clause IV in the House of Commons, I stated that I was fully prepared to give an undertaking that, if the point as to the removal of the restrictions regarding the importation of cattle from the Dominions other than Canada were raised at the next Imperial Conference, and a mutually satisfactory arrangement reached, His Majesty's Government would bring in legislation to give effect to that arrangement.

Provision was made accordingly in Act of last year.

Minister of Agriculture has been engaged in preparing draft of order in consultation with Duncan Marshall, but we find that there is strong opposition from the agricultural interests both in Parliament and outside to the terms of any Order which would admit any but cattle registered as pure-bred by the Canadian National Record Board and capable of passing the test for abortion; and this is the utmost which we could hope to carry through the House of Commons and House of Lords. If an Order on these lines would not be satisfactory to your Prime Minister and his colleagues, we fear that it would be necessary to postpone whole matter for consideration at Imperial Economic Conference. Enclosure in No. 123.

Prime Minister's Office, Wellington,
10th April, 1923.

Memorandum for His Excellency the Governor-General.

THE Prime Minister presents his compliments and begs to acknowledge receipt from His Excellency of the despatch of 1st February from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for the Colonies, with which copies of the Importation of Animals Act, 1922, are enclosed.

It is noted with the utmost regret that a clause in the Bill designed to permit the importation of animals from other British Dominions than Canada was struck out in Parliament, in spite of the decision arrived at by the conference between members of His Majesty's late Government and Canadian Ministers, as quoted by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State in the House of Lords. His Excellency's Ministers altogether fail to understand why New Zealand animals should not be permitted to be imported into Great Britain under proper and reasonable safeguards. New Zealand is remarkably free from serious animal disease, and, consequent upon its distance from Great Britain, there could be no possibility of store cattle being shipped, therefore the only animals which would be sent to Great Britain if importation were allowed would be breeding stock of high quality.

The Prime Minister would respectfully beg of His Excellency to make further representations to His Majesty's Government on this point, and particularly to emphasize the fact that while New Zealand imports the great bulk of her pure-bred breeding stock from Great Britain, it seems unreasonable that New Zealand breeders should be debarred from the opportunity of shipping animals to Great Britain at any time when such shipment is desired.

It is noted with satisfaction that the Right Hon. the Secretary of State is fully prepared to give an undertaking that if the point as to the removal of restrictions on the importation of cattle from Dominions other than Canada is raised at the next Imperial Conference and a mutually satisfactory arrangement reached. His Majesty's Government will bring in legislation to give effect to that resolution. Nevertheless, having regard to the present-day position, His Excellency's Ministers would greatly appreciate the present submission to His Majesty's Government of the expressions of opinion embodied in this memorandum.

Prime Minister.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 93 of the 11th of April‡ transmitting a copy of a memorandum by your Prime Minister relative to the provisions of the Importation of Animals Act, 1922.

2. His Majesty's Government have noted the views expressed in the Prime Minister's memorandum and will give the most careful consideration to them. It will, however, be appreciated that, under present conditions, the Minister of Agriculture is bound by the terms of the existing enactments, and is in a position to sanction the importation of stock other than for immediate slaughter only where he is satisfied that the animals are destined for exhibition or for other exceptional purposes. The conditions under which alone applications for the admission of animals in such circumstances can be considered under section 27 of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, are set out in the accompanying memorandum. I would invite attention particularly to paragraph 4 of this memorandum.

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 125.

MEMORANDUM OF CONDITIONS UNDER WHICH THE MINISTRY IS PREPARED TO CONSIDER APPLICATIONS (UNDER SECTION 27 OF THE DISEASES OF ANIMALS ACT, 1894), FOR THE LANDING IN GREAT BRITAIN OF FOREIGN ANIMALS FOR EXCEPTIONAL PURPOSES.

1. BEFORE authorizing the landing of any foreign domestic animal under the above-mentioned Section, the Ministry would require to be satisfied by special inquiries that no risk of the introduction of disease would be entailed by conditions existing in the country from which the animal is sought to be imported. A certificate will be required from the Government of the exporting country as to the freedom of the animals from disease immediately before shipment.

2. The landing of animals so authorized would be subject to the provisions of the Foreign Animals (Quarantine) Order of 1896 regulating the landing, detention and isolation of the animals at a Foreign Animals Quarantine Station at the port of landing, defined by an Order of the Minister for the purpose, and imposing strict requirements as to inspection of the animals during quarantine, and the cleansing and disinfection of the premises, etc.

* No. 118.

† 1929: not printed here; it made certain minor technical modifications.

‡ No. 123.

The premises selected for quarantine would have to meet the requirements of the Ministry as regards structure and suitability, and would have to be in close proximity to the wharf at which landing takes place. No forage, litter, halters, cloths or other articles that have been in contact with the animals to be imported may be landed.

In the case of each authorization a period of quarantine would be specifically imposed, which in no event would be less than twenty-eight days, and which, in certain cases, would be extended to six months.

3. Except in the case of animals for the purposes of scientific experiments, only such importations would be sanctioned as were conducted under the auspices of the Government of the exporting country or under the auspices of a recognized Breed Society in Great Britain, who would have to make the necessary arrangements for the acquisition of premises to be used as a Foreign Animals Quarantine Station (subject to the approval of such premises by the Ministry), and to defray all expenses connected with the importation and with the detention of the animals during the period of quarantine, except the expenses incurred in the veterinary supervision of the animals during that period, which would be undertaken by the Ministry without charge, provided that the port is one at which a Veterinary Inspector of the Ministry is stationed.

4. Before granting an application for the importation of any foreign domestic animal, the Ministry would require to be convinced of the "exceptional circumstances" contemplated by the Act. For example, proof would have to be produced of the exceptionally high milking strain of any cattle proposed to be imported, or of the need for the importation of stock of a certain breed for the purpose of the renewal of a valuable breed in this country which is in danger of extinction, or for the establishment of a breed of special value in this country.

5. In no case would the Ministry assume any financial liability for any loss occasioned at any time by the death, slaughter, injury or illness of any animal so imported, or by any accident to any such animal, and in the event of a contagious disease, such as Foot-and-Mouth Disease or contagious Pleuro-pneumonia, etc., being certified by the Ministry to exist amongst the animals during the period of quarantine, the Ministry reserves the right to direct the slaughter forthwith of any or all of the animals without compensation.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

SIR JOSEPH COOK (HIGH COMMISSIONER) TO THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE.

(Received 7th July, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 127.]

High Commissioner, Australia House, Strand,

MY DEAR DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE,

London, W.C.2, 5th July, 1923.

As far back as the year 1894 there were regular shipments of live stock from Australia to London, which showed that it was possible to carry cattle all the way by sea and deliver them in sound condition. These shipments were continued for several years, but were finally abandoned, as they could not be made profitable owing to the provisions of the law requiring the slaughter of imported cattle within twenty-four hours of their arrival in port.

As there was at the time no discrimination in the regulations between one country and another, the Australian Governments did not protest against them, although compliance frequently involved slaughtering the cattle on board the ships which carried them from Australia. Nevertheless, a plea could reasonably have been made for a modification of the requirements of the law on the ground that the vast distance that separates Australia from England, involving a sea transport of sixty days or more, served as an efficient quarantine, and that cattle, healthy when shipped in Australia, could not be infected on their way to London as the vessels that carried them rarely touched at an intermediate port, and then only for coal and water.

The action of Parliament in repealing, so far as Canada is concerned, the provision for the slaughtering of cattle on their arrival and substituting therefor a simple quarantine subjects us to an invidious differentiation.

In the eyes of the Imperial Parliament, all the Dominions are equal, and there is no reason to doubt that, if it had been asked, Parliament would have conceded to Australia what was being granted to Canada, unless it could be shown that the concession would be likely to have injurious effects on English herds. I should be pleased, therefore, if you would be so good as to ascertain whether, in preparing the Bill for the admission of Canadian cattle into Great Britain, the Minister for Agriculture and Fisheries had in mind anything in the circumstances of Australia, the conditions of cattle breeding in that country or in the character of its export trade, that would warrant a refusal of the special concessions given to Canada.

This is a subject which greatly concerns the pastoralists of Australia, who contend that they have serious grounds of complaint, and my Government strongly and unhesitatingly supports their contention. When the Bill was before the Commons, I took every care that my views should be known to the Minister in charge as I realized how important the policy involved was to Australia; this, I feel sure, you also realize. I need not, therefore, stress the matter beyond stating that its settlement is one of great urgency, and I am instructed by my Government to press for the removal of this discrimination, which is a matter of serious moment to one of our great and vital industries.

Yours sincerely,

JOSEPH COOK.

DEAR SIR JOSEPH,

Downing Street, 17th July, 1923.

I HAVE NOW consulted the Minister of Agriculture about the question of the importation of live stock from Australia, to which you referred in your letter of the 5th July.* I do not think that I can say much by way of explanation beyond what is contained in the telegram† and despatch‡ (I enclose copies for convenience of reference) which I sent to the Governor-General of the Commonwealth in connexion with the passing of the Importation of Animals Act, 1922. I should add that in pursuance of the statement which I made in the House of Lords referred to in my despatch of the 1st February, the question of the restrictions on the importation of live stock into the various parts of the Empire is being placed as a subject for discussion on the agenda of the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference.

STATUS OF DOMINION TRADE COMMISSIONERS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

No. 128.

CANADA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 19th March, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 132.]

(No. 110.)

MY LORD DUKE, Government House, Ottawa, 8th March, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit, herewith, for Your Grace's information, a copy of an Approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada on the subject of the status enjoyed by Canadian Trade Commissioners in foreign countries.

I have, &c.,

BYNG OF VIMY.

Enclosure in No. 128.

CERTIFIED COPY OF A REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 5TH MARCH, 1923.

(P.C. 2124.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 5th October, 1922, from the Minister of Trade and Commerce, submitting that for a very considerable time the status occupied by Canadian Trade Commissioners in foreign countries has been the source of grievous embarrassment, which has tended not a little to materially restrict their usefulness in the promotion of Canadian trade.

The Minister observes that at the present time Canadian Trade Commissioners on appointment are accredited through the good offices of His Majesty's Colonial and Foreign Offices to the British Ambassador or British Minister, as the case may be, at the capital of the foreign country in which the Trade Commissionership may be established. While such British diplomatic officials and their commercial secretaries have at all times been most courteous toward and expressed themselves as willing to co-operate to the fullest extent with Canadian Trade Commissioners, nevertheless, there have been occasions where the Trade Commissioner has felt that his representations have not been presented as strongly as they might have been. At times, official British support has been withheld from Trade Commissioners, support which the Trade Commissioner has felt that he reasonably should receive.

The Minister believes that the Canadian Trade Commissioners should have such entree as may be required from time to time to interview responsible foreign government heads and other officials in connexion with matters respecting industry, commerce, trade, customs and finance. At times Trade Commissioners have been courteously informed by certain foreign officials that as they have no standing they can have no communication, no matter how trifling the subject may be.

A status, therefore, should be given to Canadian Trade Commissioners which will allow the Commissioner to take his place in foreign government circles as a Canadian Government official. At present any privilege extended to a Trade Commissioner in foreign government circles is wholly by courtesy. It is believed that the standing of the Trade Commissioner should be at least that of a First Secretary.

Canada permits articles for the personal or official use of foreign consuls general to be imported free of duty. The same privilege is not granted abroad to Canadian Trade Commissioners in more than two or three cases.

The commercial secretaries of various grades of foreign countries hold diplomatic standing. Their names are on the official list. They meet the leading members of the community at official functions on an altogether different plane from Canadian Trade Commissioners. Commercial secretaries of the various British and foreign Embassies and Legations are invited to official functions while the Canadian Trade Commissioner is frequently unrecognized and uninvited. Cases have arisen where official Canadian Government missions to a foreign country could not be presented except through the British authorities, and even then the Canadian Trade Commissioner in one case was not invited to be present.

It is unreasonable to suppose that British Ambassadors and Ministers, some of whom may have an inadequate knowledge of Canada, can present a case in behalf of Canadian Trade with the same degree of authority as a Canadian Trade Commissioner who is educated and trained in the Canadian Commercial Intelligence Service and ably equipped for the duties of his office. There are many occasions where a Trade Commissioner might, were he permitted to approach directly a foreign government official, obtain or give information upon some comparatively unimportant trade or financial matter which at the present time must be taken up formally through, and unnecessarily occupy the time of, the British diplomatic representatives.

The Minister states that it is not the desire of the Canadian Government to unduly elevate its trade representatives abroad, nor is it intended that they should undertake important trade negotiations, but it is necessary that some understanding be come to which will permit Canadian Trade Commissioners to be duly accredited to the various foreign governments in those countries where Trade Commissioners are appointed, so that such recognition can be given them as the dignity of their office demands.

The Committee, therefore, advise, on the recommendation of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, that Your Excellency may be pleased to bring this matter to the attention of His Majesty's Colonial Office, with a view to ascertaining what recognition can be given to Canadian Trade Commissioners to enable them more effectively to fulfil the duties of their office.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,

Clerk of the Privy Council.

IMPERIAL ECONOMIC CONFERENCE.

Status of Dominion Trade Commissioners.

THE Canadian Government have raised the question of the status of Dominion Trade Commissioners in foreign countries. At present the Commissioners have neither diplomatic nor consular status, and their efficiency is hampered thereby. While the Canadian Government do not desire unduly to elevate their trade representatives abroad nor to entrust them with important trade negotiations, they feel that the Commissioners should be given such recognition as the dignity of their office demands.

The British Commercial Counsellors and Commercial Secretaries in foreign countries form part of the Embassy or Legation staffs and thus enjoy diplomatic privileges and immunities. It would be possible similarly to include the more important Dominion Commissioners, Australian, New Zealand, South African and Irish, as well as Canadian, in the diplomatic staffs and thus give them precisely the same standing as the British Commercial Counsellors and Secretaries. This would seem to be the simplest solution, but it would involve (a) that His Majesty's Ambassador or Minister would be responsible for the actions of the Dominion Trade Commissioner vis-a-vis the foreign government concerned, and consequently (b) that the Dominion Trade Commissioner would look to the Ambassador or Minister for support in his relations with the foreign government concerned, and equally would be subject to his general guidance in the conduct of those relations.

It would be necessary to make this situation clear to the Dominion Governments, and also to explain (1) that it is contemplated that the Dominion Trade Commissioners should maintain entirely separate staffs, and (2) that the position as regards separate office accommodation remains as stated in Overseas Trade circular despatch of 30th December, 1921,* i.e., that office accommodation in Embassies and Legations is so limited that none is likely to be available for Dominion commercial representatives.

As regards the less important Dominion Trade Commissioners, it is suggested that the best plan will be to endeavour to obtain for them the same recognition, exemptions and privileges as may be accorded by the foreign Government concerned to His Majesty's Consular officers in that country.

29TH NOVEMBER. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: As you know, my colleagues and I are anxious to help the development of trade within the Empire in any way in our power. The most promising method of securing this is, in our opinion, co-operation between the various Governments, and we are therefore anxious to take counsel with them.

A meeting of the Imperial Conference is due next year, and will, I hope, take place, but it seems to us that there would be advantage in holding an Imperial Economic Conference distinct from and in advance of this, which could survey all the possibilities of joint and reciprocal action in the economic sphere.

I should be grateful if you would let me know how you would view this suggestion and whether you would be prepared to send representatives to such a Conference if the idea commended itself generally.

We have given some preliminary consideration to the scope of an Economic Conference such as we have in mind, and our tentative suggestion is that its general reference should be to study the possibilities of co-operation in the development of the resources of the British Empire and the strengthening of economic relations between its constituent parts.

Among the subjects which suggest themselves as suitable for consideration would be those for the fuller development of natural resources and of inter-Imperial commerce, shipping, and communications generally, as well as co-ordinated action for the improvement of technical research and the organization of economic intelligence; and also any proposals for the unification of law or practice in the Empire in matters bearing upon trade development, e.g., Empire Patents, Bills of Lading, Enforcement of Judgments, etc. Not the least important aspect of development in this connexion for some, at any rate, of the Governments concerned, is that of Oversea Settlement; and the progress up to date of co-operation in this respect on the lines laid down in resolution of Imperial Conference of 1921, and the possibilities of further progress, would naturally come under review.

Certain organizations for economic co-operation have already been established on an inter-Imperial basis. Work of such bodies would naturally come up for consideration as would also the recommendations of Conferences and Commissions on special subjects which have met and reported in recent years.

Conference might also wish to survey certain aspects of the external commercial relations of the Empire. For example, it might think well to consider the question of mutual co-operation amongst the various Governments to safeguard their economic interests in relation to foreign countries and any proposals for promoting international arrangements for the more equitable treatment of commerce. One or two subjects call for consideration as regards both their Imperial and International aspects; for example, position of Government enterprises as regards taxation and legal liability.

We should be greatly obliged for full expression of your opinion after you have had time to consider suggestions outlined above, and also for your views as to the best time for holding such a Conference if agreed to and as to the number of representatives. Tentatively we suggest that it should take place about April, 1923, and that there should be not more than three delegates from each Government accompanied by the necessary expert advisers.

Similar telegram is being sent to the other Prime Ministers and also to India. We contemplate, of course, that the Conference should include representation of the interests of the Colonies and Protectorates. Ends.

4TH DECEMBER. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your message 29th November,† Imperial Economic Conference. I have no objection to such a Conference, and am on the whole favourably inclined to your suggestion. I am, however, opposed to holding it at different time from Prime Ministers' Conference. Custom has grown up to hold Conference on economic and trade questions at the same time as Prime Ministers' Conference. This happened in 1918 and again 1921. While Prime Ministers under your chairmanship discuss question of Empire and foreign policy the other Conference under chairmanship of Colonial Secretary deals with practical economic issues. But Prime Ministers are always available to join in economic discussions, and do so whenever matters of far-reaching importance are discussed. I would suggest that this precedent of the last two Conferences be followed again. Apart from precedent it will be most inconvenient for the Union to be properly represented by Ministers in two great Conferences held in London in the same year. Union Parliament generally sits from January till June, and the latter part of June, as well as in month of July, are available for Conference in London. To send Ministers to London before June while session is on will be practically impossible. But after that I could proceed to London with one or two colleagues who could take part in Economic Conference and call me in whenever grave matters of principle or policy are under discussion. If you find it impossible to delay Economic Conference as I have suggested and decide to hold it in April of (or) thereabouts Government of Union of South Africa would have to be represented by our High Commissioner in London. Ends.

I hope you will concur in my view that India should be represented at the Conference. In spite of the fact that the question of Imperial Preference is not quoted specifically as one of the subjects to be discussed, there is no doubt that it falls within their scope, and representatives of some Governments may be expected to bring the question up. India's position in relation to this matter, as you will doubtless agree, is very special, as there has been no time for your Government to collect opinions on the Indian Fiscal Commission's recommendations, and to form your own matured opinion. It may seem to you desirable to instruct your representatives that should the question of Imperial Preference be raised they should simply state that for reasons stated in the preceding sentence they cannot join in the discussion. The representatives of India could, of course, usefully participate in the discussion on several other of the suggested subjects.

TELEGRAM FROM VICEROY, COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

8TH DECEMBER. P. Your important telegram of the 29th November received asking for our views on the proposal that an Imperial Economic Conference should be held next spring, in advance of, and distinct from, the Imperial Conference.

The various subjects which are indicated as possible subjects for consideration represent, we recognize, merely provisional and tentative ideas, and there is no necessity to draw your attention to the fact—which, indeed, you recognize—that there have been discussions on some of these subjects at Conferences of recent dates. We need only refer to the 1920 and 1921 Conferences on Customs, Forestry, Patents and Statistics. Moreover, the Imperial Shipping Committee and the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau exist for the very objects His Majesty's Government have in view. At the same time we appreciate the importance of the issues raised, not only to the United Kingdom, but also, though possibly in a less degree of immediate urgency, to the Empire, by the progressive deterioration of purchasing power and economic conditions in Europe; and we agree in principle that the urgency of these problems makes it well worth consideration whether they should not be remitted to a Common Council of the Empire for re-examination, in the hope of finding a solution equally advantageous to India, the Dominions, and the Home Government. India will certainly agree to participate in the proposed Conference if the Dominions' reply is favourable, and if they are prepared to co-operate. It will be understood by His Majesty's Government, however, that in approaching the Conference, the Government of India must adopt some degree of reserve. We take it that one possible line of co-operation between India and the United Kingdom may lie in plans to accelerate, with finances supplied on favourable terms from home, railway and other developments in India, on the understanding that material, &c., be ordered from British manufacturers. We are becoming more and more inclined to the view that in a bold policy of productive development lies the only permanent solution of India's financial troubles. Such development involves inter alia better transport for products, and this means further railway extension. It is necessary to say that if proposals on the above lines are made, we shall examine them with the greatest care, but we feel bound to indicate the existence of certain difficulties. Some of these are of a practical nature. Having regard to the object in view, railway development is the most hopeful form of development, if we have correctly interpreted the trend of ideas which His Majesty's Government have in mind. But the hands of railway administrations are already full with their existing rehabilitation programme. It is doubtful whether they can spend with advantage more than the money already earmarked for rehabilitation, and as a charge on revenue is involved in most capital expenditure on rehabilitation, more money could not be provided by us without embarrassment. With regard to new construction, certain preliminaries, such as surveys, would need to be undertaken, and before any large programme of new construction could be embarked upon, probably a year's delay must take place; nevertheless we should be prepared to examine (? any scheme) with the greatest care, and would do our utmost to speed up preliminary work provided that other conditions can be arranged to mutual advantage. There is also another difficulty, but of a different nature. The whole trend of Indian thought and Indian feeling is, as you are aware, on the side of decreasing, rather than increasing, India's dependence on the United Kingdom for manufactured articles, and it may be that an alteration in our fiscal policy may be made with this end in view. It is probable that Indian opinion would regard with great disfavour any proposals which might bear the construction that their intention was to base the future commercial connexion between India and the United Kingdom on an increase in the export of raw materials from India to England, and the import of manufactured articles into India from England.

If had been thought necessary that these points should be mentioned.

His Majesty's Government will doubtless realize that it will be necessary to have our Legislature behind us in carrying into effect any proposals that may be made, and this may not be easy in view of what we have said; but as already stated, if the proposed Conference is agreed to by the other Dominions, India will certainly desire to participate, and our representatives will attend with every desire to surmount difficulties and to be helpful. In regard to Imperial Preference, the Government of India reserves full liberty of action for their representatives, even, if necessary, for the reasons given in your telegram, No. 4659, to the extent of their abstaining from discussion on that subject. We understand that the question of overseas settlement excludes all discussion of emigration of Indians.

We agree that not more than three representatives should be sent.

As regards date of Conference, date provisionally suggested is awkward for us, and we should prefer May, or, better still, June. It will be necessary to brief our representatives very carefully. It will be difficult for our Departments to prepare the briefs during the sittings of the Legislature, as the time of our leading officials will be largely occupied with work of Legislature.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

2ND FEBRUARY. Prime Minister has asked me to send following telegram to you:—

Begins: In reply to your telegram of 29th November* re proposed Economic Conference, Commonwealth is alive to the importance of improving the Empire Economic relations, and as you know, Prime Minister holds very decided views on the necessity of developing the Empire's trade, and has set these out on very many occasions in Britain both during and after the War.

Australia has done everything in her power to encourage trade between various parts of the Empire, and particularly with Great Britain. She has given Britain very great advantage under her tariff, has concluded a reciprocal tariff with New Zealand, and is carrying on negotiations with Canada for a similar purpose.

As the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom knows, while under the Commonwealth tariff Britain is accorded preference on practically every item, the preference granted to Australia under British tariff does not go very far, and Australian goods have to face very keen competition of foreign countries in British market. Quite recently, as is well known, a most invidious distinction was made between Canadian and Australian products under the Cattle Embargo Act. The position, then, seems to be one which calls for action by Britain rather than mere discussion. If you want us to buy more British goods there is only one way in which it can be done—Britain must buy more Australian products; that is the position. And it is respectfully suggested that Britain might with great advantage to herself and to the Empire give products of Australia preference over foreign goods in British markets.

It is not necessary to stress the importance of Empire trade development or value of Dominions markets for British goods. Australia is one of the very best markets British manufacturers have. No European country compares with it, and if given suitable encouragement it will become a still better market. All facts are perfectly well known; a Conference cannot alter them nor can it do anything more than pass the resolution. What is really wanted is action by Britain. Ends.

24TH FEBRUARY. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: With further reference to your telegram 29th November,* my colleagues and I have again considered the question of participation in Economic Conference. Whilst appreciating the difficulties which exist, and which have hitherto prevented better understanding being arrived at between Great Britain and Dominions with regard to reciprocal tariff arrangement, it is strongly felt that present position of world's trade is such that question should be again definitely raised for consideration of Government and people of Great Britain. Whether Conference can achieve all those things which you suggest for discussion is doubtful, but presence of Dominions Ministers in Great Britain, with the object of discussing definite issues, would do a great deal to create proper atmosphere and make for reasonable chance of success. In my opinion difficulties are all at your end. Dominions are anxious and willing to co-operate. Suggest that definite Agenda be drawn up and date fixed for meeting of Conference. It is useless to approach such a Conference unless prepared to face the practical issue. Commonwealth's position such that it will have to press some further preference in return for substantial preference granted British goods.

With regard to Imperial Conference referred to in your telegram above mentioned, my colleagues and I consider this of paramount importance. Defence question is becoming very vital in Australia, and importance of arriving at understanding between Great Britain and Dominions before any further action is taken cannot be too strongly emphasized. Consider that both Conferences should take place simultaneously, as success of Economic Conference depends absolutely upon presence of Prime Minister, who could not spare time to visit England on two separate occasions. Many matters of importance, such as foreign policy, communications, etc., in addition to defence policy, necessitate early consultation. So far as Australia is concerned, September or October should be satisfactory time. Several outstanding questions which must await result of decision arrived at make the holding of Conferences this year very important to Australia. Ends.

28TH FEBRUARY. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Answers to my message of 29th November* as to suggested Imperial Economic Conference now complete, and I find that it is generally agreed that it would be of advantage to hold such a Conference. I gather, however, that there is a feeling that the best results would not be achieved if an Economic Conference were held independently of a Conference of Prime Ministers, and therefore that it would be best to hold Imperial Economic Conference and a meeting of the Imperial Conference concurrently.

Prime Ministers present at the latter would thus be enabled to be in constant consultation with their colleagues who were taking part in the former, and, if necessary, could themselves attend the most important meetings of the Economic Conference.

This procedure would be quite in accordance with views of Cabinet here, and for myself I should greatly welcome opportunity of discussing this year with my fellow Prime Ministers the many urgent problems of foreign policy and defence which confront us.

As to dates, it would be impossible to make necessary preparations before June at earliest, and the answers to my message of 29th November indicate that meeting in autumn would be preferred.

We accordingly suggest that both Conferences should open about 1st November, 1923, in London.

Please let me know as soon as you can whether you agree to holding both Conferences concurrently, and whether time suggested will suit you.

* No. 135.

As to agenda for Economic Conference we would send you as soon as possible detailed list of subjects suggested for discussion.

As to agenda for Imperial Conference, our idea would be that arrangements should follow generally those for 1921 Conference.

My telegram of 28th February.* Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Many thanks for your telegram of 24th February,† as to Economic and Imperial Conferences. I am answering it in my message of to-day, but I feel bound to make clear to you position of present British Government on tariff question. I announced before election that this Parliament would not make any fundamental change in the fiscal system of this country, and pledge has since been repeated several times in Parliament here. Hence, when discussing any proposals put forward with regard to preference, our attitude would necessarily be governed by this pledge. This will not, however, prevent you from raising the subject, but I feel sure that you will agree that a broad policy of economic co-operation such as we hope to realize must include much that is not fiscal, and I am confident that proposed Economic Conference could do useful work in many directions. Ends.

Begins: Your telegram 28th February,* in which you refer to fiscal pledges given by your Government, I fully understand the position you are placed in by reason of pledges referred to. These pledges, however, would not debar you from assenting to some of proposals my Government would submit. They would not involve any fundamental change in your fiscal system, or in your maximum tariff rate. For example, where preference at present exists in favour of the Dominions, such preference could be increased. While such assistance, if it could be accorded by Britain, will be welcomed by Australia, it must be recognized that even this does not exhaust all that we consider should be done to ensure proper economic organization of Empire, and I will in this connexion of necessity raise further points at Conference.

I await receipt of agenda, and strongly urge meantime British Government to consider what definite proposals they intend to put forward in exchange for maintenance of, or increase in, present preference granted by Dominion to British goods. Ends.

5TH MARCH. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram of 28th February.† So far as can be ascertained at this juncture, the suggested date for the Imperial and Economic Conferences quite satisfactory.

As intimated in my telegram of the 24th February,‡ consider if two separate conferences intended they should take place simultaneously. However, I am strongly of the opinion that the best results would be achieved by dealing with economic subjects as part of the Imperial Conference. So far as I can tell at present, I shall not be accompanied by any of my colleagues, and even if delegation of more than one could be arranged, the wide range of subjects suggested in your telegram of 29th November,§ covering shipping, technical research, unification of laws, taxation, etc., could hardly be dealt with effectively by anyone but the head of the Government. Difficulty of holding such a conference separately and concurrently appears to me to be insuperable; deliberation probably would be unduly prolonged and no finality reached. At best Conference could emerge with recommendations only, which would have to be then considered as such at meetings of Prime Ministers.

[Begins: Answers to my message of 29th November* . . . [see No. 145] . . . should follow generally those for 1921 Conference.] Ends.

As it is out of the question to hold these Conferences in the summer, do you see any objection to 1st November being fixed? (2)

TELEGRAM FROM VICEROY, COMMERCE DEPARTMENT, to SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA.

(Received 9 a.m., 12th March, 1923.)

DELHI. 11th March, 1923. We have received your telegram of the 2nd March, 891, which foreshadows the holding this year of an Imperial Conference, in addition to the Imperial Economic Conference.

2. We have already represented to you in our telegram of the 8th December,† that whilst we are very desirous to approach the Imperial Economic Conference in the most helpful spirit possible, considerations may easily arise at it which may prove very difficult for us. We, therefore, consider that we ought (?) only to be represented at it by the best men we can spare, on whom we can rely as knowing at first hand the conditions and feeling in India, and able also to explain and maintain them. On this occasion, the proposed date, 1st November, is most inconvenient to us. In that case, our representative would in all probability not return to India till January or later. The new session of our Legislature will open in early January, and we shall be seriously embarrassed, in dealing with newly-elected Legislative Assembly, if our representatives do not return some weeks before January. Thus, whilst we wish to assist, we would strongly urge that the Economic Conference open latter half September, or at the latest on 1st October.

3. The proposal to hold concurrently an Imperial Conference strengthens our opinion as, though it may ultimately prove helpful to have Prime Ministers at hand to refer to, the need for dovetailing in, on certain occasions, the sittings of two conferences must tend to prolong the Economic Conference.

4. Subjects usually discussed at the League of Nations are not such as seem to us to require attendance of Prime Ministers or of representatives who would normally represent their countries at an Imperial Economic Conference. We therefore hope that the meeting of the League of Nations may not be allowed to affect the date fixed for the Imperial Conference.

5. In the past, India's representation at an Imperial Conference has formed the subject of personal telegrams. I presume that this will be dealt with separately, but a date earlier than 1st November would, for similar reasons, suit us better.

6. We would ask you, therefore, to use your best endeavours to get the proposed date advanced as suggested by us, and to advise us as soon as possible.

20TH MARCH. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Press messages here purporting to be official, state there is prospect of Imperial Conference being postponed until next year. Same report states that South Africa agreeable to both Conferences being held in September or October this year, Canada and Australia likewise, while New Zealand and Newfoundland uncertain.

I sincerely trust there will be no postponement. It will be very difficult at any time to fix a date quite convenient for all Dominions, but on the other hand subjects to be discussed are vital and urgent. Our own defence policy rests very largely on what transpires at the Conference.

In connexion with the Economic Conference, importance of which you stress in your telegram of 29th November, 1922,* and your telegram of 24th January, 1923,† as urgent, the report before me states that the Imperial Authorities suggest that this should be held in September or October this year, and that its work will be subject to reconsideration, ratification, or amendment by an Imperial Conference next year. Unnecessary to point out that the work of the Imperial Conference must in turn receive reconsideration, ratification or amendment of each Dominion Parliament before being translated into law. So no practical result can be effected from the Economic Conference until at least 1925. Your telegrams quoted above suggest that the subjects in your mind are so important and urgent they will not admit of such delay.

I sincerely trust, therefore, that there shall be no suggestion of abandonment or postponement until every possible avenue has been exhausted, and Dominions fully consulted. Ends.

(2) Whether opportunity will be given to Parliament to consider in advance the agenda for the forthcoming Imperial Economic Conference; and whether suggestions for such agenda will be accepted from others than members of His Majesty's Imperial and Dominion Governments?

THE PRIME MINISTER: I hope that the list of subjects to be included in the agenda for the Imperial Economic Conference will be settled, in consultation with the Governments of the Dominions and India, in time to allow of their being announced, and considered by the interests concerned in the various parts of the Empire, before the Conference meets.

The President of the Board of Trade has already intimated on behalf of His Majesty's Government that when the arrangements for the Conference have been definitely settled, it is his intention to take steps to consult the representatives of commerce and industry in this country.

26TH MARCH. Confidential. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram of 23rd March.† Imperial and Economic Conferences. Your suggestion that Conference should open 1st October noted. I note also from your telegram Smuts suggests 1st September, but if this is agreed upon it would leave no interval between the end of your Session and the beginning of the Conference. This is precisely the position in which I am placed and, as the House has requested the opportunity to discuss Imperial foreign policy and economic relations before my departure, it is quite out of the question for me to attend to this discussion as well as ordinary work of Parliament, which must be accomplished and arrive in London before October; in fact it seems now that I shall not arrive before November.

Have cabled Smuts direct, setting out my position, and asking that he agree to the latest date possible, which I hope, to avoid my absence from the opening Session, will be 1st November.

With regard to the suggestion that it would be better to have two distinct Conferences, I am still of the opinion that no good purpose would be served thus, inasmuch as the Imperial Conference of Prime Ministers must necessarily consider the suggestions of any Economic Conference and, if results are to be achieved, Prime Ministers either must attend both Conferences or consider the proposals of the Economic Conference at the Imperial Conference.

Simplicity would therefore suggest that the Economic subjects be placed on the agenda of the Imperial Conference. I do not wish to labour this point, which will be perfectly clear to you, but if the two Conferences are held simultaneously, it would necessitate the presence of another of my Ministers, and in my opinion would not seriously curtail the discussion. At this stage the attendance of extra Ministers entails great difficulties, and could be agreed to only if absolutely necessary.

I quite understand all the difficulties with which you are confronted owing to the varied political circumstances of the Dominions, as well as your own problems, and as far as I am concerned will do my best to meet the position. For the reasons given above, however, I am in somewhat difficult position, and would like to receive the fullest possible information and be given as much time as possible before the Conference.

I agree with you that postponement of Prime Ministers' Conference until next year is most undesirable. I do not think that you will find that holding two Conferences over same period with different agenda will turn out in practice to be inconvenient. Arrangement worked quite well and allowed of subjects on agenda of Conference which involved questions of principle being referred to Cabinet: e.g., question of Imperial Preference, see page 114 of published 1917 Proceedings [Cd. 8566.] I am very sorry that so many complications have arisen over dates, and I greatly appreciate your readiness to help. Ends.

7TH APRIL. My telegram 23rd March.† Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: I have now heard that Smuts will agree to 1st October as the opening date for meeting of Imperial and Economic Conferences, and accordingly propose on Monday next, when Parliament meets again, to make announcement, terms of which are being telegraphed to you separately.

I expect to be able to send you by telegram shortly detailed list of subjects referred to in my message of 28th February.‡ As regards subjects in this list proposed by British Government, we hope to have memoranda prepared in good time beforehand, and it would certainly facilitate matters if other Governments could follow similar course as regards subjects which they propose.

As to agenda for meeting of Imperial Conference, I will have the necessary preparations put in hand at once. Ends.

(9th April, 1923.)

Imperial Conference and Imperial Economic Conference.

SIR J. NORTON-GRIFFITHS (by private notice) asked the Prime Minister whether he is now in a position to make a statement as to the proposed meeting of Prime Ministers, and as to the Imperial Economic Conference.

THE PRIME MINISTER: I am glad to be able to inform the House that it has now been found possible to arrange for the proposed Imperial Economic Conference, and also for a meeting of the Imperial Conference, similar to that held in 1921, to take place this year.

The two conferences will be held concurrently, and it has been agreed that the opening date should be 1st October.

It is anticipated that all the Dominions and India will be represented at the Imperial Economic Conference, and, with the exception of New Zealand, at the Imperial Conference also. I am sorry to say that the Prime Minister of New Zealand does not expect to be able to attend the latter, but I hope that all the other Prime Ministers will be present.

SIR J. NORTON-GRIFFITHS: Can the right hon. gentleman say whether the Crown Colonies will be represented?

VISCOUNT CURZON: Can the right hon. gentleman say whether at the Imperial Conference the question of Imperial defence will be considered?

THE PRIME MINISTER: Yes, most certainly.

CAPTAIN BERKELEY: Since the Prime Minister is unable to attend the Conference, will the right hon. gentleman consider the propriety of inviting the High Commissioner of New Zealand to attend in his place?

THE PRIME MINISTER: We will leave that for the Prime Minister to decide.

† Nos. 169 and 171.

Begins: I would like to point out that so far as my position is concerned, we have had one short parliamentary session already since General Election, and I do not think that it would be advisable to convene Parliament again before the usual time, which is June. When Parliament meets I will explain the position to the House and members will be afforded an opportunity for discussing it. It is just possible, of course, that some arrangement more or less satisfactory may be made, and in such case if dates of opening of the Conferences fixed for 1st November instead of 1st October as is now proposed, it would have suited the representation of New Zealand much better. Ends.

(18th April, 1923.)

ECONOMIC AND IMPERIAL CONFERENCES.

MR. MEIGHEN: May I ask next when the Government will give us some information as to the agenda of the Economic Conference and of the Imperial Conference. The Prime Minister states that as respects one he could lay the papers on the Table; as respects the other he needs some authority. None of the papers are on the Table yet, although the question was first asked about a week ago.

The Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King (Prime Minister): I may say to my right honourable friend, that when I spoke with the deputy of the department as to the papers requested, he mentioned that he thought it would be advisable to ask the permission of the British Government before any of them were brought down. That permission was asked immediately, but no response has been received as yet. I will have a further cable sent expressing a desire that consent be given as soon as possible.

MR. MEIGHEN: I wish to protest against this character of answer, and against the suggestion that this House should wait for the permission of the British Government before knowing the agenda of the Economic Conference. We have a right to know that, and to know it at once. It does not concern the British Government when the agenda of the Economic Conference shall be known to us.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: I am very glad to hear what my right honourable friend has just said, because I have been protesting very strongly against having to ask permission to lay on the Table of the House a great many of these documents which seem to me ought to be public property as soon as received. However, I am told that such is the method that has been customary as regards communications between the British Government and our own Government, and that it has been so, not only in recent years, but at all times. I am simply following the procedure that has been held out as the right and proper one; but I may say to my right honourable friend, that if the Conference is held this year, as is anticipated, I certainly intend to have this matter brought up as one of the subjects for discussion.

MR. MEIGHEN: I wish to point out again that what the Prime Minister states has not been the practice with respect to all subjects, and I venture to say that if he will look at the records of two years ago, he will find that at the first request for papers, I brought them down and I made no prior application at all for permission to do so.

10TH MAY. Confidential. My telegram 7th April.* Following for your Prime Minister from Prime Minister:—

Begins: 1. We have now further considered question of Agenda for Imperial Conference. We suggest that, as in 1921, opening meeting should include statements as to general position on main issues of Imperial policy.

2. These preliminary statements might be followed by:—

- (1) Review of foreign affairs since 1921 Conference, and consideration of present problems and future policy;
- (2) Discussions on naval, military and air defence.

3. Former heading would also cover:—

(a) Any questions connected with the League of Nations, including Treaty of Mutual Guarantee and attitude of United States to C Mandates which has been suggested by New Zealand; we understand that India desires to bring up in this connexion subject which has been raised by Indian representatives at previous meetings of Assembly of League, viz., admission of Indians into C Mandated Territories.

(b) Question of common Imperial policy regarding territorial waters, which we are anxious to have discussed.

(c) Position of Dominions and India in relation to signature of Treaties.

4. Heading (2) would comprise review of naval situation resulting from Washington Conference, and arrangements for future co-operation in all branches of defence.

5. Among subjects which will also require attention on part of Imperial Conference at some stage of proceedings, on questions of principle referred from Imperial Economic Conference will be Imperial Air and Wireless Communications, and probably certain economic questions of special importance.

6. Lastly, Australia recently suggested for discussion at an Imperial Conference question of marriages with foreigners, and we may wish to bring up question of nationality of married women.

7. Should be glad to know, as soon as possible, whether you are in agreement with Agenda outlined above, and whether you have any further subjects to add.

8. We should also like to make it clear in advance that Cabinet here, while recognizing the importance of the fullest publicity consistent with entire freedom of discussion, are strongly of opinion that the precedent of 1921 Conference should be followed, that is to say, that in case of questions such as Foreign Policy or the details of Imperial Defence where secrecy is essential to complete freedom of discussion, the results only of deliberations should be published, discussions themselves being kept secret. Similarly we trust that any documents forwarded to you in advance of the Conference will be regarded as strictly confidential.

* Nos. 167, 168, 169 and 170.

9. Similar telegram being sent to other Prime Ministers and to India, and question of publication of any part of Agenda for Conference must, I think, stand over till replies complete. I assume, however, that there will be general desire to announce outline of programme, and this telegram has been framed accordingly, though I should not contemplate publication of paragraphs 3 and 8.

We are assuming that as suggested in my telegram of 29th November,‡ representatives at Economic Conference will be accompanied by expert advisers, and we think it desirable for naval and air experts to accompany representatives at Imperial Conference, since subjects for discussion under heading of Defence seems likely at present to be predominantly naval and air.

We hope that Hankey will be available to act as Secretary of Imperial Conference, and that, in accordance with 1921 arrangements, Dominions and India will also nominate members of Secretariat. It would greatly facilitate our arrangements if we could hear as soon as possible what office accommodation in London, if any, apart from hotel accommodation, is likely to be required by Dominion Delegations. Owing to reductions in staff of Cabinet Secretariat, we regret that it will not be possible to supply any clerical assistance to Delegations, apart from the clerical requirements of the Conference itself.

On proposal of New Zealand attitude of United States as regards these territories is also to come up, but this relates to discrimination against American economic interests.

Question of united action against the spread of Communist propaganda is not placed on agenda, but a convenient opportunity for raising it would arise after the statement by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, which must necessarily include a reference to our policy towards the Russian Soviet Government. Turkey will be treated by Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in his general review. Note has been taken of point 5 information about Dominion legislation, etc., but this is regarded as more suitable for informal direct discussion between representatives concerned. Question of Aden if not settled before Conference can be raised on general discussion of Imperial Defence, but is not specifically mentioned in circular telegram issuing to Your Excellency's Government and Dominions. Apportionment of British Empire share of League of Nations expenses, 1923, will probably come up if not previously settled. 15TH MAY. Secret. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister: Begins: Your telegram of 10th May,* Agenda and Order of Procedure as submitted by you quite satisfactory. Sincerely trust, however, you will allow ample opportunity to discuss in Imperial Conference before Premiers disperse the general question of Economics and the recommendations of the Economic Conference in their relation to defence and welfare of, and migration within, the Empire. In my Government's opinion most essential that Economic circumstances of the Empire should be considered in their widest application to these great questions, and this, as stated by me previously, cannot be done effectively at the Economic Conference. Without detracting one iota from the importance of foreign affairs and naval, military, and air defences we see in economic questions possibilities of achieving something definite which will materially strengthen Empire defences and by creating common interests ensure pursuance of a common policy in foreign and Imperial affairs. The circumstances of Canada will illustrate to you the points I desire to emphasize. With this reservation we agree with the Agenda as set out by you.

The only other subject we wish to add to the Agenda at this stage is the amendment of the British Nationality and status of Aliens Act, 1914, to permit of the nationalization of residents of mandatory territories.

With regard to the question of publicity, generally speaking I feel that the value of the Imperial Conferences to the Empire depends very largely on fullest possible publication of the deliberations throughout the Dominions. We have, I think, by past discussion(s) established a public opinion favourable to Conferences as a partial solution of the great problem of consultation in foreign and Imperial affairs, but to maintain and strengthen that opinion it is desirable that our constituents should know as far as possible the extent to which we are consulted and the nature of our deliberations. I agree, of course, that secrecy is essential where details of foreign policy or defence are concerned, but generally speaking think it desirable that the utmost publicity be given to discussions.

As previously intimated I have promised to give Parliament an opportunity to discuss the Agenda and it will be necessary therefore for me to make the contents of your cable public. Presume that with the exception of paragraphs three and eight mentioned by you there is no objection. Ends.

Begins: Questions of co-operation for the fuller utilization of natural resources (as to which His Majesty's Government will make proposals) and improvement of technical research referred to in my message of 29th November* as falling within scope of Imperial Economic Conference are still under examination here, as are also questions relating to external commercial relations of Empire.

In other respects we have now virtually completed our examination of subjects outlined in that telegram, and developed by subsequent correspondence as suitable for consideration, and have prepared first list of questions for discussion as follows:—

(1) Oversea Settlement.—Progress made since 1921 with policy of State-aided Empire settlement and plans for the future, especially as regards methods of improving selection and training of intending settlers before migration, and their reception, training and distribution on arrival.

(2) Co-operation in assistance to Imperial Development.

(3) Trade Development.—Questions relating to Imperial preference will be included in the Agenda. In particular (a) Government of Commonwealth of Australia have expressed intention of raising question of tariff preference accorded by United Kingdom.

(b) Question of use of Empire raw materials in public contracts will be raised on behalf of Colonies and Protectorates. Other questions relating to Imperial preference in public contracts may be raised.

(d) Forestry.—Any proposals resulting from Empire Forestry Conference to be held in Canada this summer.

(4) Imperial Communications.—Discussion on (a) Shipping and mails, with particular reference to reports of Imperial Shipping Committee. (b) Air Communications, and (c) Cables and Wireless on which special reports have been prepared.

(5) State Enterprises.—Proposal to set State-owned or controlled economic enterprises on the same footing as private enterprises as regards taxation, and (in the case of commercial shipping in normal times) as regards shipowners' liability.

(6) Unification of law and practice, with special reference to general adoption of (a) legislation for reciprocal enforcement of judgments; (b) the provisional scheme for Empire Patents recommended by the Patent Conference, 1922.

(7) Commercial Intelligence and Statistics:—

(a) Extended utilization of Commercial Diplomatic Service and Trade Commissioners.

(b) Establishment of an Imperial Advisory Committee on Statistics.

Shall be glad to learn as soon as possible what other subjects you would like added to above list. Similar telegram being sent to other Prime Ministers and to India. Ends.

IMPERIAL AND ECONOMIC CONFERENCES.

Mr. J. S. Woodsworth (Centre Winnipeg): Mr. Speaker, will there be an opportunity for discussion of the matters that are to be placed upon the agenda for the Imperial and Economic Conferences.

Mr. Mackenzie King: The Government will have occasion to ask for the passing of an estimate to make provision for expenses in connexion with these Conferences, and at that time I should think there would be ample opportunity to discuss matters pertaining thereto. If not, a time can be specially arranged for the purpose if so desired.

Mr. Meighen: Does the Prime Minister propose to state to the House the lines of policy he intends to follow or the specific proposals he will himself advance on the occasion of these Conferences?

Mr. Mackenzie King: I shall be glad to answer any questions that may be asked. I happen to have here the latest information the Government has received with respect to what is anticipated to be taken up at the proceedings of the Imperial Conference, and I might give it to the House. The dispatch requests that the information be given in a general form, and therefore I will only outline the main features.

As in 1921, the opening meeting will include statements as to the general position on the main issues of Imperial policy. The preliminary statement may be followed by a report on foreign affairs since 1921, and by a consideration of the present problems and future policy. A discussion as to naval, military and air defences. A review of the naval situation resulting from the Washington Conference and arrangements for future co-operation in all branches of defence. At some stage of the proceedings, attention will be given to the principles referred to it from the Imperial Economic Conference regarding Imperial air and wireless communications. There will probably be certain economic questions of special importance. Australia suggests the discussion of the marriage of women with foreigners. That I think, Mr. Speaker, by way of an outline of what is anticipated for the coming Conference, contains about all the information the Government has thus far received.

Mr. Meighen: The Prime Minister stated that he would answer any questions asked him. I would like him to regard my question as now placed before him as a request that he do lay before the House a statement of the lines of policy he purposes following on behalf of this Dominion at these Conferences and of any proposition he intends to advance himself. I do not mean at the present moment, but that a time be fixed for his doing so.

Mr. Mackenzie King: My right honourable friend will appreciate that it is only possible to do that in so far as the Government is aware of the questions to come up for discussion at the Conferences. I may say broadly that certainly with respect to anything of importance involving expenditures, our attitude will be that it must be subject to future ratification by this Parliament.

Mr. Meighen: It always is.

But I find great difficulty over your suggestion to postpone its opening session. 1st October was the agreed date after much discussion and considerable opinion in favour of beginning earlier. I fear therefore that it is too late to re-open matter now. You may like to know, however, that our present idea is to concentrate more especially on Economic Conference during first week of meetings. Therefore you would probably be in time for most important discussions at Imperial Conference if you were here by second week of October though you would miss opening meeting and might miss statement on foreign situation by Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. With reference to paragraph 7 of your telegram of 10th May, Confidential,* Agenda outlined is generally acceptable to the Prime Minister. As to inquiry whether he has any further suggestions to add the Prime Minister would like to suggest the advisability of the Conference considering the question of the publicity to be permitted with respect to communications between the several Governments of the British Empire and in particular communications between the Home Government and the Governments of the Dominions. Recent experience in Parliament would suggest the desirability of some understanding being reached in this matter whereby there should be available for presentation to Parliament at discretion of Canadian Government and on its responsibility as large proportion of official despatches as possible without special permission having to be asked for in each case. Regarding paragraph 8 of your telegram of 10th May, Confidential,* while appreciating the point of view set forth therein Canadian Government nevertheless hopes that the proceedings of the Conference may be surrounded with as little in the way of secrecy as possible, and that the proceedings will be so conducted as to make possible subsequent disclosure to Parliament of all essential features. Ends.

(V) Laid great stress upon importance of maintaining one power naval standard as essential to maintaining communications and strongly approved Singapore base adding that he knew of nothing so urgent and important so far as Australia and New Zealand are concerned. Leader of Opposition subsequently endorsed this view. (VI) Expressed disagreement with Canada's attitude as to claiming right to stand out when Empire was at war, and as to signature of Halibut Treaty by Canadian Ministers alone. (VII) Paid tribute to the tact and firmness of Lord Curzon in dealing with the Near East situation. (VIII) Thought that there was no reason why Imperial Conferences should not be held alternately in the Dominions, as well as in London. This would give Ministers in Great Britain necessary first hand knowledge of conditions in the Dominions which was now lacking. (IX) Generally laid stress on the importance of maintaining the unity of the Empire. Leader of the Opposition also stressed necessity for unity. Debate is proceeding, but decision as to Prime Minister's attendance not likely for some days. On the recent² no confidence motions Government has retained its majority of three.—JELlicoe.

Imperial Conference.

CAPTAIN WEDGWOOD BENN asked the Prime Minister whether it is his intention before the Imperial Conference meets to make a statement on the policy of the Government concerning matters which will come up for discussion; and whether the House of Commons will, like the Dominion Parliaments, have an opportunity of expressing their opinion before the Conference meets?

THE PRIME MINISTER: The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative. As to the second, I would refer the honourable and gallant member to my reply to my noble friend the Member for Shrewsbury on the 14th of June.

CAPTAIN BENN: Is the right honourable gentleman aware that the Prime Minister of every Dominion has stated his policy at this Conference, and that he alone has not stated his policy; and is it right that this Government and this Parliament alone should be prevented from discussing such an important matter?

THE PRIME MINISTER: The object of a Conference surely is to confer, and the process of conferring is necessarily exploratory, and if those explorations yield results, those results will be discussed in the House of Commons. In the meantime, I do not see that a debate would serve any useful purpose, although, if desired, one could be held on the Consolidated Fund Bill.

CAPTAIN BENN: Can the right honourable gentleman give the House any information as to an extension of preference to foodstuffs?

MR. PRINGLE: Is it not in accordance with precedent to have a discussion of the programme of such a Conference before it actually takes place? Such a discussion took place before the last Conference.

THE PRIME MINISTER: I do not think that is the case necessarily; certainly not a discussion of policy. I am not aware of a debate in which matters of policy were involved. But a debate on the subjects to be considered has, I think, been held before.

CAPTAIN BERKELEY: If specific questions are put to the Government on the Colonial Office Vote, will they not be answered?

THE PRIME MINISTER: It depends entirely whether they are answerable.

CAPTAIN BENN: Will the right honourable gentleman answer my question, whether it is the Government policy to extend the preference to foodstuffs?

THE PRIME MINISTER: I do not think that is a question that can be answered. There would have to be a mass of evidence brought forward, and the subject would have to be explored.

CONFIDENTIAL. 16th July. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister.

Begins. Please see passage in my telegram of 17th May,* referring to questions of co-operation for the fuller utilization of natural resources. Following is general indication of lines on which His Majesty's Government, subject to results of discussion at Economic Conference, will be prepared to consider schemes of financial co-operation which may be proposed with view to assisting early development of Public Utility Undertakings in Dominions which without such assistance would be delayed or not proceeded with. Undertakings assisted should be of nature which, if put in hand rapidly, would confer direct benefit both on Dominion and on employment by placing of orders in United Kingdom. Conditions and limits of financial assistance and shares of co-operating governments in such assistance would be settled in each case by special agreement. Without excluding from consideration any form of assistance His Majesty's Government consider guarantee of interest or advance of part of interest for limited period is likely to prove the most generally useful method. Specific proposals under an agreed general scheme would naturally be examined carefully by competent authorities both in Dominion and United Kingdom before approval.

Similar telegram being sent to other Prime Ministers and to India.

Imperial Conference.

SIR EDWIN STOCKTON asked the Prime Minister whether it has been suggested on behalf of the Dominions that, for general convenience and the stimulation of good feeling, occasional meetings of the Imperial Conference might very well be held in one or other of the Dominion capitals; and whether, in any case, he will ascertain the present point of view of the Dominions on such a policy?

THE PRIME MINISTER: The suggestion is one with which I am familiar. There is no definite arrangement by which the meetings of the Imperial Conference should invariably take place in London, and the place of meeting must be determined by the convenience of all concerned.

At the forthcoming Conference, the date and place of the next meeting will be among the subjects which will come up for discussion.

My telegram 17th May.* Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Following additional subjects proposed for discussion at Imperial Economic Conference:—

(1) "The desirability of a common Empire policy as regards certain aspects of workmen's compensation, i.e., the regime applicable to non-resident workmen and to seamen and to the nationals of foreign countries according as reciprocity is or is not given by latter."

As regards non-residents, some parts of Empire impose restrictions on payment of compensation to non-resident dependents or to injured workmen ceasing to reside in that part. Possibility of dispensing with such restrictions either altogether or on condition of reciprocity should be considered.

As regards seamen, workmen's compensation laws of Empire differ widely and some give no protection to seamen meeting with accidents outside territorial waters. Suggested that effort should be made to arrive at uniformity so as to acquire benefits for injured workman or his dependents wherever vessel may be when accident happens. As regards foreign nationals, question for consideration would be whether possible for Empire to adopt any policy based on the principle of equality of treatment for national workers and the nationals of foreign States on condition that the laws of those foreign States grant similar equality.

(2) Under the heading of Commercial Intelligence it is suggested that the Conference should consider the possibility of a common Empire policy of free admission of trade catalogues received through the post from other parts of the Empire. It is not suggested that the proposal should extend to catalogues imported in bulk.

Similar telegram being sent to other Prime Ministers and to India.

SIR J. NORTON-GRIFFITHS asked the Prime Minister whether he can give the House any information as to the agenda of the forthcoming Imperial Conference.

THE PRIME MINISTER: It is proposed that, as in 1921, the opening meeting of the Imperial Conference should include statements as to the general position on the main issues of Imperial policy, and that these preliminary statements should be followed first by a review of foreign affairs since the Conference of 1921, and consideration of present problems and future policy, and secondly, by discussions on naval, military and air defence, including a review of the naval situation resulting from the Washington Conference, and arrangements for future co-operation in all branches of defence.

* No. 199.

At some stage of the proceedings, attention will be devoted to questions of principle referred to the Imperial Conference from the Imperial Economic Conference, including Imperial air and wireless communications, and probably certain economic questions of special importance.

No. 257.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

MR. E. J. HARDING to SIR R. R. GARRAN.

[Answered by No. 258.]

DEAR GARRAN,

Downing Street, 11th January, 1924.

You will remember that I spoke to you about the question of direct communication between the Secretary of State and the Governors of the Australian States on certain matters arising out of the Imperial Economic Conference.

In the past, when a particular subject discussed at an Imperial Conference has been a matter falling within the competence of the State Governments it has been the practice to communicate direct with them. As an instance I might refer to the question of "Provision for Deserted Wives and Children" which was discussed at the Imperial Conference of 1911; on this the Secretary of State communicated direct with the States at the same time as with the Commonwealth.

* No. 253.

I enclose a schedule* of the subjects which came under discussion at the Imperial Economic Conference. Of these the following affect the States:—

(a) (3) (ii) Preference in Public Contracts.—There does not appear to have been any correspondence with the States arising out of the discussion of this question at the Imperial War Conference of 1918. The Economic Conference Resolution reads that "State, provincial and local Government authorities should be encouraged to take note of the . . . resolutions." It would seem therefore that correspondence with the States on the subject might be initiated either by His Majesty's Government or by the Commonwealth Government. Perhaps I might mention that correspondence has recently taken place with the Agents-General for the States on a suggestion that in placing contracts in this country a preference should be given to firms on the King's National Roll. We think that the Secretary of State would be quite prepared to take up this resolution with the States direct.

(b) (4) (C) (1) (c) Shipping Taxation.—It appears that non-resident shipowners and charterers are liable to State taxation in respect of shipping profits. In the case of an inquiry on the subject which was received from the Danish Government in 1922, correspondence took place with the Commonwealth Government only. But the proposals of the Imperial Economic Conference mainly affect British shipping, and it is thought that it might be desirable for the Secretary of State to communicate concurrently with the Commonwealth and States as to the recommendations of the Conference in this respect. See also under (d) below.

(c) (4) (D) Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments.—Correspondence has already taken place with the States on this question, arising out of the 1911 Conference Resolution, and three States (Victoria, South Australia and Western Australia) have passed legislation to provide for reciprocity with this country. It would seem advisable accordingly to continue direct correspondence.

(d) (4) (k) Immunity of State Enterprises.—Correspondence has taken place direct with the States as well as the Commonwealth in regard to the "Colwyn Committee" report on this subject, and also in regard to the position of the United States Shipping Board as regards taxation. As a matter of interest it may be added that four of the States (Victoria, New South Wales, Queensland and South Australia) have already expressed general concurrence in the recommendations of the Colwyn Committee. It would therefore appear desirable to consult the States concurrently with the Commonwealth as to those parts of the Economic Conference Resolution which affect them.

(e) (6) Forestry.—The States as well as the Commonwealth were invited to take part in the Forestry Conference at Ottawa, the proceedings of which formed the basis of the discussion at the Economic Conference: the report of the Ottawa Conference was communicated to the States and the Commonwealth concurrently and some of its recommendations directly concern the States. It would seem best on the whole to continue separate communication with them.

(f) (7) Workmen's Compensation.—Correspondence arising out of the Resolution of the 1911 Conference regarding the desirability of securing more uniformity within the Empire in the law of accident compensation was conducted direct with the States, the Commonwealth Government being so informed at the time; and the resolutions of the Economic Conference expressly recognize that this subject falls to some extent within State jurisdiction. In the circumstances it would seem best to continue direct correspondence with the States so far as is necessary.

There are three other subjects dealt with at the Economic Conference which appear to concern the State Governments:—

(g) (1) Oversea Settlement.—It is fully recognized that the negotiation of any agreement in regard to migration into Australia is a matter for the Commonwealth Government; but it has been the practice for the Secretary of State to inform the State Governments of any agreements reached in which they are likely to be interested; and it would therefore seem desirable that the report of the proceedings of the Economic Conference on this subject should be communicated to them officially by the Secretary of State for their information.

(h) (4) (J) Co-operation for Technical Research.—Some of the States have in the past contributed to the upkeep of the Imperial Institute; and it would therefore appear desirable that they should be informed later of the decisions taken in regard to its future.

(i) (2) Co-operation in Financial Assistance to Imperial Development.—There is some doubt as to the exact intention of the Conference in regard to this subject.

* Not printed.

On the one hand the original telegram of the 16th of July last* summarizing the proposals which His Majesty's Government proposed to lay before the Conference under this head was sent only to the Commonwealth; and the resolution of the Conference refers to "schemes approved by the Dominion or Central Government concerned" (I should perhaps explain that I understand that the word "Central" was inserted to meet the views of the Indian representatives).

On the other hand, some of the remarks made by Mr. Bruce at the Conference give the impression that he had contemplated that State Governments should be invited to participate in the scheme. For example, he said: "I am very hopeful that something may flow from it. It may not be a Federal Government scheme: it may not be a State Government scheme: it may be a municipality, etc." And, again, later: "If it is only limited to the knowledge of the Commonwealth and State Governments, there is no possibility of any municipality or private enterprise endeavouring to avail themselves of it." On the whole it would appear that, if His Majesty's Government find themselves in a position to proceed with the scheme, the balance of advantage would lie on the side of direct communication with the States as well as with the Commonwealth.

The remaining Resolutions of the Conference would seem to call for communication with the Commonwealth only.

I should be grateful if you would let me know for the Secretary of State's information what are Mr. Bruce's views on this matter.

Yours, &c.,

E. J. HARDING.

Australia House, Strand, W.C.2,

25th January, 1924.

DEAR HARDING,

I HAVE your letters of the 11th January† and the 14th January,‡ in regard to the question of direct communication with the States of the Australian Commonwealth on matters arising out of the Imperial Conferences.

I have discussed the matter with Mr. Bruce, and, except on two of the subjects, he sees no objection to the Colonial Office communicating directly with the States.

The principle which he regards as applicable to all cases is that direct communication cannot be objected to, except where some responsibility for any action that may be taken devolves on the Commonwealth.

The two matters above referred to are the following:—

Oversea Settlement.—Seeing that the Commonwealth is responsible for migration and that agreements with regard to it have been negotiated with the Commonwealth, Mr. Bruce thinks that all correspondence with respect to this subject should be through the Commonwealth Government.

Co-operation in Financial Assistance.—The resolution appears to contemplate that approval as regards Australia should be given by the Commonwealth Government. In view of this fact, Mr. Bruce thinks that communication should be through the Commonwealth.

Yours sincerely,

R. R. GARRAN.

(Answered by Nos. 260, 261, 262, 263, 264 and 265.)

(Private and Personal.)

DEAR,

Downing Street, 21st January, 1924.

You will remember that various questions were raised at the Imperial Conference last year as to the position of the High Commissioners of the Dominions in London, particularly with regard to their precedence, and the grant of privileges to them in regard to exemption from taxation, etc. (See the Minutes of the 14th Meeting, pages 20-21, and the report of the Committee which appears on pages 10-11 of the Minutes of the 15th Meeting).

I promised at the time that I would go with my colleagues into the points raised and we have, since the Conference ended, actively taken them up.

The questions concerning exemption from taxation, etc., will need some further time for study, but I was particularly anxious to reach a suitable arrangement without delay as regards the question of precedence. One suggestion which has been made, viz., that High Commissioners should be placed in the same position as Ambassadors, does not appear to be practicable, since its adoption would involve giving them higher precedence than any British Minister including the Prime Minister.

A second suggestion, viz., that High Commissioners should be placed in the same position as Foreign Ministers appears equally impracticable, as we find that it would result in Dominion High Commissioners being given precedence higher than any British Minister except the Lord Chancellor, the Prime Minister, the Lord President of the Council, and the Lord Privy Seal (if a Peer).

The proper course, as I think you will agree, seems to be that the representatives of the Dominions in London, whilst being given the highest precedence practicable on ceremonial occasions should not be placed, by virtue of their office, in a position superior to that of any British or Dominion Ministers who are present on the same occasions.

To do so would raise obvious difficulties here; and it would also interfere with the practice, which is of long standing and, I am sure, right, whereby any Dominion Minister whom we are fortunate enough to be able to welcome in London takes precedence above the High Commissioner of the Dominion from which he comes.

Accordingly, the suggestions which we make for the precedence of High Commissioners are as follows, viz., that they should be given precedence, on ceremonial occasions, after any members of the British or Dominion Cabinets who may be present on any given occasion, but not in any case given a position superior to that accorded by the Table of Precedence to Secretaries of State.

This scheme would work out as follows. If British or Dominion Cabinet Ministers are present, High Commissioners will take precedence after them, i.e.,

(a) if there are present British Cabinet Ministers who rank only as Privy Councillors or Dominion Ministers whether Privy Councillors or not, High Commissioners will rank immediately after them.

(b) if there are only British Cabinet Ministers present who rank as Secretaries of State and higher, or if there are only British Cabinet Ministers present who rank higher than Secretaries of State (i.e., the Lord Chancellor, the Prime Minister, the Lord President of the Council and the Lord Privy Seal), then High Commissioners will take precedence immediately after that given in the Table of Precedence to Secretaries of State.

The latter precedence (i.e., precedence immediately after that given in the Table of Precedence to Secretaries of State), will also apply on ceremonial occasions in cases where no British or Dominion Cabinet Ministers are present.

We have ascertained that His Majesty the King would be prepared to approve of a temporary arrangement on these lines pending any general revision of the Table of Precedence which is at present based mainly on social and not on official status.

I hope very much that you will find this arrangement acceptable. I enclose two extracts* from Burke's "Peerage"; the first containing the Table of Precedence, the second containing the rule applicable to Ambassadors and Ministers. I am sending a similar letter to the Prime Ministers of the other Dominions [Not to Mr. Cosgrave: and to the President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State.]

Yours, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

MY DEAR DUKE, Prime Minister's Office, Ottawa, 31st January, 1924.

I HAVE received to-day your letter of the 21st instant† respecting the position of the High Commissioners of the Dominions in London.

MAY I at once express my appreciation of the kindness of your colleagues and yourself in having found it possible, under the circumstances existing, to give to this matter the time and attention it must necessarily have involved.

THE arrangement as regards the question of precedence which your letter proposes appears to me to be entirely acceptable, and I am pleased to know that His Majesty the King is prepared to approve of a temporary arrangement on the lines indicated pending any general revision of the Table of Precedence. I am sure that the official and social recognition thus accorded our High Commissioner in London will prove of advantage to both Governments and the peoples they represent.

I am pleased to know that the questions concerning exemption from taxation will be given further study. I think I am well within the mark when I say that whatever may serve to add to the dignity and emoluments of the office of High Commissioner for Canada in London will, at the same time, help to ensure its occupancy to the greatest advantage of all concerned.

Yours, &c.,
W. L. MACKENZIE KING.

DEAR

Downing Street, 25th July, 1924.

[To Mr. Larkin only: You will remember that we had some correspondence in January last on the question of the precedence of the High Commissioners in London on ceremonial occasions. I then explained that, arising out of the discussion of the question at the Imperial Conference (see page 17 of [Cmd. 1987]), the Duke of Devonshire had written to the Dominion Prime Ministers on the question. I now enclose a copy]

[To the others: You will no doubt remember that among the questions discussed at the Imperial Conference, 1923, was the question of the precedence of the High Commissioners in London on ceremonial occasions (see page 17 of [Cmd. 1987]). In accordance with the promise then given, the matter was examined by the late Government, and the result of this examination was incorporated in a letter† sent by the Duke of Devonshire on the 21st of January to the [Prime Minister of Canada,] [Prime Minister of the Commonwealth of Australia,] [Prime Minister of New Zealand,] [Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa,] [President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State,] [Prime Minister of Newfoundland.] I enclose a copy]

To all: of the Duke of Devonshire's letter† together with a copy of [Mr. Mackenzie King's] [Mr. Bruce's] [Mr. Massey's] [General Smuts'] [Mr. Cosgrave's] [Mr. Warren's] reply|| accepting the proposals made therein. The proposals were also accepted by the Prime Ministers of the other Dominions [Not to Mr. McNeill: and by the President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State], and have now received His Majesty's approval.

I have accordingly arranged to make a statement,§ of which a copy is enclosed, in Parliament on the 29th of July. The statement, the terms of which have already been communicated to [Mr. Mackenzie King,] [Mr. Bruce,] [Mr. Massey,] [General Hertzog,] [Mr. Cosgrave,] [Mr. Monroe,] will also be published in the London Gazette.

May I add how glad I am to be able to make this announcement, which will, I hope, place the position of the High Commissioners henceforward on ceremonial occasions on a satisfactory basis.

EXTRACT FROM THE LONDON GAZETTE OF THE 29TH JULY, 1924.

AMONGST the matters discussed at the Imperial Conference, 1923, was the question of the precedence of the High Commissioners in London. In accordance with the undertaking then given (see page 17 of [Cmd. 1987]), the matter was examined and suggestions were put forward, with His Majesty's approval, by the late Government for the consideration of the Dominion Prime Ministers and the Government of India. These proposals have proved generally acceptable, and His Majesty has now been pleased to direct that the High Commissioners for Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland and India should be given precedence, on ceremonial occasions, according to the following principles:—

(a) When British or Dominion Ministers, being at the time members of their respective Cabinets, are present, the High Commissioners should take precedence immediately after them; this precedence is subject to the qualification that the High Commissioner should not on any occasion be given a precedence higher than that accorded by the Table of Precedence to Secretaries of State.

(b) When no members of the British or Dominion Cabinets are present, the High Commissioners should take precedence immediately after that accorded by the Table of Precedence to Secretaries of State.

MR. P. C. LARKIN (HIGH COMMISSIONER) to MR. J. H. THOMAS.

[Answered by No. 272.]

Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, Kinnaird House,

DEAR MR. THOMAS, Pall Mall East, London, S.W.1, 26th July, 1924.

I AM so very grateful to you for yours of the 25th July* regarding the precedence of the High Commissioners in London on ceremonial occasions, and the announcement which accompanied it.

*No. 269.

I have read the announcement with considerable care and have spoken of it to the other High Commissioners, and some of them, who are better acquainted with matters of status than I am, would like to have time to have a meeting and discuss it, which, I am sure, could result in nothing but good. Therefore, if you can postpone its presentation to Parliament we would all be glad.

I understood that my Prime Minister's acceptance of the Duke of Devonshire's suggestions were tentative, and as I sail for home on Friday next I shall have a chance of discussing the matter fully with him. I think, though, that I may venture to say that I shall, personally, be disappointed (though I may but for a short time hold my present office) if the representative of the Dominion of Canada continues to be shown less consideration on State or other occasions than the representative of our cousins to the South. I have not the slightest desire to take precedence of His Majesty's Ministers, but that is a matter within their own power to settle, but I have a rooted objection (and I feel that my countrymen have) to the representative of Canada at the Seat of Empire being abased before the representative of our neighbours and not to have extended to him all the courtesies and consideration that is apparently so gladly shown to the representative of the American people or, for that matter, the people of Egypt who, during the last few weeks only, have been represented by a Minister in London.

I trust I am not adding to your worries but I really think there is more of this subject than appears on the surface and consequently inflict this letter on you with the hope that you will postpone the announcement to the House.

Yours sincerely,

PETER C. LARKIN.

MY DEAR MR. LARKIN,

Downing Street, 28th July, 1924.

I AM sorry to see from your letter of the 26th July* that you are not quite satisfied with the arrangements made in regard to the precedence of High Commissioners on ceremonial occasions. These arrangements result, however, from a very careful examination of the situation, and they have received the concurrence of all the Dominion Prime Ministers and of the Government of India as well as the approval of His Majesty the King. All the Governments concerned have been notified that the announcement will be made to-morrow, and I am afraid, therefore, that it is impossible now to postpone it.

I might perhaps add that I had not understood that Mr. Mackenzie King's acceptance of the proposals was to be regarded as tentative, in view of the terms of his letter of the 31st January,† and the fact that over a month ago he pressed upon me by telegram the desirability of early publication in Canada of these very arrangements.

I am sending a copy of your letter to Mr. Mackenzie King, together with my reply.

Yours sincerely,

MY DEAR [MACKENZIE KING,] [MR. BRUCE,] [MR. MASSEY,] [GENERAL HERTZOG,]
DEAR [MR. PRESIDENT,] [MR. MONROE,]

* No. 271.

† No. 261.

[To General Hertzog and Mr. Monroe: As you may be aware, one of the matters which came before the Imperial Conference last year was the position of Dominion]

[To Messrs. Mackenzie King, Bruce and Massey: You will remember that amongst other matters discussed at the Imperial Conference last year was the position of Dominion]

[Not to Mr. Cosgrave: High Commissioners in the matter of British taxation, and the British representatives at the Conference promised to look into the question. The subject is one of considerable difficulty, but the points involved have now been gone into thoroughly and I write to let you know the view which my colleagues and I take.]

[To Mr. Cosgrave only: In your letter of the 19th April* about the precedence of Dominion High Commissioners in this country, you referred to the question of the position of High Commissioners in the matter of British taxation, which was also discussed at the Imperial Conference. The subject is one of considerable difficulty, but the points involved have now been gone into thoroughly and I write to let you know the view which my colleagues and I take.]

The Memorandum circulated to the Conference, of which I enclose a copy for convenience of reference, sets out clearly the differences which at present exist between the privileges granted to foreign Ambassadors and Ministers and to High Commissioners. You will see from this that very considerable concessions are already made to High Commissioners as regards taxation; in fact, wherever circumstances permit, they are now in the same position as foreign representatives. The differences do not in themselves appear to us to be of very great importance in practice; in theory they are based on the distinction between the position of a British subject who comes as a representative of his Government from one part of the King's Dominions to another and the position of a foreign citizen who, as the accredited representative of a foreign State, has a certain status under International Law.

To take in detail the main points in which differences exist:—

(1) Income Tax.—You will see that under the principal heading, namely, Official Salary, the High Commissioners are now exempted by statute on the same basis as foreign representatives. As regards remittances from abroad and income from investments in this country there does not appear to be any sufficient ground on which High Commissioners could claim exemption from taxation which falls on all other British subjects. In any event, any such exemption would require legislative authority, to which the Treasury consider that it would be difficult to secure the assent of Parliament.

(2) Customs Duties.—The difference at present is that, while Ambassadors and Ministers of foreign countries are granted exemption on goods imported for their personal use at any time, this exemption is only granted to High Commissioners on first arrival. We shall be very glad to extend this arrangement to cover goods imported at any time by High Commissioners for their personal use; the only requirement would be that in each case a signed application should be made by the High Commissioner giving particulars of the goods and definitely stating that they are for his own personal use.

(3) Rates.—Rates in this country represent a payment to local authorities in respect of certain services. It is true that certain reliefs are granted to foreign representatives, but these extend only to part of the rates; they are also granted on a basis of reciprocity. We doubt very much whether it would be possible to work out a similar scheme of reciprocity in the case of the Dominions. Moreover, the Crown in this country, in order to avoid casting additional burdens on other ratepayers in the neighbourhood, not only forgoes any claim to exemption in respect of its own buildings, but also bears the cost of the reliefs accorded to foreign representatives, and in the circumstances I feel sure that you will agree that it would be inappropriate that exemption from payment for the local services rendered should be claimed on behalf of Dominion Governments or their representatives.

To sum up, while we are anxious to do all that is possible towards improving the position of High Commissioners in this country, we feel that the only practicable step which we can take in this matter is that set out above in connexion with exemption from customs duties, which I imagine should prove of considerable value. But I will await any observations you may desire to make before arranging for definite instructions to be given on this point.

I am sending a similar letter to the Prime Ministers of the other Dominions [Not to Mr. Cosgrave: and to the President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State.]

Yours sincerely,

J. H. THOMAS.

Enclosure in No. 273.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE, 1923.

COMMITTEE ON PUBLICATION OF CORRESPONDENCE AND STATUS OF HIGH COMMISSIONERS.

STATEMENT AS TO PRIVILEGES AT PRESENT GRANTED TO

- (a) Foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, and
(b) Dominion High Commissioners in the matter of British Taxation.

(Secret.)

(E. (P.S.) 2.)

I. INCOME TAX.

(1) THE privileges in regard to Income Tax enjoyed by an Ambassador or Minister of a foreign State are secured to him by International Law, and depend on the fact that he represents a foreign State. Thus a foreign Government, and equally the permanent individual Head of a foreign State, are regarded as wholly exempt from British Income Tax.

The representative character of an Ambassador or Minister entitles him, not indeed to complete exemption from Income Tax, but to very wide immunities. These immunities are only one aspect—and an inseparable aspect—of the general diplomatic status accorded to him under International Law; another aspect is his immunity from legal proceedings.

(2) In the case of High Commissioners for the self-governing Dominions prior to 1916-17 no special relief was granted. From that year onwards relief from Income Tax on official emoluments has been given and this relief has now been made statutory by Section 19 of the Finance Act, 1923. The concession made in 1916-17 was analogous to that made to the Consular and certain other representatives of foreign States. (From 1922-23 onwards Consular representatives are the only class of foreign non-diplomatic representative to enjoy such relief.)

(3) The comparative position may be tabulated as follows:—

Nature of Income.	Ambassadors and Ministers.	High Commissioners.
(a) Income from earnings	Diplomatic emoluments exempt.	Official emoluments exempt.
(b) Income from Investments, &c.	Remittances from abroad exempt. Income from Investments in the United Kingdom (except from British Government securities) liable	Remittances from abroad liable. Income from Investments in the United Kingdom liable.
(c) Income from house or land property in United Kingdom	Exempt, if occupied for diplomatic purposes. Liable, if either (1) occupied for purely private purposes, or (2) let to a tenant. (Similar reliefs apply in the relatively trifling matters of I.H.D. and Land Tax).	Liable (but property relieved from tax, if owned by the Dominion Government, and occupied for Governmental purposes).

II. CUSTOMS AND EXCISE DUTIES.

(4) As a matter of international practice foreign Ambassadors or Ministers are granted exemption from customs duties in respect of articles required for their personal use.

The main articles now coming under the exemptions are motor-cars, tobacco, spirits and wine.

(5) Dominion High Commissioners are accorded relaxation in the examination of their baggage, and are also exempted from payment of all customs duties on first arrival.

No further exemption from customs duties is granted, except as regards motor-cars for official use.

(6) Remission of excise duties has never been granted, either to foreign or Dominion representatives.

In the case of foreign representatives, however, there is an old standing exemption in respect of the relatively small matter of Establishment Excise Licence Duties, e.g., the gun licence and the licence to employ a male servant.

III. RATES, AND MOTOR-CAR LICENCE DUTY

(charges assessed and levied by the Local Authorities).

(7) Under reciprocal agreement with nearly all foreign countries foreign Ambassadors or Ministers are relieved of the part of the Rates referable to services not of direct benefit to them (poor relief, police rate, &c.)

(8) There is no corresponding relief applicable to Dominion representatives.

(No exception is given in respect of property owned by the Crown; the Crown in this country voluntarily forgoes any claim, in order to avoid adversely affecting other ratepayers in the neighbourhood).

(9) Foreign Ambassadors and Ministers are exempted from motor-car licence duty whether their cars are owned by themselves or by their Governments.

Dominion High Commissioners are exempted from motor-car licence duty in respect of Government-owned cars used by them for official purposes.

(10) It may be added that no privileges at all are given in regard to stamp duties or in regard to death duties except that any movable property which may be actually situate in an Embassy or Legation is exempt from death duties.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 12th June, 1924.

I HAVE the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to bring to your notice that the Commonwealth Nationality Act provides that the President of a Committee of Inquiry constituted to investigate circumstances in connexion with the revocation of Certificates of Naturalization shall be a person who has been, or is, a Justice of the High Court of Australia, a Judge of the Supreme Court of a State, or the officer holding the principal judicial office in a Territory, these persons corresponding to those named in the British Act.

My Prime Minister states that in practice it has been found difficult to secure a President with the requisite qualifications, and in order to facilitate the holding of inquiries the Commonwealth Government submitted to the last Imperial Conference the question of amending the Act to enable a Committee of Inquiry to be presided over by a Judge of a District Court or of a County Court, or by a Special or Stipendiary Magistrate.

The Committee of the Conference which investigated the matter came to the following conclusion:—

"Having heard the reasons for which the Commonwealth Government is disposed to provide that the presidency over such Committees of Inquiry may, where convenient, be taken by persons holding judicial office of lower standing than that prescribed at present by the Commonwealth statute, the Committee see no objection to a question of machinery of this nature being settled according to local circumstances and needs, if after examination of the experience of the Committee of Inquiry and of the practice which has grown up in the United Kingdom, the Commonwealth Government desires to make an alteration."

The Commonwealth Government is desirous of taking steps to amend the Nationality Act in the direction indicated, but before doing so would be glad to learn the views of the British Home Office on the subject. I should be glad, therefore, if you would be so good as to ascertain and communicate to me, for the information of my Ministers, the views of the Home Office.

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 18th June, 1924.

I HAVE the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to bring to your notice that at the last Imperial Conference the question of the amendment of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act proposed by the Commonwealth Government, which would permit of the readmission to British nationality of British-born women who had married unnaturalized aliens and had been deserted or separated from them, was discussed by a Committee appointed for the purpose, and the following resolution passed:—

"The Committee are of opinion that the principle of the existing law that the nationality of a woman depends on that of her husband should be maintained. They nevertheless recommend that power should be taken to readmit a woman to British nationality in cases where the married state, though subsisting in law, has to all practical purposes come to an end."

The conclusions of the Committee were reported to the Conference and received its approval.

As several instances have come under the notice of the Commonwealth Government of cases where women of Australian birth, married to aliens and separated from them, have suffered hardships through ineligibility to reacquire British nationality, my Ministers are desirous of taking early action to remedy this by amending the Commonwealth Nationality Act. My Prime Minister informs me that such an amendment must be preceded by a similar amendment of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act.

The Commonwealth Government will be glad, therefore, if you would be so good as to bring the matter to the notice of His Majesty's Government with a view to its being given early and favourable consideration.

MEMORANDUM.

(Confidential.)

COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY APPOINTED UNDER SECTION 7 (3) OF THE BRITISH NATIONALITY AND STATUS OF ALIENS ACT, 1914, IN CONNEXION WITH REVOCATION OF NATURALIZATION.

THE Committee of Inquiry appointed in the United Kingdom under this subsection is a permanent Committee of three members; its President is a Judge of the High Court; of the other two members one is a member of the House of Lords and the other a County Court Judge. It conducts its deliberations in accordance with rules made by the Secretary of State, which provide inter alia that the Committee may, if it thinks fit, act upon any information which is available whether or not such information is given on oath or would be admissible in a Court of Law.

It is open to the Secretary of State under the Act to refer a case to the High Court instead of to the Committee, but the rules of the High Court as to procedure and evidence are not appropriate to this kind of inquiry and would involve unnecessary difficulties and delays. The function of the Committee is to investigate and advise the Secretary of State on certain questions which are essentially questions of fact; the proceedings are not judicial proceedings and the scope of the Inquiry is not and ought not to be limited by the strict rules of evidence or the procedure of the Courts. In the view of this Department, therefore, the power to refer a case to the High Court is intended only for use in very exceptional circumstances, and no case has yet occurred in which such reference has been made.

Apart from the above point as to procedure, the experience of this Department has shown that there are certain definite advantages arising from the constitution of the Committee as a single and permanent body for conducting inquiries under the section. There is no legal obligation on the Secretary of State to accept the Committee's findings, but in practice he invariably acts upon them and it is therefore of great importance, for the purpose of securing continuity of policy, that all the cases submitted should be more or less uniformly treated and that the decisions, which often involve questions of law as well as of fact, should so far as possible be consistent with one another. It is obvious that this result is more likely to be attained by the appointment of a single standing Committee. Further, the cases which the single Committee appointed in the United Kingdom has dealt with form a continually growing body of precedents, which constitute something like a code of case-law on questions arising out of Section 7 of the Act, and this code is not only of assistance to the Committee itself but is of the greatest value to the Secretary of State in dealing with new cases as they arise, and in deciding as to the kind of case in which he need not trouble the Committee for advice, but can utilize the power, conferred on him by Section 7 of the Act, of revoking a Certificate of Naturalization without reference.

For example, under Section 7 (2) (d) of the Act the Secretary of State has power to revoke a Certificate of Naturalization without reference to the Committee where the holder has been absent for more than seven years from, and has severed his connexion with, His Majesty's Dominions, and where the continuance of the Certificate is not conducive to the public good. This is the most frequent type of case in which the question of revocation arises, and as a result of the Committee's decisions in individual cases of this kind there is now available a number of dicta on certain points of difficulty involved. Among other questions on which the Secretary of State has received considerable assistance are (1) the meaning and practical application of the condition precedent to revocation on this ground that the Secretary of State shall be satisfied that the grantee of the Certificate has not maintained substantial connexion with His Majesty's Dominions, and (2) what are the circumstances in which the continuance of the Certificate may be said to be not conducive to the public good. On this latter point the Committee have formulated some important general principles, e.g., that it rests with the Crown to establish that the continuance of the Certificate is not conducive to the public good, and that this point cannot be taken as necessarily established merely by proving absence from this country under the conditions indicated in the Statute. At the same time the Committee have given their opinion that they consider it undesirable that British nationality should be possessed by persons of alien origin permanently resident abroad. With the assistance of these and similar dicta the Department is in a position to decide without difficulty whether in any individual instance a prima facie case is established for taking steps for revocation under the sub-section and, if so, whether the case falls within precedents which enable the Secretary of State to revoke the Certificate out of hand, or whether it presents sufficient points of doubt to make it desirable to obtain the Committee's advice. By the differentiation of cases in accordance with the practice of the Committee along these lines, and by reference to decided cases for guidance on particular points, the Department and the Committee alike are saved much time and trouble, and in the experience of the Home Office the policy adopted in the United Kingdom has led to the gradual formation of a settled and consistent system of practice on the whole question of revocation.

Downing Street, 6th November, 1924.

As [Your Excellency's] [your] Ministers are aware, the Imperial Conference of 1923 considered certain questions connected with the law of British nationality, which were referred to a Committee of the Conference under the Chairmanship of the Secretary of State for Home Affairs. These questions included:—

(a) The grant of Certificates of Naturalization to persons resident in Mandated Territories.

(b) The nationality of married women.

2. As regards the former question, the Committee recommended that the power of granting Certificates of Imperial Naturalization should be extended so as to cover persons resident in "B" and "C" Mandated Territories and also in Protectorates. As regards the latter question, it adopted the following resolution:—

"The Committee are of opinion that the principle of the existing law that the nationality of a married woman depends on that of her husband should be maintained. They nevertheless recommend that power should be taken to readmit a woman to British nationality in cases where the married state, though subsisting in law, has to all practical purposes come to an end."

These recommendations were approved by the Conference.

3. I enclose the draft of a Bill* which has been prepared in order to give effect to the conclusions of the Imperial Conference on the above matters, together with an explanatory memorandum. Should your Ministers have any observations to offer on the provision of the draft Bill, His Majesty's Government would be glad to receive them.

4. I take this opportunity to state that two further proposals for the amendment of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, have recently been under consideration. These are:—

(1) That facilities should be given for the acquisition of British nationality by children of the third generation born abroad of British parents during the War;

(2) That a British-born woman should not on marriage lose her British nationality if and so long as she does not acquire the nationality of her husband under the law of his country.

5. I enclose a memorandum dealing with these two proposals. As regards the second, I would invite reference to my despatch Dominions No. 374 of the 7th August.† His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn your Ministers' views on these proposals, and to know whether they would concur in the amendment of the Act of 1914 in the manner indicated in the memorandum.

Enclosure 1 in No. 278.

MEMORANDUM ON THE DRAFT BILL TO AMEND THE BRITISH NATIONALITY AND STATUS OF ALIENS ACTS, 1914-1922.

1. The accompanying draft of a Bill† to amend the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, is designed to give effect to the recommendations of the Imperial Conference, 1923, as regards the naturalization of persons in Mandated Territories and as regards the naturalization of women married to aliens and living apart from their husbands.

2. The recommendation of the Conference with regard to naturalization in Mandated Territories was to the effect that the power of granting Certificates of Imperial Naturalization should be extended so as to cover persons resident in "B" and "C" Mandated Territories. The Conference further recommended that similar facilities should be extended to persons resident in Protectorates. It has been thought desirable that the requisite amendment should take the form of a new section to be inserted at the end of Part II of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914 (herein called the Principal Act). It is accordingly provided in Clause 1 (1) of the Bill that a new section called Section 9 A shall be added to Part II of the Principal Act. The effect of the new Clause is to give power to His Majesty by Order in Council to extend Part II of the Principal Act to the Mandated Territories named in Part I of a new (4th) Schedule which is to be added to the Principal Act, and to the Protectorates named in Part II of the 4th Schedule.

Similarly in the case of a Mandated Territory which is administered by a self-governing Dominion provision is made in sub-section (3) of the new Section 9 (A), which will enable the Governor-General in Council of the Dominion (if the legislature of the Dominion has adopted Part II of the Principal Act) to make an Order in Council extending Part II of the Act to the territory administered by that Dominion. The self-governing Dominions concerned and the territories administered by them are named in a 5th Schedule which is added to the Principal Act by the Bill.

The effect of the application of Part II of the Principal Act as provided in the new Section 9 A (1) will be that residence in the territory to which the Order in Council applies will be treated for the purpose of qualification for Imperial naturalization as if it were residence in His Majesty's Dominions. It is to be observed that such residence will count whether it took place before or after the date when the Order in Council comes into operation. Further, an intention to continue to reside in such territory is, as provided by Section 9 A (1) to be regarded as if it were as intention to reside in His Majesty's Dominions.

The provisions described in the foregoing paragraph are necessarily of a somewhat technical character, but there appears to be no reason why the provisions of the Bill should give rise to difficulties in administration. The necessary modifications of the Principal Act for the purpose of applying the provisions of Part II to the territory in question will, as provided in sub-section 2 of the new Section 9 A, be contained in the Order of His Majesty in Council or the Order of the Governor-General in Council as the case may be; and a draft of a form of Order in Council which (subject to any amendment which on consideration may appear desirable) would appear suitable for cases falling under sub-section (1) of Section 9 A is attached. (Appendix A.)

4. As regards the further recommendation of the Imperial Conference on the subject of the nationality of married women, it will be recalled that the Conference, while of opinion that the existing law that the nationality of a married woman depends on that of her husband should be maintained, nevertheless recommended that power should be taken to readmit a woman to British nationality in cases where the marriage state, though subsisting in law, has to all practical purposes come to an end. For the purpose of giving effect to this recommendation it is proposed in Clause 2 of the draft Bill to add an additional proviso at the end of Section 10 of the Principal Act. It is thought that this provision as drafted, for the grant of a Certificate of Naturalization to a woman whose separation from her husband is presumed to be permanent, substantially meets the intention of the recommendation by the Conference. The authority granting the Certificate will have power in his discretion to decide whether or not the separation in any particular case may be presumed to be permanent, and whether the circumstances are such that a Certificate should be granted to the woman apart from her husband.

* No. 276.

APPENDIX A.

DRAFT FORM OF ORDER IN COUNCIL.

1. (1) THIS Order may be cited as the British Nationality and Status of Aliens () Order, 1924.

(2) In this Order the expression "the territory" means ().

(3) The Interpretation Act, 1889, applies to the interpretation of this Order in like manner as it applies to the interpretation of an Act of Parliament.

2. The principal Act shall extend to the territory subject to the modifications hereinafter expressed.

3. In Section 2 and in sub-sections (2) and (5) of Section 7 of the Principal Act the expression "His Majesty's Dominions" and in sub-section (2) of Section 19 of the same Act, the expression "British possession" shall respectively be construed as including the territory.

4. Section 8 of the Principal Act (which relates to the power of Governments of British Possessions to grant Certificates of Imperial Naturalization) shall in its application to the territory be adapted so as to read as follows:—

"8. (1) Subject as hereinafter provided the Governor of the territory or a person acting under his authority shall have the same power to grant a Certificate of Naturalization as the Secretary of State has under this Act, and the provisions of this Act as to the grant and revocation of such a Certificate shall apply accordingly with the substitution of:—

(a) 'The Governor or a person authorized by him' for 'the Secretary of State';

(b) 'The territory' for 'the United Kingdom';

(c) 'The Court of the territory' for 'the High Court'; and

(d) 'The English language or the language' for 'the English language'; and with the omission of any reference to the Lord Chancellor.

"Provided that the exercise of powers under this section by the Governor or a person authorized by him shall be subject in each case to the approval of the Secretary of State, and any Certificate proposed to be granted and any proposal to revoke any such Certificate shall be submitted to the Secretary of State for his approval.

"(2) Any Certificate of Naturalization granted under this section shall have the same effect as a Certificate of Naturalization granted by the Secretary of State under this Act."

Enclosure 2 in No. 278.

MEMORANDUM ON PROPOSED FURTHER AMENDMENTS TO THE NATIONALITY AND STATUS OF ALIENS ACT, 1914.

In addition to the proposals discussed at the Imperial Conference of 1923, His Majesty's Government have at the present time under consideration further proposals for the amendment of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, and it seems desirable to take this opportunity of explaining these further proposals with a view to obtaining any observations which the Dominion Governments may desire to make. The proposals and certain points which arise for consideration in connexion therewith are as follows:—

A. That facilities should be given for the acquisition of British nationality by children of the third generation born abroad of British parents during the late War.

(i) His Majesty's Government have taken this proposal into consideration in consequence of representations which have been made to them that there are children in the above category who would have been born on British territory (and would thus have become British subjects at birth) if their mothers had not been prevented by the circumstances of the War from leaving the foreign country in which they were resident. While, however, the grievance involved arouses sympathy, it requires careful examination before it is attempted to apply a remedy by legislation.

(ii) It would not be practicable to attempt to confine the necessary legislation to the comparatively small number of individuals who are the subject of the special grievance which His Majesty's Government have been asked to remove; and any facilities provided must extend to the whole class of children of the third generation born during the War period. The question arises whether in these circumstances the proposal is one which ought to be adopted.

(iii) It will be recollected that with the approval of the Conference of Prime Ministers held in 1921, an amendment of the Principal Act was introduced by the Act of 1922, under which facilities were provided for the acquisition of British nationality by registration at British Consulates of the birth of children born abroad of British parents. The operation of this Act was with two exceptions confined to children born after the passing of the Act of 1922. The exceptions are (1) children of the second generation born abroad of British parents since the Act of 1914 came into force. As regards these children—who it is to be remembered would have been British subjects under the pre-1914 law—the Act of 1922 was expressly made retrospective, and gave facilities for the registration of their births within the year after the first of August, 1922. (2) Children of the third generation who were born within the year (or in special cases two years) before the Act of 1922 was passed, and who could accordingly still be registered within the time which the Act allowed.

The present proposal could be carried out by an amendment of the registration provisions introduced by the Act of 1922 into the Principal Act (paragraph (v) of Section 1 (1) (b)) so as to extend the retrospective operation of these provisions by providing facilities for the registration within a certain time, say one year, after the passing of the amending enactment, of the births of all children of the third generation born abroad during the War. It may be mentioned, however, that the circumstances which have given rise to the present demand for these facilities were not lost sight of at the time when the Act of 1922 was formulated, and it was decided at that time that as the children of the third generation born abroad had not at any time had any claim to British nationality under our law there would be no justification for including within the scope of the new registration scheme any of such children who were born before the time when the Act began to operate.

Further information, which has recently reached His Majesty's Government as to the satisfaction given by the Act of 1922 to the great majority of members of the important British Communities in the South American Republics, who had pressed for remedial legislation, shows that there is reason to fear that the present proposal might revive or create a grievance among the small minority of persons of the third generation who, having been born before the War, would not come within its scope.

It was thought, moreover, that in many instances the difficulty might be overcome by means of the facilities provided by Section 5 (2) of the Principal Act for the grant of certificates of naturalization to minors; and His Majesty's Government accordingly promised that favourable consideration would be given to applications by children in this category in the event of their visiting this country for the purpose of education or otherwise.

(iv) His Majesty's Government, in entertaining the present proposal, have been moved by the arguments that the interference with travelling facilities during the War involves a special hardship which ought, if possible, to be remedied, and is not fully met by the offer to consider favourably applications by the children concerned for naturalization as minors.

(v) Before proceeding any further in the matter it would be of advantage to His Majesty's Government to receive any observations which the Dominion Governments may desire to offer; and in particular to be informed whether they would be prepared to concur in an amendment of paragraph (v) of Section 1 (1) (b) of the Principal Act (as amended by the Act of 1922) for the purpose of enabling the birth of a child of the third generation born abroad of British parents during the period between the date of the commencement of the War (4th August, 1914) and the date when the Act of 1922 was passed (4th August, 1922), to be registered.

B. That a British-born woman shall not on marriage lose her British nationality if and so long as she does not acquire the nationality of her husband under the law of his country.

(i) It has been represented to His Majesty's Government that inconvenience and hardship have been suffered, in particular, by women of British birth married to citizens of the United States of America in consequence of the operation of the United States law known as the Cable Act, which was passed on 22nd September, 1922. Under that Act a woman who, after the passing of the Act marries a citizen of the United States of America, does not acquire American citizenship and has to wait until she has been resident in the United States for a period of at least a year before she can acquire her husband's nationality by naturalization. In the meantime, as she has lost her British nationality by marriage to an alien, she is without any nationality.

In consequence of the operation of the Cable Act difficulties have been experienced in regard to the grant of passport facilities to such women, and in a few instances permission to land in the United States of America has been refused or delayed by reason of the fact that the women concerned do not possess American citizenship. The above proposal to amend the Principal Act has been suggested as a remedy to meet the case, and attention has been drawn to the recommendation to the same effect in the draft report of the House of Lords members of the Joint Select Committee of both Houses which deliberated in 1923, on the subject of the Nationality of Married Women.

(ii) It must be observed that the above proposal, under which a woman who is a British subject would not lose her British nationality on marriage to an American citizen or to a citizen of any other foreign country which possesses a law similar to Section 2 of the Cable Act, is open to the objections that the nationality of a person in contemplation of British law ought not to be dependent on foreign law, and that the adoption of this proposal may introduce uncertainty into the position of British-born women who marry aliens, by reason of the fact that it will be necessary to ascertain in each case whether the woman in question has acquired her husband's nationality—a point which might not be easy to establish definitely.

(iii) Further, the difficulties experienced by women who have married citizens of the United States of America in securing passport facilities have been partly overcome by administrative arrangements with the United States Government; and any disability which they may suffer as regards obtaining leave to land in the United States of America would not be removed by the amendment proposed, since the women concerned would still be "aliens" in United States law.

(iv) The present position cannot, however, be regarded as wholly satisfactory and it is desirable to ascertain whether the Dominion Governments are disposed to agree that without reopening the decision of the Imperial Conference, 1923, not to adopt the sweeping change which was under consideration at that time, and to maintain the principle of the existing law that the nationality of a married woman depends on that of her husband—the minor concession involved in the present proposal should be granted.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,] Downing Street, [21st] [22nd] December, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, copies of a statement prepared at the recent Imperial Conference on the subject of the publication of official correspondence between the various Governments of the Empire.

2. The Conference considered the possibility of this statement being included in its published report, but decided that this course was not necessary. It was, however, thought that the statement should be included among the unpublished papers of the Conference, and should be communicated to the Dominion Governments for the use of any of the Prime Ministers who might wish to make a public announcement on the subject.

[To Irish Free State only: 3. A similar despatch has been sent to the other self-governing Dominions.]

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 280.

THE Conference gave its attention to the desire of the Parliaments of the various parts of the Empire to be afforded the fullest information possible on all matters on which negotiations were going on, or discussions taking place, between two or more Governments.

The Conference recognized that if consultation, to which it attached great importance, was to be carried out effectively, this must involve a frank and confidential interchange of views in written or telegraphic communications, and that many of the communications exchanged between the Governments, particularly in connexion with foreign policy and defence, could not be made public. At the same time, the feeling of the Conference was that as many communications as possible ought to be made available for the use of the Parliaments, and it was thought desirable to discuss the circumstances in which official communications between the Governments could and could not be made public.

It was generally agreed that any official communication not marked "confidential" or "secret" or not clearly intended to be treated as such, might be regarded as available for publication without reference to any other Government.

It was understood that, so far as each Government was concerned, and subject to the need for mutual consent in certain cases, the responsibility as to publication of correspondence with other Governments rested with the Ministers of the Crown in the Dominions as in Great Britain.

It was, of course, realized that it would be necessary to observe the general rules regarding diplomatic correspondence, and that in particular the consent of foreign Governments must be obtained before publication of communications to or from those Governments.

The Conference thought that should the eventual, but not immediate, publication of certain communications be contemplated, it would be well for some indication of this to be given at the time when those communications were sent. This arrangement would facilitate subsequent publication if decided upon. It was, however, agreed that the consent of all the Governments interested must be obtained before any papers or communications were made public which were marked at the time of despatch to be of a confidential or secret nature, or were transmitted in confidential or secret despatches.

XII.

IMPERIAL ECONOMIC CONFERENCE, 1923.

Summary of Conclusions [Cmd. 1990]: Report [Cmd. 2009.]

Note.—The numbering of the resolutions follows that employed in [Cmd. 1990] and [Cmd. 2009].

1. OVERSEA SETTLEMENT WITHIN THE EMPIRE.

It was decided to adopt the following resolution:—

This Imperial Economic Conference approves the report of the Committee appointed to consider questions relating to overseas settlement.* The Conference endorses the recommendations of the Committee, and notes with satisfaction the arrangements as recorded in the report which have been arrived at, or are in contemplation, with a view to improving the facilities for settlement within the Empire.

The Conference takes this opportunity of reaffirming its sense of the importance of the policy of overseas settlement to the well-being of the Empire.

* See pages 136-150 of [Cmd. 2009].

Correspondence relating to Oversea Settlement is printed in Dominions No. 89.

2. CO-OPERATION IN FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO IMPERIAL DEVELOPMENT.

It was agreed that the scheme recommended by the Committee on Co-operation in Financial Assistance to Imperial Development be adopted. The report of the Committee reads as follows:—

The Committee on Financial Co-operation recommends for adoption by the Conference the following scheme, which was submitted to the Committee by the representatives of His Majesty's Government.

The suggestion which the Imperial Government make is that in order to facilitate the anticipation of work which otherwise would not be taken in hand for some years they should give a contribution towards the interest charges on loans raised for capital expenditure of this kind by public-utility undertakings (viz., communications, power, lighting, water, drainage, irrigation, &c.). These undertakings might be under either public or private control or management.

The assistance would be in respect of expenditure on orders placed in this country, and would be applicable only to schemes approved by the Dominion or Central Government concerned and certified by it to be in anticipation of normal expenditure. Payment would be made to the Dominion or Central Government, which would be responsible for payment to the ultimate recipient.

It is suggested that the maximum grant should be three-quarters of the interest charges for a period of five years.

In order to qualify for the Imperial contribution a scheme must be accepted by the Imperial Government within the next three years. The approval on behalf of the Imperial Government would be given after consultation with the Treasury, the Colonial or India Office, and the Board of Trade.

It would be understood that priority will be given to schemes involving the earliest placing of orders.

SIR,

Downing Street, 12th February, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to invite the attention of your Ministers to the Scheme for Co-operation in Financial Assistance to Imperial Development, which was adopted by the Imperial Economic Conference at its meeting on the 2nd November, 1923. 29TH FEBRUARY. With reference to your telegram of 20th February* and to Resolution No. 2 of Imperial Economic Conference dealing with co-operation in financial assistance to Imperial development.

This Government desires to know if proposed assistance would be available in following instance. The number of cattle in this Colony will possibly prove to be insufficient to justify immediate erection of meat refrigerating works in Southern Rhodesia by unaided private enterprise. If the works erected they will be unlikely to yield any dividend on capital expenditure for the first five years. Nevertheless, the public benefit involved in the establishment of these works to enable the export trade in beef to be commenced is considered sufficient to justify liberal State assistance to the undertakers. All efforts to secure erection of the works by private firms without exorbitant and onerous concessions which are considered impossible have so far been unavailing. Suggested maximum grant of three-quarters of interest charges for five years on purchase price of machinery ordered in United Kingdom would in all probability be of material assistance in overcoming difficulties. Total cost of the works is estimated at about a million sterling. This Government will contribute free land, grant customs exemption and other facilities. My Government inquires whether the resolution referred to would apply to proposed undertaking, and, if so, whether the Imperial Government would be disposed to consider favourably an application for assistance under the said resolution.—CHANCELLOR.

20TH MARCH. With reference to Report of Committee on Financial Co-operation adopted by the Imperial Economic Conference in November last, my Prime Minister asks me to communicate to you the following information in regard to New Zealand's participation in the scheme, with the request that representations may be brought to the notice of the Chancellor of the Exchequer:—

Begins: The policy of the New Zealand Government respecting the hydro-electric development in the Dominions involves expenditure of approximately £1,000,000 per annum spread over the next ten years. The details of this expenditure for the next six years as set out in Public Works Statement laid before Parliament last Session (page XI) amounts to £6,513,000 of which it is estimated that about one-half will be on account of imported material and that orders for 90 per cent. of the latter will be placed in the United Kingdom.

In order to take advantage of Empire Development Fund Grants, the New Zealand Government proposes to expedite the next six years' programme, spreading the total outlay over four years instead of six years, and issue specifications for necessary materials as early as possible, and that arrangements be made with His Majesty's Government to advance such additional amount(s) as may be necessary to effect such expedition on account of orders for plant and material placed in Great Britain.

The Government is also considering proposals for further development in connexion with railway public works, and posts and telegraphs departments, and will be glad to supply any further information which may be required for His Majesty's Government. Ends.

16TH JULY. My despatch 5th March [Dominions 100] [82]† Co-operation in Financial Assistance to Imperial Development. His Majesty's Government have had under consideration procedure required in dealing with applications under Section 2 of Trade Facilities Act. They are appointing small Standing Committee, as contemplated in Report of Committee of Imperial Economic Conference (see page 172), whose duties will be to advise Treasury whether statutory conditions are fulfilled. These duties defined in Act as follows:—

(1) That proceeds of loan towards interest on which contribution is to be made are to be applied to capital expenditure on or in connexion with a public utility undertaking as defined in Act in some part of His Majesty's Dominions in accordance with a scheme approved by Government of that part.

(2) That expenditure involved is in anticipation of expenditure which would normally have been incurred at a later date.

(3) That application of proceeds of loan is calculated to promote employment in this country, and that contribution would be in respect only of orders placed in this country.

* No. 281.

† No. 284.

(4) That application is made within three years from date of Act, 15th May, 1924, and in respect of loan to be raised before 15th May, 1927, and that aggregate amount of grants does not exceed one million pounds a year, or five million pounds in all.

Committee would settle exact information required as regards applications, but it may be assumed that following particulars would be certainly needed:

(a) General particulars of nature of scheme; of total amount and terms of proposed loan; and how it has been or will be raised.

(b) Evidence that scheme is approved by Government concerned, and that it represents acceleration of normal work.

(c) Evidence that applicant is in position to finance local expenditure on scheme and to provide its working capital.

(d) Particulars of expenditure in this country in respect of which contribution is sought and of orders to be placed for such expenditure.

(e) Evidence that scheme can be completed for total sum proposed to be raised.

In accordance with Act, grant in all cases will be paid to Government concerned which will be asked to undertake responsibility where necessary of paying ultimate recipient and in any case of transmitting such receipts from recipient as will be required for audit purposes. Copy of Act sent in my despatch 2nd July [Dominions 301.] [231.]*

Downing Street, 18th August, 1924.

WITH reference to [To all except Irish Free State: my telegram of the 16th of July,*] [To Irish Free State: my despatch of the 18th of July, No. 432,†] on the subject of Co-operation in Financial Assistance to Imperial Development, I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, a copy of a Treasury Minute dated the 31st of July setting up a Committee to consider applications received under Section 2 of the Trade Facilities Act, 1924.

I have, &c.,

[37482]

Enclosure in No. 293.

TREASURY MINUTE DATED 31ST JULY, 1924.

My Lords read Section 2 of the Trade Facilities Act, 1924, together with the resolution of the Imperial Economic Conference on which that section was based. They are pleased after consultation with the Departments concerned to appoint the following gentlemen to be an Advisory Committee on applications under the section and to make recommendations on such applications to the Treasury:—

Mr. W. K. Whigham.

Honourable Sidney Peel, representing the Board of Trade.

Mr. L. Couper, C.M.G., representing the Colonial Office.

When applications concerning India are under consideration Mr. C. H. Kisch, C.B., representing the India Office, will replace Mr. Couper.

The Secretary of the Advisory Committee will be Mr. W. J. Sainsbury.

My Lords desire the Committee to advise them in particular whether the various statutory conditions are fulfilled, i.e.,

(a) that the proceeds of any loan to the interest charge on which a contribution is made are to be applied to capital expenditure on or in connexion with a public utility undertaking (as defined in Section 2 (6) of the Act), in some part of His Majesty's Dominions in accordance with a scheme approved by the Government of that part of His Majesty's Dominions.

(b) that the expenditure involved in the scheme is in anticipation of expenditure which would normally have been incurred at a later date.

(c) that the loan is calculated to promote employment in the United Kingdom and that the United Kingdom contribution is only in respect of orders placed in this country.

(d) that the application for a grant is made within three years from the date of the Act (15th May, 1924); and that the aggregate amount of grants does not exceed £1,000,000 a year.

The Committee will further have to satisfy themselves that the schemes are reasonable, will be adequately financed by the applicants, that proper competitive prices are obtained for orders placed in the United Kingdom and generally on the proposals put forward by applicants.

Downing Street, 6th September, 1924.

WITH reference to my despatch [Dominions No. 387] [No. 330] of the 18th of August,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, copies of a memorandum prepared by the Trade Facilities Act Advisory Committee for the guidance of applicants for grants under Section 2 of the Trade Facilities Act, 1924. Steps are being taken to bring this memorandum to the notice of the Press in this country, and it is hoped that your Ministers will take steps to make the contents of the memorandum known through the Press in [Canada,] [Australia,] [New Zealand,] [the Union of South Africa,] [the Irish Free State,] [Newfoundland,] [Southern Rhodesia,]

The Committee desire to observe that, as stated in [Not to Irish Free State: my telegram of the 16th of July,†] [To Irish Free State: the telegram enclosed in my despatch No. 432 of the 18th July,‡] all such applications require the approval of the Government concerned, but in addition the Committee would welcome any comments which the Governments might feel able to make on the applications. In particular it would be of great assistance to the Committee, and would also avoid delay, if the Governments could satisfy themselves that the particulars supplied by applicants are full and complete and comply with the requirements set forth in the enclosed memorandum.

IV. The Committee think it useful to indicate broadly the information which will be required, at the outset:—

- (A) Details of the scheme with information as to the total cost and the part of the total cost in respect of which assistance is required, and information as to the economic justification or desirability of the project.

V. In order that the Government concerned may be fully informed and their approval to the scheme obtained without unnecessary delay a duplicate copy of the application should be sent to the Government at the same time as application is made to the Committee.

VI. In the event of the Committee in their discretion requiring legal or technical advice in the consideration of any application the cost of obtaining such advice will have to be met by the applicant.

3. IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

(i.) Tariff Preference.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

This Imperial Economic Conference, holding that, especially in present circumstances, all possible means should be taken to develop the resources of the Empire and trade between the Empire countries; desires to reaffirm the Resolution on the subject of Imperial Preference passed by the Imperial War Conference of 1917.

Further as regards Imperial Preference under the United Kingdom Customs Tariff to Empire goods, His Majesty's Government intimated that they intended to submit to Parliament the following proposals:—

(See also pages 47-50.)

No. 299.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

(15th November, 1923.)

MR. PRINGLE asked the Prime Minister whether, in return for the extended preference offered to the Dominions, the Governments of the Dominions have indicated their intention to reduce further the duties at present levied upon British goods; and, if so, whether he can state the number and nature of the proposed reductions?

THE PRIME MINISTER: The answer to the first part of the question is in the negative; the second part accordingly does not arise. The extensive preferences already accorded to this country by the Dominions were not accorded as part of any tariff bargain, and His Majesty's Government, in making their recent offers of extended preference which will apply to the whole Empire, have acted in this spirit.

PRIVATE and Personal. 14th March. Secret. Revised Union tariff has been confidentially communicated to my Office. Preference accorded Great Britain has been increased from three to five per cent. with a few exceptions in non-competitive lines and in special instances rebate(s) reach(es) ten per cent. or more according to the amount of help needed to enable Great Britain to compete successfully with American or Continental goods. I understand that the Board of Trade has been sounded as to directions in which preference was most necessary, and am informed that the Board's suggestions are embodied in the new schedule. Consequent losses in revenue have been compensated to some extent by the removal of the original three per cent. preference needlessly granted on goods protected by British patents or for which the British manufacturers hold the monopoly in South Africa, though it is still maintained in the case of certain cotton piece goods. His Majesty's Trade Commissioner and President of the Chamber of Commerce, Cape Town, satisfied that the revised tariff will confer invaluable benefit on British industries which are suffering from American or Continental competition. In particular the preference on motor cars averages about eight instead of present three per cent. For political reasons it has been found impossible to alter duties on agricultural implements. The revised tariff will come before Parliament when Budget introduced in fortnight's time, and it would greatly facilitate its passage through the House if preference proposals of last Imperial Conference are ratified before the end of this month. Their early submission to Commons would provide my Government with quid pro quo to persuade the Opposition that amended tariff is part of the general policy of reciprocal preferences within the Empire.—

FOLLOWING from Prime Minister to your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Position in regard to proposals placed before the Imperial Economic Conference in relation to Tariff Preference in this country has been considered in Cabinet. While final decision can only be taken in connexion with the forthcoming Budget, Cabinet have in the meantime asked me to explain confidentially to you and the other Prime Ministers that our present attitude towards the proposals will be determined by the following considerations:—

(1) It is impossible for us, in view of the many declarations which have been made on the subject on behalf of the Labour Party, to propose any new or increased taxation of food.

(2) We will continue, as regards existing taxes on food, to observe principle of Imperial Preference on present statutory basis so long as those taxes remain. This policy is without prejudice to retention of absolute freedom to propose to Parliament if and when we deem it expedient from the point of view of general and financial policy the removal of taxes on food.

(3) With reference to proposal that preference on sugar should be stabilized for ten years at its present amount of about half-penny per lb., we cannot admit right of any government to bind future governments and Parliament. But we should be willing to adhere to the preference on present statutory basis as under (2) above so long as a duty is retained on sugar.

Position on other resolutions of Economic Conference which, with exception of that relating to establishment of Economic Committee, are endorsed by us, is being summarized in a despatch which Secretary of State will send shortly. Ramsay MacDonald. Ends.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for communication to the President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State, a copy of a telegram* to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa, and the Governor of Newfoundland, conveying a message from the Prime Minister on the subject of the proposals placed before the Imperial Economic Conference relating to Tariff Preference in this country.

27TH MARCH. Your telegram of 24th (?25th) March, Secret.* Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: I take very grave view of your message but I wish to have doubtful points cleared up before I reply to it.

Your proposals as regards preferences and your reference to the present statutory basis in paragraph 2 are not clear to me. I note that you do not favour new or increased taxation of food, but where there is an existing tax on food an increased preference does not involve new or increased taxation but rather a remission of taxation. Am I to take it that preferences recommended at recent Conference even where they involve no new or increased taxation on food are proposed to be scrapped and that you will not go beyond preferences granted in 1917 and 1918. Does food include various forms of dried fruits? Is it proposed that wine and tobacco resolutions of the Conference should be accepted? Ends.

28TH MARCH. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram 24th [?25th] March.* In view of definite undertaking given by you to submit all recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference to non-party unfettered vote of the House, my Government trust that you will reconsider course of action which your telegram appears to contemplate. The resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference are of course binding on no Government, but we wish to emphasize most strongly that they are and should be regarded as the opinions of representatives of the whole of the Empire and as such entitled to fullest and most sympathetic consideration. Your declaration that you would submit them to a free vote of the House was quite satisfactory to us but to declare your attitude in the manner you suggest formally to oppose them as a Government and so apparently make the fate of the resolutions of this Empire Conference dependent on a party vote is in our opinion dangerous to a degree and quite outside the spirit and letter of your undertaking.

My Government clearly recognize your right to alter tax(es) at any time whether from the standpoint of general or financial policy; and we recognize too the difficulties with which you are confronted because of your party's attitude during the recent election with regard to the imposition of any new or increased taxation on food. As, however, you state that your Government, subject to these reservations, subscribes to principle of Imperial Preference, and as many of the recommendations of the Economic Conference can be adopted without violating any of the conditions which govern your declaration, we cannot understand your decision to abandon the proposals altogether, leaving whatever preference we have on its present inadequate statutory basis.

If such action were taken under a free vote of the House the effect on the Dominions would still be very serious; but if taken as result of a British Government's declared policy it would, we fear, be disastrous. The Dominions, as is clear from the report of the Economic Conference, regard this question as most vital and my Government will, if proposals are now abandoned, be placed in a most embarrassing position in endeavouring to maintain existing preferences on British goods.

With a full knowledge and appreciation of your difficulties which are in no way increased by our requests we most earnestly suggest that in these cases where a duty is already imposed with a preference to goods of Empire origin that such Empire goods should be admitted free and thus increase preference as recommended by the Conference. This is in strict conformity with the principle you have enunciated, it will not under any circumstances increase the taxes on food, and it might conceivably result in a substantial reduction in the price of food to the British consumer.

We urge you to reconsider this question most carefully before you take such a grave step as that foreshadowed in your telegrams. Ends.

2ND APRIL. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: From your telegram of 25th March,* in connexion with the tariff preference recommendations of the Economic Conference I presume that you intend to submit them to the House of Commons without any Government support as non-party questions. I admit His Majesty's Government's perfect right to deal with these recommendations as it may think fit, but there seems little doubt that British countries overseas will be very disappointed by such a course of action as you suggest and will not view it as in best interests of the Empire as a whole. The Dominions have never failed, and I firmly believe that they never will fail, in their duty to the Empire, but I cannot help thinking and saying that the treatment now proposed is not what they anticipated. New Zealand gives preference in her customs tariff to 425 articles imported from Great Britain but Britain at present gives preference to nothing imported from New Zealand. This state of affairs is looked upon here as inconsistent with true Empire spirit and as not likely to encourage British citizens at home and in the Dominions in their efforts towards the achievement of a self-supporting Empire. The Conference recommendations are only a small instalment of what many who vividly recollect the position at the outbreak of the Great War would like to see. It was then forcibly brought home to us that we had been depending to far too great an extent upon enemy countries for many commodities essential to our everyday life which could have been produced within the Empire. To us in New Zealand it seems inimical to the interests of the Empire that British money should be sent in large sums to foreign countries to purchase commodities that can be produced in abundance on the un-occupied lands of our Empire by British citizens. If Britain's prosperity is to be restored we believe the overseas countries of the Empire must buy more from the United Kingdom and vice versa. I am convinced that a policy of purchasing a large portion of our requirements from foreign countries will not populate our un-occupied territories or maintain the Empire's industrial supremacy. It has been said frequently and in my opinion correctly that we should think more of the welfare of British citizens and less of that of citizens of other countries. You and I may not see all political questions from the same point of view but I trust and believe we are at one in our desire to work for the good of the Empire and its citizens, and while I recognize the right of the British Parliament to manage its business in its own way I have thought it my duty to place you in possession of the views of the great majority of the people of New Zealand, which are also, I believe, shared in other parts of the Empire by millions of citizens. Ends.

25TH APRIL. Secret. My telegram 25th March.* Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Following is procedure which we propose to adopt in regard to Tariff Preference proposals placed before Imperial Economic Conference.

(1) Our attitude towards proposals will be indicated by Chancellor of Exchequer in the course of his Budget statement 29th April. This will give opportunity for general discussion on Committee Stage of the Budget Resolutions.

(2) Before Committee Stage of Finance Bill is reached a separate day would be allotted for debate on which declaratory Resolution embodying proposals of late Government could be moved. Decision on this Resolution would be left to the free vote of the House of Commons, and subsequent steps could be taken to incorporate in the Finance Bill any resolution endorsed by the House. Above procedure is, I think, most convenient manner of carrying out undertaking given by late Government and by myself as to submission of proposals to Parliament. That part of shipping taxation resolution relating to extension of section 18 of Finance Act, 1923, and the resolution relating to immunity of State enterprises, will be dealt with by Chancellor of Exchequer in Budget statement 29th April. 13TH DECEMBER. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: We have been examining carefully situation with regard to preference resolutions of Imperial Economic Conference and I propose to make a statement with regard to these in House of Commons on Wednesday. The greater part of these, involving a further preferential reduction of existing duties, presents no difficulty and I will make it clear that they are to be incorporated in next Budget as agreed upon at the Conference. The same applies to ten years undertaking to maintain sugar preference at specific rate of approximately halfpenny a pound as long as duty itself not below that rate. This in view of great reduction of sugar duty in last Budget represents doubling of percentage rate of preference. Real difficulty, however, has been created with regard to proposed additional duties by widespread assumption by candidates and electorate that my pledges against food taxation definitely excluded any new duties whatsoever on food. In order to avoid any charge of breach of faith in this respect and at the same time fulfil undertakings given at the Economic Conference we propose to devote the full money equivalent of the advantage which would have been conferred on Empire imports by the proposed additional duties to alternative schemes for improving the marketing of Empire imports of foodstuffs, and we propose to invite recommendations with regard to such schemes from the Imperial Economic Committee within the scope of whose reference they would naturally fall. Basis of calculation of advantage to Dominions under duties originally agreed will be equivalent of cost to Treasury of substituting for duty on foreign imports equivalent bounty on Empire imports. You will realize that sum thus made available for promotion of Empire imports will be substantial, not less than one million pounds a year. We believe that in this way Empire producers will get fully as effective help as would have been given by the duties themselves and that the help will be extended over a wider range of products. At the same time we think there will be a considerable advantage in presenting the Economic Committee with something definite to work upon from the outset, and would add the hope that in view of the practical task now before it Committee may be constituted as soon as possible. Baldwin. Ends.

(Extract.)

TARIFFS AND PREFERENCE.

THE PRIME MINISTER (MR. BALDWIN): . . . I come now to consider the Resolutions which were passed by the last Economic Conference and which were defeated in the last House of Commons by a very small vote. It is our intention to bring before the House all those Resolutions which involved reductions of duty, and on them no question of any kind, so far as I am aware, can arise. It is quite true they were defeated by a small majority in the last House of Commons. It is equally certain that they will be carried by a large majority in this House of Commons, and it may be that some of those who voted against them in the summer may be found to be supporters of them in the forthcoming year. I think it is most likely, although of course we have not had time yet to go into all these matters, that they will be included, subject to such modifications as may have resulted from a lowering of the dried fruit duties and any other changes which may have been made, which I have not in my mind, in my right honourable Friend's forthcoming Budget.

I come now to the more contentious question of the taxes on what are called foods. The House will have in recollection the pledges on the taxation of food which I gave during the Election, notably at Gravesend. I have no desire to explain or to qualify in any way what I said then, and I am quite aware that the remarks I made in that speech were taken by many candidates and many electors literally and apart from the context of the speech. The context of the speech might have modified them, but I recognize what the plain man understood by what I said, and so I am going to adopt the plain man's interpretation and I am going to stand literally by my words. What was said in the speeches to which I have listened this afternoon is quite true, that you can never get a complete system of Preference as it has been understood in this country until such a time as the country consents to have taxes on food, by which I mean taxes on the food of normal, general and elsewhere, is not to-day practical politics in this country, and the question is what we can do to bring about what I fancy we all desire, and that is increasing trade with our Dominions and making arrangements by which we may import Dominion produce into this country rather than the produce of foreign countries. I do not think there are half-a-dozen Members of the House who would take exception to that or would not be glad to see it, not only on sentimental but on strictly business grounds, because we all recognize that, whatever may happen in exchange or imports from other countries in the world, the tendency of the exchange is to get imports from the Dominions and for the Dominions to buy more and more from us, and, apart from that, anything that can ease the situation for this country by diverting the exchange from New York cannot fail to help us in our general trade and in the payment of our debts. So, broadly speaking, what I shall propose—I regret I am only able to give the barest outline to-day—the honourable and gallant Gentlemen the Member for Leith (Captain W. Benn) will admit it is rather early in the Session to be able to deal in detail with such a very complicated matter—what I am proposing to do, broadly speaking, is that the full money equivalent of the advantages which would have been conferred on the Empire in respect of all of those duties which are not retained should be devoted to the scheme for developing the trade of the Empire, and in the first case developing schemes of marketing.

I come back now to the terms of reference, which I gave earlier, to the Imperial Economic Committee. The money that we estimate it may be possible to allocate for this purpose is a round £1,000,000 a year, and we think that with an economic Committee of the kind we have in view, with expert members from this country and from the Dominions, and with terms of reference such as I have given to the

* Extract only printed.

House, it may be possible to open up entirely new and untried ways of developing trade with the Empire, trade which will bring in Empire stuff in lieu of foreign stuff and it may be, and I hope it will be, of far greater benefit to the Dominions themselves than those two or three small taxes which we proposed a year ago at the Empire Conference. . . .

(ii) Imperial Preference in Public Contracts.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

- (1) "That this Imperial Economic Conference re-affirms the principle that in all Government contracts effective Preference be given to goods made and materials produced within the Empire except where undertakings entered into prior to this Conference preclude such a course or special circumstances render it undesirable or unnecessary."
- (2) "That so far as practicable, efforts be made to ensure that the materials used in carrying out contracts be of Empire production."
- (3) "That State, provincial and local government authorities should be encouraged to take note of the foregoing resolutions."

Note.—No correspondence took place with the Dominion Governments on the subject of this resolution before the end of 1924. Certain correspondence regarding the British Empire Producers' Organization is printed below.

MY LORD DUKE,

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Grace herewith copy of Minute from Ministers on the subject of an arrangement by means of which British spending Departments inform the South African Federated Chamber of Industries of all tenders called for in South Africa or the East.

I have, &c.,

ARTHUR FREDERICK,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 314.

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 30th October, 1923.

MINUTE No. 773.

MINISTERS have the honour to inform His Royal Highness the Governor-General that they have been approached by the South African Federated Chamber of Industries with the request that they should ask the Imperial Government to instruct all spending Departments to communicate to the British Empire Producers' Organization such details as may assist tenderers in respect of any industries or commodities represented by the Federated Chamber of Industries, and to answer inquiries and consider representations made by the organization on behalf of Dominion and Colonial tenderers for such contracts.

Ministers are informed that a deputation has waited upon the President of the Board of Trade and that the proposal that British Government Departments and public bodies should place contracts with firms employing Empire labour and using materials of Empire origin, has been favourably received.

Ministers will welcome an arrangement by means of which British spending Departments inform the South African Federated Chamber of Industries of all tenders called for in South Africa or the East. This could be done either directly or through any organization nominated by the Federated Chamber of Industries. As the Federated Chamber desires to act in this matter through the British Empire Producers' Organization, the information could be sent by the British authorities through that organization.

Among the articles produced by South African industries which it appears to Ministers not unlikely that British spending Departments may require from time to time are the following:—

Building materials, including cement, bricks and tiles, asbesto cement, pottery and joinery; furniture and plywood; leather and leather goods, including saddlery, bags and trunks; tinware; foodstuffs, including maize, lucerne and fodder, maize-products, meat, canned fish, bacon, eggs, dried fruit, jam, lemons, macaroni, patent foods, table jellies, confectionery, salt, sugar, milk, mineral waters, wine and spirits, vinegar, tea, chicory, tobacco, cheroots and cigarettes; clothing, including ready-made clothing, blankets, shirts, boots and shoes and rubber heels and soles; candles and soap; rubber goods; chemicals; matting, twine, ropes and hawsers; corks; carts and wagons; motor spirit; explosives and fertilizers, and printing, including tin-printing.

Ministers would approve of a plan for reciprocating with other portions of the British Commonwealth if so desired, and would arrange for communicating the requirements of South African spending Departments to the representatives of producers in other parts of the Commonwealth.

Ministers submit this Minute to His Royal Highness the Governor-General with the request that he will forward it to the British Government for consideration and reply.

SIR,

I AM directed by the High Commissioner to inform you that his Government has been approached by the British Empire Producers' Organization, 3, Old Queen Street, S.W.1, with a proposal that the Organization should be placed in a position to assist Dominion tenderers for Government contracts for meat and other products. Certain firms which may have been in a position to tender successfully for the supply of Government stores have in the past been debarred through not having a representative on the spot to obtain the full information desired regarding the contracts offered. The British Empire Producers' Organization is willing to assist tenderers in every way possible. The Board in New Zealand appointed under the authority of the Meat Export Control Act, 1922, lends its support to the proposal, and the New Zealand Government therefore desires that the various purchasing departments of the Imperial Government should communicate to the Organization such details as may assist tenderers, and answer inquiries and consider representations made by the Organization on behalf of Dominion tenderers. The High Commissioner will, therefore, be glad if you will kindly approach the War Office, Admiralty, and other Departments concerned with the request that the desires of the British Empire Producers' Organization and the New Zealand Meat Export Control Board be given favourable consideration.

At the instance of the Premier (Mr. Lawson), I have the honour to transmit to your Grace a copy of a letter received from the Associated Chambers of Manufactures of Australia with reference to the encouragement of the use of Empire materials and labour by British Empire firms in connexion with Government and Public Body contracts.

2. My Ministers desire me to submit for your favourable consideration the suggestion that instructions be given to all spending departments to communicate to the British Empire Producers' Organization such details as may assist tenderers in quoting for Government contracts in respect of any Australian industries or commodities, and to answer inquiries and consider representations made on behalf of Australian tenderers for such contracts by the British Empire Producers' Organization.

I have, &c.,

The Honourable the Premier of Victoria,

Melbourne.

DEAR SIR,

THE British Empire Producers' Organization has communicated that the Board of Trade, London, was requested to confine to British Empire firms using Empire materials and labour in connexion with Government and Public Body contracts, and that they desire to see the interests of producers overseas are protected to the fullest extent in regard to the considerable concessions obtained as a result of the representations.

I have now received a cable that the Imperial Government has adopted their proposals entirely, and I have therefore been directed to ask your Government to request the Imperial Government to instruct all spending departments to communicate to the British Empire Producers' Organization such details as may assist tenderers in quoting for Government contracts in respect of any Australian industries or commodities, and to answer inquiries and consider representations made on behalf of Australian tenderers for such contracts by the British Empire Producers' Organization. I understand the Imperial Government will welcome such a suggestion, but it must obviously come as the official request of an Oversea Government.

May I ask your favourable consideration to this matter in the hope that you will take such action as is deemed necessary or advisable in regard thereto.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught's despatch No. 541 of the 31st of October, 1923,* asking whether arrangements can be made by which information as to contracts to be placed on behalf of the various Departments of His Majesty's Government can be communicated to the South African Federated Chamber of Industries through the medium of the British Empire Producers' Organization.

2. With reference to paragraph 2 of Ministers' Minute No. 773 of the 30th of October,† I should be glad if Your Excellency would inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have given careful consideration to the suggestion that particulars of tenders called for by the Departments of His Majesty's Government should be communicated to the British Empire Producers' Organization for the information of producers in the Union, but they think that it would be more convenient that the official representatives of the Union Government in London or His Majesty's Trade Commissioners in the Union should be used as the channel of communication for this purpose. For example, it is suggested that, if your Government wish to be informed of Admiralty or War Office requirements, the High Commissioner should communicate direct with the Director of Navy Contracts or the Director of Army Contracts, who will give any such application the most careful consideration.

3. As regards tenders called for in South Africa or the East the position is as follows:—

(I) Tenders called for in South Africa.—The War Office and Air Ministry have no requirements in the Union of South Africa, and have therefore no occasion to issue tenders there. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, however, through the Commander-in-Chief, Africa Station, make considerable local purchases of foodstuffs, and tobacco. Every opportunity is given to local firms to tender for these supplies, but, in order that the greatest publicity may be given locally to Navy requirements the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have instructed the Commander-in-Chief on the Station that any information may be obtained from His Majesty's Trade Commissioners in South Africa, and that he should notify the South African Federated Chamber of Industries whenever tenders are issued.

(II) Tenders called for at Eastern Stations.—Such tenders would normally be for relatively small quantities of local products, and so far as the Admiralty and the Air Ministry are concerned there is very little likelihood that South African firms would be in a position to meet requirements.

Requirements for military stations obtained by the issue of tenders in the East consist mainly of locally-produced foodstuffs, but the Army Council is taking steps to inform General Officers Commanding of the request of the Union Government in case it may be practicable to issue inquiries for South African products. The contracts, however, provide for deliveries from day to day as required so that having regard to considerations of distance and cost of transport it is unlikely that South African firms would be in a position to compete with local producers. Similar action is being taken by the Air Ministry, although the same difficulties of distance obtain in respect of their contracts.

4. His Majesty's Government welcome the offer made in paragraph 5 of Ministers' Minute and would be glad if any information as to the requirements of Union spending Departments could be communicated to His Majesty's Trade Commissioners in the Union. His Majesty's Government notice that Ministers would approve of a plan for reciprocating with other portions of the British Commonwealth if so desired. It is not clear to them whether Ministers contemplate the inclusion of the Colonies not possessing responsible Government and the Protectorates, in the scope of the suggestion made in this paragraph; and they are inclined to doubt whether the possible accretion of trade would be large enough to justify the establishment of the necessary machinery, but they would be glad to take the question up if Ministers would indicate any concrete proposals relating to a particular Colony or Protectorate Government, or group of Governments, which they may have in mind.

(A) Imperial Co-operation in respect of Commercial Intelligence.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

(i) Commercial Diplomatic and Consular Services.

"This Imperial Economic Conference takes note of the offer of His Majesty's Government to place the services of His Majesty's Commercial Diplomatic Officers in Foreign countries at the disposal of the Governments of the Dominions and India and of the Colonies and Protectorates in the same way and to the same extent as the services of His Majesty's Trade Commissioners within the Empire are already at their disposal. It notes that His Majesty's Government propose that as regards countries outside of Europe the Governments should utilize direct the services of Commercial Diplomatic Officers or of senior Consular Officers where no Commercial Diplomatic Officers have been appointed, but that communications which it is proposed to address to Commercial Diplomatic Officers in European countries should be transmitted in the first instance to the Department of Overseas Trade."

"The Conference, recognizing the importance of all possible steps being taken to strengthen the mutual co-operation of the several parts of the Empire in matters of commercial intelligence with a view to the development of Empire trade, welcomes the arrangements proposed by His Majesty's Government."

"It also welcomes the offer of the Governments of the Dominions which have appointed Trade Commissioners in countries overseas to make a similar arrangement for the utilization of those officers by Governments of other parts of the Empire."

"The Conference further recommends that, when two or more Governments of the Empire maintain commercial representatives in the same country, an endeavour should be made to arrange that the offices of these representatives should be in the same building or in close proximity, in order to facilitate all possible co-operation between such representatives in their work on behalf of Empire Trade."

(Overseas Trade Circular.)

Department of Overseas Trade, 35, Old Queen Street, London, S.W.1, 25th September, 1924.

SIR,

WITH regard to Overseas Trade Circular 1071/F.G., dated 6th February last, transmitting copy of the "Summary of Conclusions of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923," it will no doubt have been observed from the "Statement of the Position of His Majesty's Government in regard to the Resolutions" [Cmd. 2115], which has been separately circulated, that His Majesty's Government have now formally accepted Resolution 4 (A) (i), "Commercial Diplomatic and Consular Services." Under this Resolution, copy of which is enclosed for convenience of reference, the services of commercial diplomatic officers in foreign countries (and of certain consular officers in countries where no commercial diplomatic officers have been appointed) are placed at the disposal of the Governments of the Dominions and India and of the Colonies and Protectorates in the same way and to the same extent as the services of His Majesty's Trade Commissioners within the Empire are already at their disposal.

2. No doubt since the receipt of the circular despatch referred to above commercial diplomatic officers and consular officers have complied with any requests they may have received from the Governments concerned. A list of the officers upon whom the duty of corresponding with the Governments concerned will devolve has now, however, been drawn up, and I am to request that you will instruct any officers under your jurisdiction whose names are in the list† (copy of which is appended) to regard the arrangements by which their services are placed at the disposal of the Governments of the Dominions and India, and of the Colonies and Protectorates, as being in full operation. That is to say, they should give any assistance in their power in answer to inquiries on commercial matters from the Governments in question, and should bear in mind the importance of calling the attention of any particular Dominion or other part of the Empire to any matter likely to be of special interest to it in the development of its export trade.

3. It is not, of course, expected that the Government of any part of the Empire will have occasion to utilize the services of a commercial diplomatic officer or consular officer where that Government itself maintains a trade commissioner. There should, of course, be full co-operation between such trade commissioners and all officers of this Department.

4. It will have been observed from the terms of the Resolution that in countries outside Europe the Governments will utilize direct the services of the officers concerned, but that communications which it is proposed to address to officers in European countries will be transmitted in the first instance to this Department, which will itself whenever possible reply to the inquiry.

5. Commercial diplomatic officers and consular officers outside Europe will address and transmit their reply direct to the head of the Department from which the inquiry is received. Replies to inquiries transmitted by the Department of Overseas Trade to commercial diplomatic officers and consular officers in Europe should be forwarded to the Department of Overseas Trade for transmission.

* Enclosure in No. 10 in Dominions No. 83. † Not printed here.

6. Enough copies of this circular are enclosed for transmission to the officers concerned, and for the information of other officers as you may consider necessary.

SIR, Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 15th December, 1924.

I have, &c.,

(ii.) Commercial Travellers' Samples.

This Imperial Economic Conference proposes that articles liable to duty imported into any part of the British Empire as samples or specimens by commercial travellers representing manufacturers or traders established in any other part of the British Empire should be temporarily admitted free of duty, subject to such persons complying with the laws and regulations and also the Customs formalities established to assure the re-exportation or deposit in bond of the articles, or payment of the prescribed Customs duties if not re-exported or deposited within the prescribed period. But the foregoing privilege should not extend to articles which owing to their quantity or value, cannot be considered as samples, or which, owing to their nature, could not be identified upon re-exportation.

The marks, stamps, or seals placed upon such samples by the Customs authorities of any part of the Empire at the time of exportation, and the officially tested list of such samples containing a full description thereof, including, in the case of goods liable to ad valorem duty, a statement of their value, should be accepted by the Customs officials of any other part of the Empire as establishing their character as samples and exempting them from inspection, except so far as may be necessary to establish that the samples produced are those enumerated in the list.

The Customs authorities of that part of the Empire into which the samples are brought may, however, affix a supplementary mark to such samples or lists in special cases where they may think this precaution necessary.

In cases where the regulations require the provisional payment of the duties or deposits for such samples on entry a receipt for such payment should be given, and the duties or deposits should be reimbursed at any Custom house at which the samples may be produced with a view to re-exportation.

(iii.) Trade Catalogues.

This Imperial Economic Conference proposes that, where freer admission of catalogues and price-lists is not provided for, single copies of trade catalogues and price-lists of firms having an established place of business within the Empire, sent by post, or with consignments of goods, from any part of the British Empire, to business firms in any other part of the British Empire, should be admitted free of duty, provided that they are the trade catalogues or price-lists of firms or persons having no established place of business in the territory to which they are sent.

WITH reference to your despatch of the 24th March last, Dominions No. 135,* on the subject of the resolution of the Imperial Economic Conference relative to Commercial Travellers' Samples and Trade Catalogues and Price Lists, I have the honour to enclose herewith copies of an Approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada, to the effect that it is not deemed necessary or advisable to make any change in the present practice of the Canadian Government in regard to the two subjects mentioned.

I have, &c.,

BYNG OF VIMY.

Enclosure in No. 326.

THE FOLLOWING IS A TRUE COPY OF A MINUTE OF A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 20TH JUNE, 1924.

(P.C. 743.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 26th April, 1924, from the Secretary of State for External Affairs, with reference to a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated 24th March, 1924, inviting the attention of the Canadian Ministers to Resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference on the subject of Commercial Travellers' Samples and Trade Catalogues and Price Lists, expressing the desire to make reciprocal arrangements within the Empire for facilities for admission of such samples on the lines laid down in a printed Notice No. 12 issued by the British Board of Customs and Excise, and hoping that other governments will be able to adopt the same practice with regard to Trade Catalogues and Price Lists as is now the British practice and which is in accord with the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference.

The Minister states that with regard to Trade Catalogues and Price Lists, the practice of the Canadian Government as applied to all countries is now in accord with these recommendations. (See copy of Memorandum No. 1411-B, hereto attached.)

With regard to Commercial Travellers' Samples, the Minister states that the practice of the Canadian Government is as contained in Memorandum No. 1729-B, hereto attached; that this practice applies to the United Kingdom, all British Colonies and Possessions, and also to the following countries accorded most-favoured-nation treatment in Tariff matters with Canada, viz.:

Argentine Republic,
Columbia,
Denmark,
Japan,
Norway,
Russia,
Sweden,
Switzerland, and Venezuela.

Furthermore, this practice is practically in accord with the British practice except that such samples are subject in all cases to examination and appraisal and officially attested lists are not accepted as exempting the goods from inspection.

The Committee, on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for External Affairs and with the concurrence of the Minister of Customs and Excise, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to inform the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies that Your Excellency's advisers are of the opinion that it is not deemed necessary or advisable to make any change in the present practice of the Canadian Government in regard to the two subjects mentioned.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

Regulations Respecting Samples Provided for by Treaty.

THE Regulations contained in Memorandum 1710-B. of 1st February, 1913, in the above matter, are repealed, and, in view of the Japanese Treaty Act, 1913, the following Regulations are substituted therefor, in effect 1st May, 1913, viz.:

Samples of dutiable goods, solely for use in taking orders for merchandise, imported temporarily into Canada direct by non-residents from any British country or from Japan, or from any country entitled in Canada to the advantages of the Franco-Canadian Convention of 1907, may be admitted upon deposit of a sum equal to the duty, to assure the re-exportation of such samples within one year.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 14th July, 1924.)

(No. 311.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 23rd June, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch Dominions No. 135 of the 24th March, 1924,* copy of Minute from Ministers on the subject of the resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference regarding Commercial Travellers' Samples and Trade Catalogues and Price Lists.

I have, &c.,

ATHLONE,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 327.

MINUTE No. 458.

Prime Minister's Office, 19th June, 1924.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 21/352 of the 15th ultimo, regarding the Resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference on the subject of Commercial Travellers' Samples and Trade Catalogues and Price Lists, and desire to inform His Excellency that under the Union Customs Laws, Tariffs and Regulations issued thereunder, these matters are already dealt with in conformity with such Resolutions.

In view of the wish expressed in the second paragraph of despatch No. 135 of the 24th March, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, to institute an informal reciprocal arrangement covering the above matters, Ministers consider it desirable to state briefly the Union laws and regulations on the subject:

Class V, item 157, of the First Schedule to the Customs Tariff Act, 1914, provides for the admission free of duty of catalogues or price lists of foreign firms addressed to importers, merchants or manufacturers, or public libraries and similar institutions.

By "foreign firms" is meant firms or persons having no established place of business in the Union.

The Act quoted does not restrict the number of catalogues that may be sent to any one business, but the word "addressed" is interpreted to mean that such catalogues, etc., must be for the use of the addressee and not intended for distribution by him. On the other hand, the Union Department of Customs and Excise has power in its discretion to allow such catalogues to be imported in bulk as cargo, provided the address of each merchant, manufacturer, etc., to whom they will be sent, is indicated thereon.

Under the revised Union Customs Tariff as drafted recently for the consideration of Parliament, consequent on the decisions of the Imperial Economic Conference, it was intended to allow the importation free of duty of catalogues, price lists, etc., no matter to whom consigned, it being held that the imposition of any restrictions whatsoever would not be in the best interests of trade. This would not, however, apply to such Union firms as might have their catalogues, etc., printed abroad.

Commercial Travellers' Samples.—Section 6, sub-section (e) of the Customs Tariff Act, 1914, authorizes the Governor-General to allow a refund of the duty paid on bona fide travellers' samples, upon the export thereof.

The regulations issued under Section 14 (b) of the said Act read:

"In order to obtain a refund of the duty originally paid on bona fide travellers' samples on the re-export thereof, the following conditions must be complied with:

(a) The samples in question must be re-exported within twelve months of the date of importation.

* No. 322.

- (b) Due notice must be given of the intended shipment to the Collector of Customs at the port of export.
- (c) The original invoices bearing the date stamp of the Customs officer who verified the importation of the samples in question must be produced and every facility for the examination of the goods shown thereon must be given. The containing packages shall thereafter be sealed up by the Customs officer;
- (d) A certificate must be produced from the proper officer of Customs to the effect that the packages have been duly shipped and that the Customs seals were intact."

Ministers desire to add that the Act and the Regulations framed thereunder are liberally interpreted, for example, a motor car imported by the accredited traveller for an overseas motor car manufacturer, and intended for demonstration purposes only, would be regarded as a sample and, provided it was exported within the prescribed period, the duty paid would be refunded.

The duty paid is refunded at the port of export, irrespective of where originally entered for payment of duty, provided the requisite documents are produced and are found to be in order.

various parts of the Empire for the reciprocal admission free of duty of commercial travellers' samples, and to the correspondence on this subject terminating with your despatch No. 218 of the 4th June.*

(3) While the resolution adopted by the Conference related primarily to customs duty and not to charges of the kind now in question, it would appear that the levying of stamp duties on samples carried by commercial travellers constitutes a hindrance to trade, on the grounds both of expense and of delay of a nature which the Conference Resolution was intended to obviate. The Board of Trade inquire whether it would be possible to permit such samples, when of no commercial value, to be admitted into the Irish Free State free of stamp duties.

(4) I shall accordingly be glad if your Ministers may be invited to consider whether, in those cases in which they come to arrangements with other parts of the Empire on the lines set out in the Resolution of the Imperial Economic Conference, exemption from stamp duties could not be accorded to samples of no commercial value carried by commercial travellers, in the same way as exemption from customs duties, provided that the conditions set out in the Resolution are fulfilled.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 195 of the 2nd of July† regarding the admission of Commercial Travellers' Samples Trade Catalogues and Price Lists into Southern Rhodesia, and to request you to inform your Ministers that the Board of Customs and Excise have issued instructions to their officers to admit into this country, free of duty, samples of dutiable goods brought by commercial travellers from Southern Rhodesia subject to observance of the usual conditions governing the admission of samples brought by commercial travellers from countries with which arrangements for reciprocal facilities have been made.

(B) Statistics.

This Imperial Economic Conference, recognizing the importance of rendering the trade statistics published by the Government of the United Kingdom as valuable as possible with reference to the development of inter-Imperial trade, recommends that the United Kingdom Board of Trade, after reviewing the statistics in question from this point of view, should draw up a detailed scheme and submit it to the Governments of the several parts of the Empire for their consideration.

(a) Imperial Shipping Committee.

It was agreed to adopt the following resolutions:—

(1)

That this Imperial Economic Conference desires to convey to Sir Halford Mackinder, as Chairman of the Imperial Shipping Committee, and to the members of that Committee, an expression of its appreciation of the very excellent work which they have done during the period of the Committee's existence, both in the interests of the commercial and producing communities, and of British citizens generally.

(2)

That this Imperial Economic Conference is of opinion:—

(1) That the work accomplished by the Imperial Shipping Committee is convincing proof of the wisdom of its establishment, and that it is of the highest importance to the Empire that this work should continue.

It was agreed that the following resolution be adopted:—

This Imperial Economic Conference having examined the Rules relating to Bills of Lading recommended by the International Conference on Maritime Law held at Brussels in October, 1922, and embodied in the Carriage of Goods by Sea Bill now before the British Parliament, is of opinion that in all essential principles they are based upon the Canadian Water Carriage of Goods Act, 1910, and the Report of the Imperial Shipping Committee, 1921, and, believing that there is a good prospect of international agreement in regard to bills of lading on this basis which would be of benefit to every part of the Empire, considers that these rules can be recommended for adoption by the Governments and Parliaments of the Empire.

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Received 18th August, 1924.)

New Zealand Government Offices,

415, Strand, London, W.C.2, 16th August, 1924.

SIR,

I AM desired by the High Commissioner to inform you that after the Imperial Economic Conference which was held in London last year, full Reports of the Meetings of the various Committees, copies of the Resolutions, etc., etc., were forwarded by him to New Zealand.

The High Commissioner has now received a memorandum from his Government with respect to the Reports and Resolutions of the Bills of Lading Sub-Committee. This states that the documents submitted by the High Commissioner have been read together with later advices received from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The memorandum adds that the Sea Carriage of Goods Act, which is now law in New Zealand, represents a considered agreement between the interests concerned, and, while the New Zealand Act differs to some extent from the original Brussels Rules, it is now clear that absolute uniformity in this matter throughout the Empire is not likely to be attained, and in fact in Great Britain there has, from the latest advices, been some departure from the original Rules.

In view of all the circumstances, it has, therefore, been decided that no action shall be taken in the direction of reopening the question so far as New Zealand is concerned.

I am, &c.,

ALEXANDER CRABB.

Secretary to the Department.

ADVERTING to the despatch dated the 30th June last, which Your Excellency received from the Colonial Office, accompanied by a copy of an extract from a report of the Proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, relating to Shipping Communications, and other Shipping questions, I have the honour to append hereto the text of a report which has been received from the Queensland Commissioner of Taxes on the matter:—

"This matter was referred to me in June last by several of the local shipping interests representative of overseas shipping, and, after conference with the Federal Commissioner of Taxation, these interests were informed by me that no amendments were contemplated of either State or Federal Income Tax Acts on the point in question.

It should be noted that the main difficulty in this matter is one that is inherent in the British Income Tax Act in that taxation is levied on profits which are derived outside Great Britain, whereas, under the Federal and State taxation enactments, taxation is limited to profits which are derived from sources within the Commonwealth.

I am, therefore, unable to recommend any amendment of the existing law, as the onus of granting relief would appear to be on the United Kingdom and not on the Commonwealth or State Legislatures."

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

30th September, 1924.

WITH reference to the Secretary of State's despatch No. 297, dated 30th June, 1924, regarding the report of the Shipping Taxation Committee of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, I have the honour to inform you that under the Taxation Act of this State it is provided that the taxable amount in the case of Foreign Shipping Companies shall be a sum equal to seven pounds ten shillings per centum of the amount of the receipts for live stock, goods, mails and passengers shipped in this State, and carried to any port beyond Tasmania, during the year ended the thirtieth day of June preceding the year of assessment. This percentage can only be regarded, when all things are considered, as most reasonable, and consequently, the exaction should not present much, if any, difficulty to Companies affected.

However, your Ministers are of opinion that the question raised in the report of the Shipping Taxation Committee is fraught with much significance, and it thus appears desirable that the matter should be discussed at the next Conference of State Premiers.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

(1) That the British Government should circulate to the Dominions and India a statement showing the present anticipated operational performances of rigid airships and in the future should circulate regularly up-to-date information of the progress of the Burney airship proposals in order that consideration of Empire participation in these or future airship proposals might be facilitated.

(2) That the British Government should prepare a draft procedure designed on a reciprocal basis to secure more rapid and more extensive interchange of information in regard to civil aeronautics and should submit this for the consideration of the other Governments of the Empire with a view to general adoption.

(3) That having regard to post-war developments, any British overseas countries which have no up-to-date experience of air photography and contemplate the use of air survey, would be well advised, whenever possible to consult other Empire Governments having such experience before accepting estimates or schemes providing for its use.

(Extract.)

BRITISH AIRSHIP SERVICE,

GOVERNMENT PROPOSALS.

Statement by Prime Minister.

LIEUT.-COLONEL SIR S. HOARE (by Private Notice) asked the Prime Minister whether he can make a statement of the Government's policy in connexion with airships?

THE PRIME MINISTER: After careful examination His Majesty's Government have decided to reject the scheme put forward by the Airship Guarantee Company—commonly known as the Burney scheme. In their opinion this scheme would have entailed the creation of a virtual monopoly, and contained a number of other features which are open to objection both on financial and technical grounds. At the same time, His Majesty's Government share the view of their predecessors that it is essential to carry into effect as early as possible a constructive programme of airship development.

They propose, accordingly, to authorize the Air Ministry to initiate forthwith a comprehensive programme of lighter-than-air research and experiment at Cardington, including full-scale experiments with one of the existing ships, which will be reconditioned for the purpose, and to undertake the early construction of a new airship of a capacity of 5,000,000 cubic feet.

Further, the Air Ministry will undertake the construction of a terminal and an intermediate base overseas, with the necessary facilities to enable these two ships to be operated with safety between England and India.

Simultaneously, the Air Ministry will give the Airship Guarantee Company the first offer of a contract for the construction of a second ship for commercial purposes. It is proposed that this contract shall include a clause under which the constructors will be permitted to re-purchase the ship from the Air Ministry at a reduced figure on completion of satisfactory flying trials, provided—

(1) that it is to be operated in connexion with an approved British commercial airship service; and

(2) that it shall be available for use by the State as required.

By these means private initiative will be linked with lighter-than-air development from the start, and, in the event of success, the early inauguration of commercial airship services open to all firms likely to be interested will be facilitated. At the same time this second vessel will provide the nucleus of a reserve of personnel and material. Such a reserve will be essential if, as is hoped, airships prove capable of fulfilling certain important defensive functions—a development from which material economies in other forms of defence expenditure may ultimately result.

These proposals should enable two airships to be placed in commission in a shorter period than under the original scheme, since the Government and commercial vessels will be laid down simultaneously. They will, moreover, result in the maintenance of two separate airship manufacturing plants and other ground facilities on a scale which will admit of rapid expansion. Further, the valuable existing airship stations at Cardington and Pulham will remain State property, instead of passing into private hands, whilst ownership of the new bases to be constructed overseas will also be vested in the State.

As regards the financial aspect, under these proposals it will not be necessary to incur from the outset the very heavy commitments—amounting to a total sum of £4,800,000 over a period of fifteen years—which would be involved by the original scheme.

A three years' programme only will be authorized in the first instance, and no decision will be necessary as to further development until this programme is nearing completion, when much fuller data will be available than at present. It is estimated that, allowing for the repurchase of the second ship by its constructors, the net expenditure involved in 1924-25, 1925-26 and 1926-27 will not exceed £1,200,000.

Secretariat Note.—The following further despatches were sent to the Dominions and Southern Rhodesia regarding Airship Services:—

- (i) Despatch Dominions No. 262 (Southern Rhodesia No. 199) of the 11th June enclosing copies of House of Lords Official Report of 21st May, House of Commons Official Report of 28th May, Air Vote Supplementary Estimate (House of Commons paper No. 86), and note as to provisions of a contract for an experimental rigid Commercial Airship (Cmd. 2147). SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 30th September, 1924.
WITH reference to your despatch, Dominions No. 385 of the 15th August,* asking for the observations of my advisers on the proposed procedure for the exchange of information relating to Civil Aeronautics, I have the honour to transmit, herewith, a copy of a letter from the Department of the Secretary of State for External Affairs setting forth the views of my responsible advisers.

Enclosure in No. 346.

FROM DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

SIR, Ottawa, 25th September, 1924.
WITH reference to the despatch to His Excellency from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, dated the 15th August, 1924, Dominions No. 385, asking for the observations of His Excellency's advisers on the proposed procedure for the exchange of information relating to Civil Aeronautics, I have the honour to state that the Department of National Defence concurs generally in the proposals outlined in the despatch referred to, and especially in the proposal that the present method of exchanging information, as shown in appendices A and B, should continue.

In regard to the proposed periodical news letter on Civil Aviation, it is felt that for some time to come there will not be sufficient information to justify a monthly letter being sent from Canada, and as a quarterly liaison letter is now being sent to the Air Ministry and the other Dominions, it is thought that it will be best to amplify the civil aviation section now included in the present liaison letter and to give the information more or less in the form called for in appendix C.

As regards the proposed appointment of an Empire Liaison Officer for Civil Aeronautics, the Intelligence Officer, Royal Canadian Air Force, is now charged with the collection and dissemination of such information and he can continue to act in this capacity.

With reference to the questionnaire, action will be taken to prepare the information required, in so far as it applies to Canada. The preparation of answers in detail to the whole of the questionnaire involves a very considerable amount of work, and it is thought that some of the detail called for by the present schedule might well be omitted, as it cannot have any great practical value outside of this country. Full information, however, will be furnished on those points which are of general interest.

The Canadian Government is prepared to accept the third resolution of the Air Communications Committee, relating to Air Surveys and Photography. Aerial surveying already plays an important part in the work of mapping and map revision in this country. The Air and Survey Services responsible for this work would welcome a full exchange of information with all other parts of the Empire on the methods and apparatus used and the results obtained.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to reply to the Colonial Office despatch in the sense of the foregoing.

I have, &c.,
W. H. WALKER.

Acting Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch of the 15th August, Dominions No. 385,* [To Canada: and to your Excellency's despatch No. 413 of the 30th September,†] [To New Zealand: and to Viscount Jellicoe's despatch No. 223 of the 7th October,‡] [To Union of South Africa: and to Your Excellency's despatch No. 559 of the 14th October,§] [To Newfoundland: and to your despatch No. 104 of the 11th September,||] regarding the suggested procedure for the exchange of information relating to civil aeronautics, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that the following officers have been nominated to act as Liaison Officers for the purposes of the scheme:—[Not to Canada: Canada: The Intelligence Officer, Royal Canadian Air Force.] [Not to Union of South Africa: Union of South Africa: The Secretary of the Civil Air Board, Union of South Africa.] India: The Deputy Secretary of the Government of India, Department of Industries and Labour, Public Works Branch, Simla. Great Britain: The Deputy Director of Air Transport, Air Ministry.

2. It is proposed that the exchange of "news letters" between these officers should commence forthwith. The names and addresses of any officers appointed on behalf of the other Dominions will be circulated directly, as soon as they have been received, to the officers concerned by means of the "news letters."

3. As regards information concerning accidents, referred to in paragraphs 11 and 13 (c) of the memorandum enclosed in my predecessor's despatch under reference, the Government of India suggest that the information should be exchanged between the Liaison Officers in a special letter to be written immediately it comes to notice. The Air Council concur in this suggestion, and will, so far as they are concerned, arrange for this procedure to be adopted. They would suggest for consideration the desirability of the adoption of a similar course by the Dominion Governments.

Ministers that under the terms of the Agreement recently concluded with the Imperial Airways, Limited, which follows the draft agreement contained in Cmd. 2010, copies of which were forwarded in my predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 10 of the 9th January,* the Directors of the Company are, with certain limitations, free to develop their own policy for the extension of their operations and for the exploitation of British air transport in Europe.

2. The effect of this will be to transfer to the Company the consideration of many of those questions which might previously have called for examination by the Civil Aviation Advisory Board, and thus to curtail considerably the scope of the Board's inquiries. This curtailment does not directly affect the matters of extra-European air transport in which the Dominions might be interested, and the Air Council have considered whether the Board could usefully be continued in some modified form. It appears to them preferable, however, that consultation with representatives of the Dominions, when desired, should take the form of ad hoc conferences, and that the Dominion interest in the existing Board is insufficient to justify its continuance. In these circumstances they have decided to dissolve the Board.

3. The Air Council desire to give an assurance that there is no thought of withdrawing facilities for discussion with Dominion representatives on Air Transport matters.

It was agreed that the following Resolutions be adopted:—

(a) That this Imperial Economic Conference affirms the importance of establishing as quickly as possible an efficient Imperial Service of Wireless Communication, and is of opinion that the several Governments of the Empire should take immediate action to remove any difficulties which are now delaying the accomplishment of this, while providing adequate safeguards against the subordination of public to private interests.

(b) That representatives of the Dominions and India should be associated in the work of the Imperial Communications Committee when questions of interest to them are under consideration.

(c) That in view of the fact that the Dominions interested in the Pacific cable have for a long time pressed for the provision of a State-owned connecting link across the Atlantic, all possible support should be given by the Governments of the Empire to the State-owned Atlantic cable route which has now been provided.

(d) That in any concessions given in the British Empire to private enterprise in respect of cable or wireless services (including broadcasting stations), preference should be accorded to British Companies of any part of the Empire.

26TH FEBRUARY. Confidential. His Majesty's Government recently appointed Committee under Chairmanship of Dr. Robert Donald, Chairman of Empire Press Union, to consider and advise on policy to be adopted as regards Imperial wireless services so as to protect and facilitate public interests. Committee have just reported. They investigated the history and circumstances in regard to Empire wireless since the question first came up for Parliamentary discussion. They paid special attention to the negotiations which took place between the last three Postmasters-General and the Marconi Company. The report says that "nine months' negotiations without a settlement having been reached is a disappointing result. A combination of State and private ownership, even under unified management, could not, it appeared, be settled to the complete satisfaction of both parties."

The Committee also say that "a careful reading of the correspondence leads us to the conclusion that it is exceedingly doubtful whether any agreement on the several lines which were under discussion would ever have worked satisfactorily."

The recommendations made by the Committee are as follows:—

(1) That the State through the Post Office should own all wireless stations in Great Britain for communication with the overseas Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates and Territories.

(2) That the Post Office should operate directly, under an improved business organization, all the Empire Stations in Great Britain.

(3) That as an alternative an exception be made to the foregoing recommendations in the case of Canada, and that competition between the Post Office and private enterprise in the Anglo-Canadian wireless service, which exists at present, be continued, provided that, in any licence granted for the Anglo-Canadian service, public interests are safeguarded as regards conditions of working and terms of expropriation by the State.

(4) That in any licence granted to a private company, the State must reserve to itself the right to take possession or exercise control over the working of the licensed stations whenever in the opinion of the Government an emergency requires it.

(5) That the Leaffield station should be enlarged as recommended by the Post Office wireless experts and engineers, that the new high-power station, now building at Rugby, should be extended to a 16-mast station, that a second new station of similar capacity be erected, and that these works should be put in hand without delay.

(6) That each of the high-power stations should be of world range and equipped with the latest apparatus, so that the highest degree of efficiency can be attained.

(7) That, if necessity arises, full advantage be taken of the Patents and Designs Act, 1919 (Section 8), under which the Crown can acquire the use of all patented inventions which may be useful for public utility services such as wireless.

(8) That in order that State management and operation of Empire wireless may be carried out in a way to ensure the greatest efficiency, an improved business organization should be set up by the Post Office, and that the Post Office Advisory Council of business men be consulted on this question.

(9) That the present terminal wireless station near Cairo be removed from the Empire system as soon as the requirements of the Admiralty are met by other stations and the proposed new high-power stations in India, South Africa and Australia are in operation.

(10) That the expert Wireless Telegraphy Commission be requested to report on the extent, and cost, of a wireless system for the Colonies necessary to complete the Empire network of wireless communications.

With regard to foreign wireless the Committee recommend that the Post Office give up its Stonehaven and Caister stations which only communicate with the Continent and are run at a loss and that private enterprise should be given facilities to develop wireless communications with Continental Europe and with the rest of the world outside the British Empire, subject, in the case of Anglo-Continental services, to suitable terms being arranged for the payment of royalties or otherwise in view of the competition which must exist between wireless and State-owned cables.

His Majesty's Government would be glad to know views of your Government by telegraph on these recommendations at earliest possible moment.

The Rugby station now in course of construction will be ready for working by the end of this year.—THOMAS.

INDIAN ARRANGEMENTS.

THE High Commissioner for India states that the following communiqué was published by the Government in India yesterday:—

The Government of India are prepared to enter into an agreement and to grant licences to private enterprises in India for the establishment and operation of the necessary radio service to provide the Indian link in the Imperial wireless scheme and also commercial radio communication with other parts of the world.

Applications will be accepted up to 1st August next, and successful applicants will be required to register a company in India, at least 60 per cent. of the capital of which must be offered in India. The service required entails the installation of a station capable of conducting high-speed duplex radio communications in two directions simultaneously, together with simultaneous reception from at least three other directions, at a rate of charge which shall not exceed the cable rates from time to time prevailing. Direct communication with the United Kingdom or South Africa on the one hand, and Australia or Canada on the other, must be guaranteed.

The terms of the agreement and the conditions governing the grant of licences may be obtained on application from the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs, Wireless Branch, Delhi.

Secretariat Note.—Copies of a document containing conditions governing the establishment maintenance and working of a commercial radio service between India and other parts of the world were sent to the Dominions by despatch Dominions No. 260 of the 11th June, 1924. (25278/24.)

Wireless Rate, South Africa and Australia.

SIR B. MR. HARTSHORN: The answer to the first part of the Honourable Member's question is in the affirmative. The Post Office is prepared to co-operate in the contemplated reduction, on the understanding that the net wireless rate per word will be equally divided between the station in this country and the station in South Africa or Australia taking part in the communication.

26TH MARCH. Confidential. Imperial Wireless. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram of 26th February† has now been considered by my Government. While recognizing that the question of how long-distance wireless stations shall be provided in Britain is one of domestic concern for your Government we feel that if the recommendations of the Donald Committee that the Post Office should own all wireless stations in Great Britain in communication with Overseas Dominions is given effect to by your Government, Australia will be placed in the most unfair position.

At the Imperial Conference in 1921 Australia dissented from the resolution approving Norman's scheme and indicated her intention to erect a station capable of direct communication, Mr. Lloyd George undertook that no obstacle would be placed in the way of a reciprocal station being erected and worked in England.

Relying on this undertaking the Australian Government acquired a majority of interest in a private company with which an agreement was signed in March, 1922, under which the Company was to erect a long-distance station in Australia and reciprocal stations in Britain and Canada.

In February, 1923, the Company called for tenders for erection of the station in Australia and required the tenderers to arrange provision and operation of corresponding stations in Britain and Canada.

In March, 1923, Mr. Bonar Law stated in Parliament licence would be granted for erection of wireless station in Britain for communication with the Dominions.

In September, 1923, tender of the Marconi Company for the station above referred to was accepted. In accepting the tender, the Company required a guarantee from the Marconi Company of satisfactory transmission by Australian-British stations with the minimum number of hours per day and number of words per hour and the service to be available for Australian traffic 24 hours per day; money penalty to be provided for failure to render the stipulated service; reduction of rates provided for and equal division of profits to both stations.

Parliamentary Committee, which investigated the question of erection of long-distance wireless station in Australia, advised that action should only be proceeded with if guarantees providing for monetary payment in the event of the stipulated service not being provided were obtained. These as stated were obtained, thus disposing of all technical objections to the system.

If licence is not now granted to the Marconi Company to erect reciprocal stations in Britain, Australia cannot hold the Marconi Company to the contract and Australia will be deprived of the benefits of a most excellent contract which safeguards her interests in every way unless, of course, the British Government is prepared to erect stations and give similar guarantees.

* 49247: not printed.

† No. 352.

A further difficulty arises in that one-half less one share of the shares of the Company are owned by the public and the Government has overwhelming evidence that such shareholders are not prepared to proceed with the scheme if reciprocal station in Britain and reciprocal traffic are to be in the hands of a Government Department. In support of this view they state that they are not content to rely on the efficiency of a Government-owned and controlled station.

While my Government expresses no views on this contention it has to be admitted that private individuals having invested their money in the Company are entitled to protest against that Company entering into reciprocal arrangements (upon which return of their money will to a great extent depend) with a partner in whose efficiency and competency they do not believe.

This means that the amalgamated Company could only enter into arrangements with the British Government by the Australian Government exercising its controlling voting power which only amounts to one share to force the remaining shareholders to accept a course to which they are opposed. I doubt whether the legality of such action could be maintained; morally it appears to be quite improper.

My Government also is in some difficulty in understanding why if private enterprise is entitled to receive licence to establish communication with a foreign country such as the Argentine a Dominion such as Australia should be placed in what is regarded as a less favourable position.

In view of the fact that Australia has been led into her present position by the action of the British Government; that we have obtained a most favourable contract with guarantees for the erection of Australian-British station; that our partner shareholder in the amalgamated Company will not agree to an arrangement for reciprocal relations with a Government-owned station; and that service to foreign countries can be arranged on basis we desire, while Australia is precluded from establishing such service; my Government asks that you should reconsider the position and should grant a licence to the Marconi Company to erect our reciprocal station in Britain so as to enable the arrangements we have already entered into to be completed.

In the event of your Government not being able to agree to this would they as a way out of the difficulty issue a licence to Australia to erect a station leaving it in this Government's hands to determine by whom that station shall be erected and subject to the Government's control how it shall be operated. Ends.

THE VICEROY, DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND LABOUR, DELHI,

(Received in Colonial Office, 10th April, 1924.)

TELEGRAM.

53PT/23. Continuation of our telegram dated 19th March, Imperial Wireless Telegraph Committee of 1924. We have now had the advantage of perusing the Committee's Report. In our view it is entirely for His Majesty's Government to decide whether it should own the wireless stations in Great Britain or entrust them, in the whole or in part, to private enterprise. But there are two main points which concern us: first, we are much concerned to see that when our own station is in working order we shall not be held up by the inadequate reciprocating arrangements in Great Britain.

We should welcome the prospect of an early solution being found of the difficulties which have so long delayed wireless development in Great Britain, and have examined the Committee's proposals mainly with the object of satisfying ourselves that they provide adequate services for India and the Dominions. We contemplate that our arrangements involve a reciprocating station in Great Britain from which a high-speed duplex service must be forthcoming, for at least twenty hours daily in the first instance, and we believe that Australia and South Africa have both stipulated for similar services for eighteen hours daily. There is also New Zealand to be taken into account. We observe that the negotiations between the Marconi Company and the General Post Office proceed on the basis that, in addition to the Leaffield and new Rugby stations it will be necessary also for the Marconi Company to erect two stations in Great Britain. The Committee propose that Leaffield should be modernised and its capacity increased, and that the capacity of Rugby station should be also enlarged, and a third world-power station should be erected. If His Majesty's Government accepts the proposals as sufficient for all the traffic requirements with the Empire countries other than Canada, as indicated above, we should be satisfied.

Secondly, we are, however, seriously concerned lest, in the event of the Committee's proposals being accepted by His Majesty's Government, no company will tender for the erection and working of our high-power station. This result would be most regrettable and would possibly postpone indefinitely development of wireless communication. It might be impossible both for financial and technical reasons, and would, in any case, be most embarrassing to us if we were compelled to erect and work our own station. We have always favoured, and continue to favour, the erection and working of Indian stations by private enterprise, and our proposal contemplates Indian company arranging for necessary reciprocating station in England, as specified in clause 6 (b) (iii), page 5, of our conditions. We do not conceal from ourselves the fact that our company will almost certainly be an offshoot of the Marconi Company, and have throughout been anxious to avoid all difficulties with regard to patents and royalties and have adequately safeguarded ourselves in this respect in our proposed arrangements. We feel some doubt whether these safeguards will be adaptable to an organization by which reciprocating stations in the United Kingdom will be owned and worked by the General Post Office. For these reasons, we must ask that, if the Committee's proposals are accepted, the General Post Office will give every possible facility to our company to work in with them.

CONFIDENTIAL. My despatch 5th of March, Dominions No. 97.*

Your telegram of 26th March,† Empire Wireless. Would assure you that His Majesty's Government have no wish to place Australia or any other Dominion in an unfair position. On the contrary they wish to meet their views to the fullest possible extent consistent with what they believe is the best solution of this important Empire problem.

They cannot agree that Commonwealth Government, in concluding its agreement with Amalgamated Wireless Company, has been misled by the action of His Majesty's Government. At that time the policy of His Majesty's Government was State-ownership of all stations in this country for Empire communications. Government have no knowledge of any undertaking direct or indirect that Marconi Company would be licensed to erect a reciprocal station in this country. On the contrary, your Government were officially informed by telegram of 19th December, 1921,‡ in connexion with their proposed agreement with the Amalgamated Company, that the policy here was to maintain Imperial wireless communication in the hands of the State and that His Majesty's Government would be considerably embarrassed by an application from a private company for the erection of a station in this country for communication with Australia. This policy was again emphasized in telegram of the 17th July, 1922.§

Commonwealth Government state that they have some difficulty in understanding why private enterprise should be licensed to establish communication with a foreign country such as the Argentine and not with the Dominions. His Majesty's

* No. 354. † No. 359. ‡ No. 352 in Dominions No. 73. § No. 92 in Dominions No. 83.

Government, however, regard Empire wireless communications in an entirely different light from those with foreign countries. The same reasons which actuated His Majesty's Government in securing a State-owned cable with Canada and in joining with partner Governments to secure a State-owned cable between Canada and Australia actuate His Majesty's Government in wireless policy.

These reasons do not apply to communication with foreign countries. For the same reasons His Majesty's Government, having considered the Report of the Imperial Wireless Telegraphy Committee, favour the adoption of Recommendation One of that Report without making the exception in the case of the Canadian service suggested as an alternative in Recommendation Three. A Cabinet Committee has been authorized to negotiate with representatives of the Marconi Company here as regards Empire intercommunication on the above basis with the understanding, of course, that the State-owned stations here will be prepared to provide efficient service with any stations to be erected in the Dominions. Committee will probably meet representatives 14th of April.

His Majesty's Government do not share the doubts expressed in the telegram under reply as to the efficiency of the Government stations in this country, and they would point out that there is no evidence whatever that stations provided by private enterprise are likely to be more efficient. The licensing of a private company in this country to conduct the Australian service would be contrary to the above scheme and the alternative suggested in your telegram of licensing the Commonwealth Government to provide a station here does not remove this difficulty as it is felt that in effect it would be equivalent to licensing the Marconi Company. His Majesty's Government therefore regret that they are unable to meet the views expressed by your Government and to depart in this respect from the recommendations of the Donald Report.—THOMAS.

1ST MAY. Confidential. My telegram 10th April.* Wireless. At Conference with Cabinet Committee, 14th April, Marconi suggested reconsideration of His Majesty's Government's proposals in view of progress made with his experiments in transmission by means of short waves and reflectors.

This system, which is still in experimental stage, has been examined by Government experts. It depends partly on use of short waves of about 100 metres which experimenters generally have found to give good results in long-range transmission during hours of darkness, and partly on use of reflecting aerials for transmitting waves on principle of parabolic reflectors used for searchlights. A similar reflector is proposed for focussing received waves. Precise effect of reflectors, which are the only contribution of Marconi Company beyond common practice, has not been investigated except between this country and Cape Verde, a distance of about 2,500 miles. In that case reception of signals was possible not only during darkness, but also for about an hour before sunset and an hour after sunrise. Judging from these results and from theoretical considerations, estimated that stations of new type with power of 25 kilowatts and costing about £20,000 each would give communication averaging 15 hours a day between this country and Canada, eleven hours a day between this country and South Africa and India, and five to seven hours a day between this country and Australia, according as Australian Station was in East or West. Latter period might be increased to some extent by transmission through an intermediate station. Hours, being dependent on altitude of sun, would be shorter during English summer and longer during English winter. It is claimed that during best hours speed of 100 words per minute might be obtained.

It must be clearly understood that number of hours cannot be materially increased by increase of power or otherwise, and that direction of transmission from same station is practically fixed. Communication being confined to hours outside ordinary business day stations of new type would only be suitable for deferred traffic. For long-distance communication at all hours, and for simultaneous transmission in all directions, these stations would be useless and super-stations of type hitherto contemplated would be necessary.

From a strategical point of view new system fails in three respects.

Firstly, it is necessary that each Government concerned should be able to convey important orders or information without delay to fleets, armies or aircraft. The partial service of the new system does not fulfil this condition.

Secondly, broadcasting is necessary to ships, and it may be desired to transmit to all ships simultaneously in all waters.

Thirdly, new system appears peculiarly susceptible to deliberate interference by reflector stations set up on the line of communication and so placed as not to interfere with the interferer's own communications.

* Nos. 361, 362, 363.

This could be done at small cost and might result in the paralysing of our wireless telegraph communication in war-time if this system were to be solely—relied on.

Deliberate interference with high-power long-wave stations is a matter of great cost, and cannot be done without interfering with the interferer's own communications.

His Majesty's Government, considering super-station communication essential, has decided so far as this country is concerned, to complete Rugby Station and enlarge Leafield as proposed by Donald Committee, but will postpone commencement of second Rugby Station pending consideration of new proposals by Governments of Dominions concerned and India.

Government experts consider that stations of new type could not be erected and fully tested for communication between England and distant Dominions under conditions of various seasons in less than about two years.

[Not to Canada: If your Government desire to try station of new type His Majesty's Government will reciprocate by arranging for corresponding station here.]

Marconi Company have asked for licence to erect and work such a station, at least for limited period, but instead of granting this, His Majesty's Government would give order to Company to erect such a station, as contractors for Government, station to fulfil certain specified requirements as to hours and speed of working and other matters within limits mentioned above, and only to be accepted and paid for if these requirements fulfilled.

Generally speaking, new type of station seems useful as auxiliary only to super-stations but not as substitute for them, and, if Governments of Dominions concerned and India take this view and arrange for erection of super-stations, second Rugby Station will be built here as proposed by Donald Committee.

Company admit that they are committed to erection of super-station in South Africa, but hope Union Government will agree to substitution of short-wave directive station. They do not consider themselves committed in case of Australia, because, although they have tendered for super-station and tender has been accepted by Australian Company, agreement has not been signed by Marconi Company.

As regards Canada, His Majesty's Government propose to take over service at this end by means of enlarged Leafield or station of new type according to whether Canadian Company continue to use Glace Bay or erect station of new type.

[Not to Canada: His Majesty's Government hope to receive very early telegraphic reply conveying views of your Government, but they] [To Canada: His Majesty's Government] To all: would ask that matter should be kept confidential for the present since no announcement made here yet or intimation of position given to Marconi.—THOMAS.

17TH JUNE. Confidential. Your telegram of 10th April, your telegram of 1st May.† Proposal(s) of His Majesty's Government in regard to establishment of high-power State-owned station in England and proposed cancellation of existing arrangements under which Marconi station in Canada communicates with corresponding licensed Marconi station in England. My Ministers represent that subject matter of telegrams alluded to has received the careful consideration of the appropriate authorities of the Dominion Government. It has also been discussed with the interests likely to be affected as a result of which the Canadian Marconi Company have made most urgent representations to the Dominion Government advising inter alia that "if the Canadian Government should amend our licence in such a manner as to compel our traffic to be routed via State-owned stations in England we would have to make entirely new arrangements to finance our programme of construction. Our present financial arrangements have been made with the support of our English affiliated company and obviously this support would be withdrawn if we were not going to operate proposed station as part of the system of our affiliated company. We would thus be obliged to seek necessary funds from other sources. If this became necessary we would not be in a position to give the Canadian Government any assurance that we would be able to proceed with our programme. In fact it is by no means impossible that it would have to be abandoned owing to our inability to secure the money required." Under the original arrangements between the Canadian Marconi Company and its English affiliated company the latter were to finance the two stations the Canadian Company were licensed to install and operate at Montreal and Vancouver respectively. It is not the intention of the Canadian Government to establish State-owned high-power station in Canada at the present time and it would accordingly appear that should the proposal(s) outlined in your telegram of 10th April and repeated in the last two paragraphs of your telegram of 1st May be carried into effect Canada will lose any commercial benefits that might have resulted from the establishment of the high-power station proposed by the Canadian Marconi Company.—BYNG.

12TH JULY. Your telegram of 7th July.* Imperial Wireless. My Government has carefully considered the position in the light of your communication, and has decided to proceed at once with the erection of stations for beam transmission. Information supplied by you with regard to operating guarantees and period of effective communication leads us to believe that the beam method will amply fulfil Australian requirements at a greatly reduced cost. Should, however, the beam system not prove adequate, and should the progress, which recent events indicate will be made, not take place, we can give further consideration to the question of the super station.

This decision on the part of the Government, of course, opens up the whole question of our agreement with the Amalgamated Wireless Company. Undoubtedly the simplest and most satisfactory course for us would be for your Government to grant a licence to the Company to erect and operate its own reciprocal station in Britain. We could then arrange effective guarantees direct with that Company. Failing this the Commonwealth Government would be prepared itself to construct and operate the station in Britain.

Should, however, your Government adhere to its decision to retain the ownership and operation of all the stations in Great Britain in Government's hands it will be essential for the provision of efficient service for us to obtain from you certain guarantees which in other circumstances the Company was prepared to give.

We note from your telegram the guarantees furnished by Marconi with respect to the construction and efficiency of the stations in Britain, namely, speed of one hundred words per minute exclusive of repetition for an average of seven hours daily throughout the year. These are perfectly clear and satisfactory, but no mention is made of guarantee in respect to charges. You will recollect that under clause 5, paragraph D, of original agreement with amalgamated Company charges were guaranteed not to exceed: full rate message, two shillings per word; deferred message, one shilling (minimum ten shillings per message); Government message, one shilling; press message, fivepence; deferred press, threepence. Now that Company finds itself unable to obtain licence to construct and operate reciprocal stations in Britain or arrange with Marconi to do so, they ask to be relieved of all obligations under their agreement with respect to Great Britain and Canada and in return guarantee to transmit and receive messages to and from Australia and United Kingdom for no more than half of respective amount scheduled above. If your Government now intends to assume full control in Britain it is necessary for us to know whether you are prepared to guarantee transmission and reception of messages at your end for same as the rate the Company is prepared to guarantee at this end, viz., not more than half the original schedule. This you will readily agree is a very vital matter to us.

Furthermore, as efficiency of Australian Service is dependent upon the efficiency and method of control of English station as well as upon that of Australian station we consider it most desirable that amalgamated Company, in which Commonwealth Government has majority of interest, should be represented on whatever Board or authority controls operation of reciprocal station in Britain. Your telegram states that the Government is proceeding through Marconi to erect station for communication with Canada, capable of extension later if desired so as to provide communication with Australia, South Africa and India. We shall be glad to know immediately if erection of station suitable for communication with Australia can be proceeded with immediately and when the same will be completed. As the Government must bring the suggested amendment to the agreement before Parliament at an early date, shall be glad of immediate cabled advice on the points mentioned.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

YOUR telegram of 12th July.* Imperial Wireless. His Majesty's Government, while noting decision of Commonwealth Government to proceed at once with erection of beam station, feel bound to draw attention again to deficiencies of beam system from strategic point of view. They also had not gathered previously that an average of seven hours' communication daily was regarded as amply fulfilling Australian requirements. They realise, however, that decision is one for Commonwealth Government.

As regards station in this country, they adhere to decision that all stations in Great Britain for Empire communication must be owned and worked by His Majesty's Government.

It is provided in draft Agreement with Marconi Company respecting beam stations that rates of charge to the public for communication between this country and other parts of Empire, exclusive of Canada, shall not be greater than two-thirds of cable rates at present in force. It is further provided that Postmaster-General shall, after consultation with Company, fix such rates of charge as shall, in his opinion, be calculated to attract the largest possible volume of traffic with due regard to economic considerations.

In fixing rates of charge Postmaster-General would propose to consult with Dominions concerned as well as with Marconi Company. It has been suggested that there should be an Advisory Board to consider questions of this kind and details of working, and if so, the Postmaster-General would hope that the Commonwealth Government would be represented upon it through a representative of the Amalgamated Company. It is Postmaster-General's intention that the terminal charges of each Administration would first be deducted and the balance would then be divided equally between the terminal stations involved.

Erection of beam station for communication with Australia would be proceeded with immediately site is obtained, and Postmaster-General understands from Company that it could be completed in from six to nine months. Post Office and Company's Engineers now engaged in selecting site.—THOMAS

IMPERIAL WIRELESS SERVICE.

GOVERNMENT DECISION.

Postmaster-General's Statement.

SIR LAMING WORTHINGTON-EVANS (by Private Notice) asked the Postmaster-General whether the Government has yet come to a decision on the recommendations of the Donald Committee, and what steps have been taken to establish an Imperial wireless service?

MR. HARTSHORN: The Government have decided to adopt the main recommendations of the Donald Committee in regard to the Empire wireless service, which were as follows:—

(1) That the State, through the Post Office, should own all wireless stations in Great Britain for communication with the Overseas Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates and Territories; and

(2) That the Post Office should operate directly, under an improved business organization, all the Empire stations in Great Britain.

In the meantime, the Marconi Company have put forward proposals respecting the use of short-wave directive stations (the so-called "beam" stations) for communication between this country and the Dominions and India, and they have made definite arrangements for the erection of a beam station in Canada for communication with this country. The Government are prepared to co-operate in the trial of this new system, and in the course of a few days an agreement will be submitted for the approval of the House of Commons whereby the Marconi Company will erect, as contractors, a beam station here, adapted for communication with Canada, and capable of extension so as to provide for beam communication with South Africa, India and Australia, the station to be completed within 26 weeks of the site being placed at the company's disposal. It is a condition of the contract that the installations shall only be accepted and paid for by the Government if they fulfil certain minimum guarantees, which are as follows:—

Communication at 100 five-letter words per minute (exclusive of any repetitions necessary to ensure accuracy) for the following average number of hours daily throughout the year:—

	Hours.
Between Great Britain and Canada	18
Between Great Britain and South Africa	11
Between Great Britain and India	12
Between Great Britain and Australia	7

Communication is only possible when the average altitude of the sun between the terminal points is below a certain maximum—in other words, communication can only take place during the hours of darkness and during one or two hours before and after twilight.

The hours of communication being outside the ordinary business day, stations of this type will as a rule only be suitable for deferred traffic. For long distance communication at all hours, and for simultaneous long distance transmission in all directions at all hours (conditions which the Government regard as essential both for strategic and for other reasons), high-power stations of the type of that being erected at Rugby will still be necessary.

The Government have been in communication with the Dominions and India on the subject. The Governments of India and New Zealand have stated that a station of the new type will not meet their requirements, and the Government of India are awaiting replies to an invitation which they have issued for the formation of an Indian company to erect high-power stations in India. The Governments of Australia and South Africa have not reached a final decision, but I understand they are disposed to allow beam stations to be erected in Australia and South Africa for communication with this country in order to give the new system a trial. His Majesty's Government have undertaken, in the event of these stations being erected, to provide corresponding installations in this country as extensions of the station to be used for the Canadian service. The Marconi Company have agreed to co-operate whether the decision of the Dominions is in favour of beam stations or high-power stations. It is at present proposed to extend the Rugby station from 12 to 16 masts, as recommended in the Donald Report, but this decision will be subject to reconsideration if, in view of policy adopted by the Dominions, the extension should prove to be unnecessary.

The question of an improved business organization for the working of the stations in this country is being considered by a further Committee under the Chairmanship of Sir Robert Donald. This Committee is expected to report very shortly.

16TH AUGUST. Confidential. Your telegram 4th July.‡ Wireless. His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn whether Union Government propose to accept beam station in lieu of high-power station, assuming that guarantees mentioned in my telegram 21st July§ are fulfilled. As stated in that telegram, present information indicates that only a high-power station is capable of long distance communication at all hours and simultaneous transmission in all directions, and it would not appear that one beam station in Union of South Africa could fulfil all requirements of Union Government as embodied in agreements with Marconi Company. His Majesty's Government hope that your Ministers will consider question of proceeding with erection of a high-power station whatever their decision may be in regard to beam stations.

If Union Government adhere to arrangements for testing beam station His Majesty's Government, on hearing to that effect, will make earliest possible arrangements for selection of site, etc., for erection of corresponding station here.—

2ND SEPTEMBER. Your telegram of 28th August.§ Purpose (of) Wireless Agreement Bill|| (is to) give Parliamentary approval to agreement modifying original agreement with Amalgamated Wireless Australasia(n) Limited made March, 1922. Clauses I and II machinery clauses. Clause III provides for erection in Australia main trunk station capable of providing (as soon as suitable corresponding station has been erected in the United Kingdom and/or Canada) commercial wireless service with traffic of capacity of at least 21,600 words per day each way for 300 days per annum at an estimated capital cost not exceeding £120,000, and containing guarantees for erection of station and for its capabilities to provide services stipulated and for relief to the Company from the obligations of erecting high-power stations and reciprocal stations in Great Britain and Canada as provided in sub-Clauses (d), (e), (f) and (g) of Clause 5 of principal agreement and of its obligation under Clause 12 of principal agreement providing for erection and operation of stations in the United Kingdom and Canada in pursuance of sub-Clauses (f) and (g) of Clause 5 and also of its guarantee referred to in Clause 12 of principal agreement.

Clause 4 provides that the Company will charge for its part in transmitting and receiving messages to and from Australia and the United Kingdom not more than half respective amounts scheduled in paragraph (d) Clause 5 of principal agreement and will pay to the Postmaster-General such amounts as may be due at standard tariff rate in respect of messages handled by the Post Office.

Clause 5 amends Clause 7 of principal agreement by the substitution of the words "four years" for the words "three years." The valuation of assets provided for in Clause 6 of principal agreement shall be determined before the expiration of the extended term of four years referred to.

In introducing Bill Prime Minister explained that decision of the Government to proceed with beam stations necessitated variation of original agreement providing for high-power stations.

As the British Government has undertaken to erect in England beam station(s) for reciprocal communication with Australia concurrently with completion of the Australian station there was no longer necessity for Company to provide for the erection of reciprocal stations in Great Britain and Canada, which obligation was removed by the amended Agreement.

Regarding rates to be charged for messages, provision in the original Agreement was inserted as it was contemplated that the Amalgamated Wireless Company would have full control at both ends but, in view of the policy of the British Government to control rates at the English end, new Agreement provides for reduction of the Amalgamated Wireless Company's charges by half the charges previously agreed to, and it was hoped that arrangement might later be concluded with the British Government by which the total charges would not be greater than those previously provided for. The extension of time from three to four years was necessary on account of delay caused by negotiations in connexion with the high-power station, but as the time necessary for construction of beam station was much less it is expected that complete service will be available within nine or ten months from the time the erection of beam station is commenced.—FORSTER.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 10th September, 1924.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 97 of the 5th of March,* I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that in accordance with recommendation 10 on page 20 of the report of the Imperial Wireless Telegraphy Committee, 1924 (Cmd. 2060), copies of which were enclosed in my despatch under reference, the question of a wireless system for the Colonies has been under the consideration of the Imperial Communications Committee. * No. 354. † Not printed here: see Committee of Imperial Defence Paper, No. 232C.

2. The financial arrangements involved in the scheme proposed in the report are receiving the further consideration of His Majesty's Government, but your Ministers will observe that the scheme depends to a very considerable extent on the co-operation of the Union Government, in particular with regard to the stations at Durban and Walfish Bay. In consequence of your despatch No. 223 of the 7th of May,* the position of the stations at Durban and Port Nolloth has been discussed with Lieutenant-Colonel Sturman; and His Majesty's Government hope that your Ministers will be able in principle to agree to the working of the Durban station so as to enable it to communicate direct with the proposed improved station at Mauritius, and also to cover all the sea area within 2,000 miles of Durban. Such a development is regarded as most important for strategical purposes, in order that His Majesty's ships within those waters may always be able to communicate to it; but it should be added that His Majesty's Government anticipate that the additional cost which the suggested working of the Durban station would involve should be met by the volume of commercial traffic which the station might be expected to secure both with the East and also possibly with this country via Mauritius.

3. As regards the station at Walfish Bay, His Majesty's Government regard it as most desirable on strategical grounds that there should be in existence a station on the western coast of South Africa capable of covering for naval purposes the southern part of the Atlantic Ocean, and they hope that the Walfish Bay station will be made able to fulfil these requirements by being able to carry out ship to shore work over a radius of 2,000 miles. In the event of the fulfilment of these requirements by the Walfish Bay station, there would be no further need, on strategical grounds, for the maintenance of the existing station at Port Nolloth.

4. Further, His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn whether the Union Government would consider the possibility of equipping the Walfish Bay station, at some additional expense, so as to be capable of communicating direct at all hours with the proposed new station at Sierra Leone. By this means it would be possible to secure uninterrupted wireless communication between the Union and this country independently of the proposed new "beam" stations, and His Majesty's Government would be prepared to consider increasing the power of the proposed new station at Sierra Leone for this purpose, if it were understood that the Union Government would agree to undertake a similar increase of power in respect of the station at Walfish Bay.

5. His Majesty's Government would be glad to receive, by telegraph if possible, an expression of your Ministers' views on these proposals.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 22nd October, 1924.

WITH reference to [To Canada, New Zealand, Newfoundland: my despatch Dominions No. 381 of the 13th of August*] [To Commonwealth of Australia: Your Excellency's telegram of the 2nd of September†] [To Union of South Africa: Your Excellency's telegram of the 26th of August‡] and previous correspondence regarding the establishment of an Imperial Wireless Telegraph System, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have recently been investigating the possibilities of cable cutting in war time by means not hitherto used.

2. Their Lordships' investigations have indicated that a modern submarine is capable of cutting cables up to a depth of forty fathoms, and under favourable circumstances, if fitted with suitable gear, up to one hundred fathoms. Further, the possibility of submarines arriving at the required spot and doing their work undetected is considerable in future wars. Their Lordships have, therefore, come to the conclusion that the reliability of cables in future wars is not so great as heretofore.

3. In consequence, they urge the development, where possible, of alternative communications, and observe that the most reliable alternatives at present known are suitably sited high-power medium and long wave wireless telegraph stations.

4. They also desire to draw attention to certain difficulties which have arisen with the Marconi Company as to the requirements now considered by the latter as essential for the siting of the proposed short wave beam wireless telegraph stations to be erected in this country. In this connexion, I enclose a copy of a Report by a special Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee on the Strategic Importance of Beam Stations, which it is thought may be of interest to your Ministers, since it would appear that the questions discussed are also of importance in relation to any reciprocal short wave stations which may be erected in [Canada,] [the Commonwealth of Australia,] [the Union of South Africa,] [other parts of the Empire.]

I have, &c.,

J. H. THOMAS.

Enclosure in No. 395.

COMMITTEE OF IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

IMPERIAL COMMUNICATIONS COMMITTEE.

Strategic Importance of Beam Stations.

(Secret.)

(I.C.C. No. 790.)

REPORT BY SPECIAL SUB-COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO CONSIDER THIS QUESTION.

THE Imperial Communications Committee at their 42nd meeting held on 24th September, 1924, referred to a Sub-Committee composed of Representatives of the Three Fighting Services, and the General Post Office, and the Head of the Wireless Telegraph Board the question of the strategic value of the short wave "Beam" station in England. This Sub-Committee met at the Admiralty on 30th September, and submit the following unanimous report:—

* No. 383.

† No. 389.

‡ No. 387.

1. It was the original intention of the Marconi Company to erect the requisite "Beam" stations for inter-communication between this country and the Dominions as follows:—

All the transmitting beams on one site;

All the receiving beams on one other site.

It now transpires, however, that the Marconi Company have come to the conclusion that such an arrangement is open to objections, which are stated by them in a letter dated 4th September to the Engineer-in-Chief of the General Post Office, to be as follows:—

"(a) One or more of the transmitted and one or more of the received beams, wherever situated, would cross a large portion of England, and the transmitted beam, owing to the concentration of energy in the direction of the beam, then would undoubtedly interfere with the broadcasting public who have cheap wireless sets not of a high degree of selectivity."

"(b) The received beams passing over a considerable portion of England would be liable to be interfered with by those amateurs who have received transmitting licences and may be experimenting on short waves, and liable also to interference from harmonics of broadcasting stations."

The letter continues:—

"Senator Marconi and Mr. Franklin view these two possibilities with considerable alarm and desire therefore that I should bring this matter to your attention in order that steps can be taken to obviate these difficulties."

2. The Marconi Company then proceed to make a proposal whereby the "Beam" stations for communication with India and Australia should be sited in the Eastern Counties, and those for communication with South Africa and Canada in the South West of England.

Up to date no definite locality has been proposed for the stations in the Eastern Counties, but various suggestions have been put forward for the siting of the stations in the South West. Those most suitable from the point of view of the Marconi Company are:—

Lanivet (near Bodmin) as a transmitting station;

Bude or Chedzoy (near Bridgewater) as a receiving station.

3. We consider that the objections now raised and admitted for the first time by the Marconi Company are serious. The possibilities of interference even in normal peace time, now admitted by the Marconi Company, must necessarily detract from the value of this method of communication. Though we are unable definitely to state that these stations will be worthless in war time, yet we are of opinion that the reliance which can be placed on them for strategical purposes is slight, and in view of the limitations now made manifest and admitted by the Company the stations are of even less value than was anticipated in the telegram despatched to the Dominions on 1st May, 1924, and in subsequent communications.

4. As the potential value of these "Beam" stations for strategical purposes is apparently slight, and as the Marconi Company are committed by the terms of their contract to provide a service of a definite standard of efficiency, before acceptance by His Majesty's Government, we do not consider that we are justified in recommending that the administrative and technical advantage claimed for the sites now proposed should give place to strategical considerations, and we therefore recommend acceptance of the Marconi Company's proposals stated in paragraph 2 above, subject to the following remarks:—

Of the two sites proposed for a receiving station, that near Bude is exposed to the possibility of bombardment from the sea. The site near Bridgewater is liable to interfere with the organization of defensive measures against aerial attack. We understand that considerable administrative difficulties, including the provision of a considerable length of special telegraph lines is involved if the site at Bude is selected. We are, therefore, prepared to recommend the waiving of the strategical objections to Bridgewater on the clear understanding that the site selected is within a radius of five miles, and that every effort is made to obtain a site to the West rather than the East and to the South rather than the North of that town, and provided that masts of a greater height than 350 feet will not at any time be erected.

5. In conclusion, we wish to point out that each Dominion or Colony will be dependent for the efficiency of its long distance wireless telegraph communication on reciprocal stations in other Dominions. Their relative positions make it possible therefore that the disabilities of the "Beam" system in respect of interference, mentioned in paragraph 1 of this report, will occur in one or more cases. For example, the requirements of sites for "beam" stations, as proposed by the Marconi Company for England, would if logically applied to the Dominions, necessitate the placing of the reciprocating stations on the North Coast of Australia and the extreme East Coast of Canada.

Further, we are now given to understand from another communication addressed by the Marconi Company to the Engineer-in-Chief of the General Post Office that the existence of rough country in the vicinity of any one of these "beam" stations is a hindrance to efficient working. If this is indeed the case, it may well prove a very serious handicap to the efficiency of the stations in the various Dominions.

We are, therefore, strongly of opinion that these limitations inherent in the adoption of the "Beam" system, should be communicated to the Dominions without delay.

R. FITZMAURICE,

Captain R.N.,

D.S.D. Admiralty.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 22nd May, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copies of an extract‡ from the Report of the Proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923 [Cmd. 2009], containing the discussions on the subject of Cable and Wireless Communications.

2. The Resolution relating to the Imperial Wireless Service (page 404) is forming the subject of separate correspondence.

3. His Majesty's Government accept and will give effect to the Resolution (page 386) with regard to the association of representatives of the Dominions and India in the work of the Imperial Communications Committee when questions of interest to them are under consideration.

4. With regard to the question of giving all possible support to the State-owned Atlantic cable (page 386), His Majesty's Government will continue the existing practice in this respect which is in entire accord with the terms of the Resolution, and hope that the Oversea Governments concerned will also act in accordance with the Resolution.

5. His Majesty's Government will give careful attention to the recommendation (page 386) regarding preference to British companies, when questions of the grant of concessions for cable or wireless services to private enterprise come under consideration, and they hope that the Dominion Governments will adopt the same attitude.

following expression of views received from the Department of Marine and Fisheries:

"Resolution (a).—The acceptance of this resolution by the Canadian representative at the Conference is entirely satisfactory to this Department;

"Resolution (b).—This resolution is approved in principle by the Dominion Government. It is observed, however, that in practice, owing to the agreement between the British Post Office and the Canadian Pacific Telegraphs, it may not be in the interests of the Canadian National Telegraph system, from a business standpoint, to carry out the terms of the resolution as completely as the Imperial authorities would like, at least until the expiration of the above-mentioned agreement;

"Resolution (c).—The acceptance of this resolution by the Canadian representative at the Conference is entirely satisfactory to this Department."

SIR,

Government House, Wellington, 7th August, 1924.

WITH reference to your despatch Dominions No. 230 of the 22nd May,* I have the honour to inform you that my Ministers state that the Government of New Zealand has always given, and will continue to give, all possible support to the State-owned cables between the Dominion and Great Britain, and that it will give sympathetic consideration to the recommendation that in any concession given to private enterprise in respect to cable or wireless services (including broadcasting stations) preference should be given to British Companies of any part of the Empire. Ministers add that they consider that all means of inland communication should be over State-owned and State-operated lines.

(D) Reciprocal Enforcement of Judgments, including Arbitration Awards.

It was decided to adopt the following resolution:—

This Imperial Economic Conference take note of the action already taken in many parts of the Empire to carry into effect the proposal contained in Resolution XXV of the Imperial Conference 1911, with regard to mutual arrangements with a view to the enforcement in one part of the Empire of judgments and orders of the Courts of justice in another part, including judgments or orders for the enforcement of commercial arbitration awards. While it is recognized that in certain Dominions these matters come within the scope of Provincial or State Governments whose freedom of action could not be bound by any decision of the Dominion or Central Government, the general view of the Imperial Economic Conference is that a universal arrangement throughout the Empire for the reciprocal enforcement of judgments, including arbitration awards, could not fail to be valuable and advantageous to trade and commerce, and is accordingly an object at which the different parts of the Empire should aim.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 30th April, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch No. 77 of the 14th March, 1924,* Minute from Ministers on the subject of reciprocal legislation for the enforcement of judgments in the United Kingdom and Oversea Dominions.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 48/1461 dated the 9th April, 1924, covering despatch No. 77 of the 14th March, 1924, from the Secretary of State relative to reciprocal legislation for the enforcement of judgments in the United Kingdom and Oversea Dominions.

2. Ministers are in agreement with what was stated at the Imperial Conference, 1923, by the Minister of Justice, the Honourable N. J. de Wet, namely, that, while their general attitude on this matter is sympathetic, it is doubtful whether there is any urgent necessity for legislation of this nature in South Africa. Ministers can therefore but repeat the hope previously expressed that it may be found possible at some future date to introduce the necessary legislation.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR.

(No. 61.)

My LORD, Downing Street, 18th November, 1924.

WITH reference to my telegrams of the 13th of November and the 15th of November† and previous correspondence regarding the Victoria Supreme Court Act, 1923, I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, one sealed and six plain copies of an Order of His Majesty in Council,‡ dated the 7th of November, extending Part II of the Administration of Justice Act, 1920, to Victoria.

2. Your Ministers will observe from Section 2 of the Order in Council that reciprocity between Victoria and the Irish Free State in the enforcement of judgments is not established by means of this Order, and it will, therefore, be sufficient at present if the "High Court of Justice in Northern Ireland" is proclaimed to be a superior Court under Section 2, sub-section (2) of the Victoria Supreme Court Act.

Up to the present the Government of the Irish Free State have not made provision for the reciprocal enforcement of judgments in the Irish Free State and in other parts of His Majesty's Dominions. I am, however, informed that the matter is receiving the consideration of that Government; and a further communication will be sent to you in due course when they have reached a decision on the subject.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

Secretariat Note.—Despatches were sent on 22nd November, 1924, to the Dominions and Australian States (Dominions No. 542), and to Southern Rhodesia (No. 480), transmitting copies of Orders in Council dated the 7th November, 1924, extending Part II of the Administration of Justice Act, 1920, to Victoria (not sent to Victoria) Kedah and the Bahamas (48878/24).

(E) Imperial Co-operation with reference to Patents, Designs, and Trade-marks.

It was decided to adopt the following resolution:—

This Imperial Economic Conference have given careful consideration to the provisional scheme recommended in the Report of the British Empire Patent Conference, 1922, and they are of opinion that, apart from one or two details which might receive further consideration by correspondence between the heads of the Patent Offices, the provisional scheme is a practicable one, and promises considerable advantages to British inventors throughout the Empire; but, in view of the difficulties felt by the Dominion of Canada as regards the absence of any provision for reciprocal registration of Dominion patents, the Conference feel unable to make any recommendation so far as the self-governing Dominions and India are concerned.

The Conference, however, unanimously agree that it is very desirable that the provisional scheme should be adopted by the Colonies and Protectorates, and that considerable benefits would thereby be derived by inventors throughout the Empire.

(F) Economic Defence.

It was decided to adopt the following resolution:—

In view of the vital importance to the British Empire of safeguarding its overseas carrying trade against all forms of discrimination by foreign countries, whether open or disguised, the representatives of the Governments of the Empire declare—

(1) That it is their established practice to make no discrimination between the flags of shipping using their ports, and that they have no intention of departing from this practice as regards countries which treat ocean-going shipping under the British flag on a footing of equality with their own national shipping.

(2) That in the event of danger arising in future to the overseas shipping of the Empire through an attempt by a foreign country to discriminate against the British flag, the Governments of the Empire will consult together as to the best means of meeting the situation.

(G) Customs Formalities.

(i) Valuation of Goods for Customs Duty Purposes

It was decided to adopt the following resolutions:—

Form A.

A common form of invoice and certificate for use by exporters having been adopted by Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and Newfoundland, as well as by a number of Colonies the Conference strongly recommends in the general interests of inter-Imperial trade, that the early adoption of an identical form may be sympathetically considered by all the other Governments throughout the Empire which levy duty on a system similar to that in force in the above-mentioned parts of the Empire.

The Conference understands that legislation to give effect to the recommendations of the Imperial Customs Conference has already been passed in Australia and New Zealand, and ventures to urge the passing of similar legislation in every case in which such may prove to be necessary.

Form B.

"The Conference has had before it a form of invoice and certificate which has been prepared as suitable for use in those parts of the Empire which levy duty on the invoice value of goods imported from other parts of the Empire, and require for this purpose a certified statement made by the exporter of the goods."

"The Conference strongly recommends, in the interests of inter-Imperial trade, the early adoption by all parts of the Empire which levy duty on the system in question of the form annexed to this Resolution."

Certificate in Regard to Postal Packages.

"The attention of the Conference has been drawn to the short form of certificate prepared by the Imperial Customs Conference, 1921, for use as establishing the origin of goods sent by parcel post from the United Kingdom."

"It understands that this form has already been adopted by a number of the Dominions and Colonies, and considers that in the interests of inter-Imperial trade the adoption of a similar form is desirable in the case of parcels arriving in one part of the Empire from another part."

"The Conference therefore strongly recommends that, in the case of parcels sent by parcel post, the contents of which are of small value and are not merchandise for sale, the following short form of certificate should be adopted at an early date by all parts of the Empire concerned, as providing satisfactory evidence of the origin of the goods in cases where the production of such evidence entitles the goods to entry at a lower rate of duty than would otherwise obtain:—

"The contents of this package are not merchandise for sale, and every article herein, to the extent of at least one-fourth of its present value, is bona fide the produce or manufacture of.....

(name of part of British Empire).

"Dated at.....this.....day of.....19.....

Sender."

(ii) International Conference on Customs Formalities.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

"That the Conference should take note of the work accomplished by the recent League of Nations International Conference on Customs and other Similar Formalities (the 15th October to 3rd November, 1923), and that the conclusions of that Conference should be recommended for favourable consideration to the various Empire Governments concerned."

2ND OCTOBER. With respect to the correspondence which took place concerning the Imperial Customs Conference held in London in 1921, my Government has found it necessary to modify the conditions under which tariff preference is granted to goods produced or manufactured in Great Britain and in other British Possessions. The alterations will necessitate, and their nature will be conveyed by, the following amendments of the form of combined certificate of value and origin published on page 165 of the Board of Trade Journal of 10th August, 1922§:—

- (i) altering "one-fourth" in Clause 6 (b) to "three-fourths" and
- (ii) omitting the note after Clause 8 of the certificate.

The amendments are to come into force on 1st April, 1925. New Zealand Government is in consultation with the Australian Government with a view to adopting a uniform certificate of origin.—JELlicoe.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 9.57 a.m., 25th October, 1924.)

TELEGRAM.

25TH OCTOBER. For some time past, condition allowing British preference tariff rates on goods containing only 25 per cent. British labour and material regarded by the Commonwealth Government as very unsatisfactory. Very careful consideration by my Ministers has led to the following conclusions: the proportion hitherto prescribed does not constitute British manufacture in any real sense. Such condition strongly encourages the use of cheap foreign materials to the exclusion of British, thus tending to defeat the object of the preference policy by giving substantial benefits to foreign manufacturers and endangering Dominion industries by exposing them indirectly to foreign competition assisted by preferential tariff concessions. Direct foreign competition can be guarded against, but impossible to do this when cheap foreign materials are imported into Britain and submitted to manufacture sufficient to comprise 25 per cent. of value and exported to the Dominions as British goods entitled to preference. Present conditions directly contrary to the policy of developing the resources of the Empire by utilization of Empire material. Acting on these conclusions with a view to realizing essential object of preference policy, namely, encouragement in use of Empire labour and material and to safeguard Australian industries against unfair competition arising from use of cheap foreign material, Commonwealth Government has decided to alter conditions of preference by requiring that in the case of goods partially manufactured the proportion of United Kingdom labour and material necessary to qualify for preference shall not be less than 75 per cent. factory or works cost. United Kingdom labour and material includes such addenda at any stage of manufacture of goods whether before or after undergoing process of manufacture in other countries, but final process must be performed in United Kingdom. Regarding goods manufactured in the United Kingdom from imported raw material not obtainable in the United Kingdom, if all possible processes of manufacture are performed in the United Kingdom preference will be allowed irrespective of proportion of British labour and material provided similar goods not produced in Australia. If similar goods produced in Australia preference will not be allowed unless proportion of British labour and material is at least 50 per cent. (It) will not be considered that all possible processes performed in the United Kingdom if United Kingdom produces raw material similar to imported raw material used (at) any stage (in the) manufacture of the goods concerned. New conditions will apply from 1st of April next. Ministers advise that New Zealand has also approved (?agreed) to take action by altering proportion entitling to preference from 25 per cent. to 75 per cent. from same date.—FORSTER.

(H) Empire Currency and Exchange.

The Imperial Economic Conference adopted and endorsed the following Resolutions, submitted to them by the Committee on Inter-Imperial Exchanges:—

(i) "That, arising as they do from the suspension of an effective gold standard, the difficulties of Inter-Imperial exchange will disappear when the currencies of Great Britain and the Dominions affected are again made convertible into gold.

(ii) "That it is neither necessary nor desirable to adopt complicated plans for a new instrument of credit, such as Empire Currency Bills, which involve difficult and disputable constitutional and financial questions.

(iii) "That where difficulties have arisen in regard to exchange between certain parts of the Empire and between such parts and the United Kingdom,

"(a) The position could be ameliorated if the note-issuing authorities were to accumulate sterling assets and to undertake to exchange their local currencies for sterling and vice versa.

"(b) This measure might be further developed and assisted by the creation of central banks and by mutual co-operation as recommended by the Genoa Conference.

"(c) In some cases the bank charges for buying and selling sterling appear to be unduly high and should be capable of reduction."

[My LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 15th April, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copies of an extract* from the Report of the Proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference (Cmd. 2009) relating to Empire Currency and Exchange.

I have, &c.,
J. H. THOMAS.

* Not reprinted: see pages 439-479 of [Cmd. 2009].

(J) Co-operation for Technical Research and Information.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

Resolution I.

"This Imperial Economic Conference recommends the adoption of the first of the two schemes for the future of the Imperial Institute and the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau proposed in the Report of the Imperial Institute Committee of Enquiry, 1923, subject to the following modifications:—

(i) That in order to ensure that the reconstituted Imperial Institute may in future undertake in its laboratories only preliminary investigations of raw materials for the purpose of ascertaining their possible commercial value, and to ensure that investigation or research of a more extensive kind may be referred to the appropriate authority, whether in this country or elsewhere in the Empire, there shall be formed a small Committee of the Governing Body, to be known as the 'Laboratory Committee,' consisting of the Comptroller-General of the Department of Overseas Trade (or his nominee), the Secretary of the Scientific and Industrial Research Department (or his nominee), and a Fellow of the Royal Society, being a representative of that Society on the governing body of the Imperial Institute, who will supervise the laboratory work of the Institute and report thereon from time to time to the governing body."

(ii) That with a view to ensuring that in future the reconstituted Institute may have expert assistance in regard to finance—e.g., in establishment matters—a representative of His Majesty's Treasury be added to the new governing body and to the new Managing Committee proposed in paragraphs 100 and 101 of the Report of the Imperial Institute Committee of Inquiry.

Resolution II.

This Imperial Economic Conference approves the estimate of the cost of maintaining the reconstituted Institute as set out in paragraph 5 of the memorandum by the Secretary of State for the Colonies submitted to the Conference (I.E.C. (23)-18); and suggests that in order that the sum of £8,000, which is proposed as an annual contribution from the Dominions and India, may be obtained, the Ministerial representatives of the Dominions and of India advise their respective Legislatures to contribute the following annual amounts for a period of five years:—

Canada	2,000
Commonwealth of Australia	2,000
New Zealand	1,200
Union of South Africa	1,200
India	1,200
Irish Free State	200
Newfoundland	200

Resolution III.

This Imperial Economic Conference take note of the memorandum on the co-ordination of research bearing upon Industry and the suggestions for its development submitted by the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research in consultation with the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries and other Departments, and they are of opinion that all possible steps should be taken to encourage the exchange of scientific and technical information between the various parts of the Empire, and the co-operation of the official and other organizations engaged in research for the solution of problems of common interest.

Note.—Some correspondence prior to the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, is included in this section.

* No. 426. † Provision on Estimates.

Imperial Institute and Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau has now been prepared. Principal provisions are as follows:—Preamble recites position of Imperial Institute under Acts of 1902 and 1916, and of Mineral Resources Bureau under Royal Charter, 1919, and contains also following recitals:—

And whereas the future of the Imperial Institute and of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau was discussed at an Imperial Economic Conference held in London in the year nineteen hundred and twenty-three:

And whereas certain resolutions were adopted at that Conference recommending to the Governments represented thereon the amalgamation of the above bodies, the making of further arrangements in regard to the management of the amalgamated body, and annual contributions to its maintenance for a period of five years out of moneys provided by Parliament of nine thousand pounds, by the Governments of the self-governing Dominions and India of eight thousand pounds and by the Governments of the Colonies and Protectorates of eight thousand pounds:

And whereas for enabling effect to be given to the said recommendations it is expedient that the provisions hereinafter contained should have effect:

Clause 1 repeals Acts of 1902 and 1916 and revokes Mineral Resources Bureau Charter, 1919.

Clause 2 retains Institute Building and Endowment Fund as at present in hands of Trustees, among whom is to be included Parliamentary Secretary Department of Overseas Trade as responsible Minister.

Clause 3 provides for transfer of other property of Institute and property of Bureau to the responsible Minister.

Clause 4 provides for the application of buildings and property to purposes of Institute as set out in the First Schedule.

Clause 5 gives powers of management to responsible Minister and provides for constitution of Board of Governors.

Clause 6. Begins.—In each year during the five years after the commencement of this Act there shall be paid out of moneys provided by Parliament towards the expenses of the Imperial Institute a sum of nine thousand pounds, and thereafter such sum (if any) as Parliament may determine. Ends.

Clause 7 gives power to vary by Order in Council in agreement with Governments of Dominions and India contributing for the time being provisions of the Bill prescribing purposes of Institute and regulating its management.

First Schedule sets out purposes of reorganized Institute which may be summarized as follows:—

(1) To collect and disseminate information regarding uses, sources, production, treatment and marketing of raw materials including minerals and semi-manufactured products, and technical and scientific information generally bearing upon Empire industries.

(2) To advise on development of Empire resources in raw materials.

(3) To conduct preliminary investigations of raw materials and where advisable to arrange further investigation by appropriate institutions.

(4) To collect samples of raw materials having a definite value in industry and commerce.

Second Schedule provides that Board of Governors should consist of responsible Minister as President, one person appointed by each of Dominion Governments and India, one by Secretary of State for Colonies, five other official representatives of Government Departments here including Treasury and not more than ten representatives of scientific and commercial interests, of whom when first appointed not less than three shall be taken from present Governors of Mineral Resources Bureau. Board to constitute Managing and Laboratory Committees on lines agreed at Conference and Advisory Councils of which one shall be on minerals.

At a meeting of the Executive Council of the Imperial Institute on 12th December, and consequent on an intimation from Sir James Allen, High Commissioner for New Zealand, that the Prime Ministers of Australia, Canada and Newfoundland had altered their opinions from those expressed on behalf of their Delegations at the Imperial Economic Conference, and now desire that the Exhibition Galleries be retained, the unofficial members of the Council unanimously passed the following resolution:—

"That the Executive Council, while accepting the Imperial Economic Conference Report, suggests, without prejudice to the carrying out of that Report, that a further opportunity should be afforded to all Governments concerned to consider whether they would be prepared to find such further funds as would enable the Exhibition Galleries to be retained."

Retention of the Galleries would involve an addition to the expenditure contemplated by the Conference of some £13,000 odd, of which £8,000 odd would be due to loss of the rent that could be obtained for the Galleries, and £5,000 to the cost of staff, etc., required for their maintenance. Proportionate increases would have to be made in the contributions recommended by the Conference, and this would involve raising the contribution of [Canada] [South Africa] [Newfoundland] from [£2,000] [£1,200] [£200] to [£3,040] [£1,824] [£304].

As it is essential for His Majesty's Government to know at an early date whether it is the desire of the Prime Ministers and the contributing Governments that the decision of the Imperial Economic Conference on this point should be reopened, I should be obliged if you would ask Prime Minister to telegraph as soon as possible his views on this suggestion and to inform me whether he would be prepared to contribute additional amount for five years. DEAR MR. BRUCE,

Downing Street, 15th December, 1923.

At a meeting of the Executive Council of the Imperial Institute on the 12th instant, and consequent on an intimation from Sir James Allen, High Commissioner for New Zealand, that the Prime Ministers of Australia, Canada and Newfoundland had altered their opinions from those expressed on behalf of their Delegations at the Imperial Economic Conference, and now desire that the Exhibition Galleries be retained, the unofficial members of the Council unanimously passed the following resolution:—

In order to make up this amount the following proportionate increases would have to be made in the contributions recommended by the Conference:—

Dominions and India	8,000	12,160
Canada	2,000	3,040

SIR,

Downing Street, 28th December, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a telegram§ to the Governors-General of Canada and the Union of South Africa, and the Governor of Newfoundland, with reference to a proposal which has been put forward for the retention of the Exhibition Galleries of the Imperial Institute.

2. I have addressed similar communications|| to the Prime Ministers of the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand.

3. The resolution of the Imperial Economic Conference on this subject, which is set out on page 14 of the Summary of Conclusions of the Conference [Cmd. 1990], recommended a contribution to the Institute by the Irish Free State of a sum of £200 annually for a period of five years; this proposal for the retention of the Exhibition Galleries would involve the proportionate increase of the contribution to £304 annually.

4. I should be glad to learn as soon as possible what are the views of your Ministers on the proposal in question, and whether they are prepared to advise the Parliament of the Irish Free State to contribute for a period of five years the additional amount which would be required.

Strand, London, W.C.2, 1st January, 1924.

MY DEAR SECRETARY OF STATE,

I AM in receipt of your letter of the 15th December* with regard to the Exhibition Galleries at the Imperial Institute. I regret that I have not replied sooner but, owing to my absence in France, I was unable to do so.

I observe from your letter that Sir James Allen has intimated "that the Prime Minister of Australia had altered his opinion from that expressed on behalf of the Australian Delegation at the Imperial Economic Conference." This is not quite an accurate statement of the position.

After the decision of the Committee of the Economic Conference had been arrived at, I was approached with a view to ascertaining whether Australia would be prepared to reconsider the matter.

I then indicated that, if the question was re-opened by the British Government and an indication was given by them that they were prepared to bear their share of the additional expense involved, Australia would reconsider the question with a view to deciding whether they could fall into line if the other Dominions adopted a similar course.

From your letter I gather that the British Government has given no indication of its attitude, and that there is no unanimity among the Dominions concerned.

In these circumstances it appears to me that no course can be followed other than to adhere to the decision of the Economic Conference.

Yours, &c.,
S. M. BRUCE.

[Not to Irish Free State: With reference to my despatch Dominions No. 450 of the 29th of November,*] I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government accept the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference with regard to the reorganization of the Imperial Institute and the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, and have decided to initiate action with a view to giving effect to those recommendations.

2. In consequence, I have given careful consideration to the question how the total contribution of £8,000 recommended in respect of the Colonies and Protectorates should be apportioned between the various Governments, and I have now invited contributions, for a period of five years, of the amounts set out in the accompanying Schedule. I am also asking the Government of Southern Rhodesia to recommend to the Legislature a contribution of the sum of £250 per annum for the same period.

[Not to Union of South Africa: 3. I should be glad to hear at the earliest possible date whether your Government also is prepared to accept the recommendations of the Conference on this subject, and to recommend to Parliament the contribution of (1) [£2,000] (2) [£2,000] (3) [£1,200] (5) [£200] (6) [£200] for five years, as indicated in the Second Resolution.]

[To Union of South Africa only: 3. I understand from your telegram of the 18th December† that it is the intention of your Ministers to recommend to the Union Parliament the payment to the Institute of an annual contribution of £1,200 for five years, but I should be glad if your Ministers would be so good as to confirm this understanding in due course.]

SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR.

[Answered by No. 448.]

(No. 11.)

SIR, Downing Street, 9th January, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to request you to invite the attention of your Ministers to the question of the future of the Imperial Institute. This question has recently been considered by a Committee under the Chairmanship of the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, and the published report of the Committee, which includes also the resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference on the subject, has been transmitted to you under cover of my despatch No. 94 of the 29th of November.* It may, however, be of advantage if I recapitulate in this despatch the more important of the Committee's recommendations for the future of the Imperial Institute and also of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau. In this connexion I would invite attention to the despatch from the Administrator of Southern Rhodesia to the High Commissioner for South Africa of the 18th May, No. 190,† and connected correspondence.

2. The Committee recommended that:

(1) The Imperial Institute should in future confine its activities to that of a Clearing House of Intelligence and Information equipped with Laboratories to enable it to carry on only the work of preliminary analysis and investigation of raw materials. All inquiries entailing elaborate investigation or real scientific research should be referred to the competent authorities. Reliable up-to-date sample rooms, illustrative of important Empire raw materials, should be maintained.

(2) The Institute should discontinue the attempt to illustrate by means of Exhibition Galleries the natural resources of the Empire, and the existing collections at South Kensington should be dispersed and the Galleries made available for other purposes. The Institute should, however, arrange for a really representative selection of Empire products to be made for the purpose of a travelling exhibition of a purely educational character, and also, if possible, for organizing travelling exhibitions of the staple products of the Colonies and Protectorates in the appropriate trade centres in this country.

(3) The present Executive Council of the Institute should be abolished, and its place should be taken by a Governing Body containing representatives of Scientific Institutions, of trade and commerce, and of various Government Departments, as well as representatives of the Dominion and Indian Governments. This Governing Body should delegate the greater part of its powers, and the actual management of the Institute, to a small Managing Committee representing, as far as possible, the various elements of which the larger Governing Body is composed.

(4) The Director of the reconstituted Institute should be a purely administrative officer and should no longer be a member of the Governing Body or of the Managing Committee.

* No. 429.

† 30466: not printed; it reported the provision in the Estimates for 1923-24 of a sum of £300 as a contribution to the Imperial Institute.

(5) The Imperial Institute when so reorganized should be made responsible to the Department of Overseas Trade.

(6) As soon as these reforms have been carried out, arrangements should be made for the complete amalgamation of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau with the Imperial Institute.

(7) The annual expenditure of the Institute thus reorganized, allowing for the saving due to the elimination of expenditure on the Exhibition Galleries, but including the cost of the work at present done by the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, should not exceed £40,000 per annum, and to meet this expenditure contributions from the Governments of the Empire would be required for a definite period of years to supplement the amount derived from the Endowment Fund of the Institute, etc., and from the rent of the Exhibition Galleries.

3. It is obvious that the economies thus effected will enable the reorganized Imperial Institute to carry out the essential features of its work and, at the same time, to reduce very considerably the amounts asked by way of contribution from the oversea Governments. The foregoing scheme was approved by His Majesty's Government and recommended by them for adoption by the Imperial Economic Conference. As will be seen from the Memorandum which I submitted on their behalf to the Conference (printed as No. 2 in Cmd. 1997, of which a copy was enclosed in my despatch No. 94 of the 29th of November*), His Majesty's Government undertook to propose in Parliament an annual grant of £9,000 for a period of five years, and to invite the Colonies and Protectorates to agree to contribute between them an annual grant of £8,000 for the same period, on condition that the Governments of the Dominions and India were willing to give assurances that they would make contributions amounting in all to £8,000 for the fixed period of five years.

4. The Imperial Economic Conference, after referring the Inquiry Committee's Report and the Memorandum mentioned in the preceding paragraph to a special Committee, passed Resolutions recommending the adoption, subject to two slight modifications in regard to supervision and the management, of the scheme as outlined above for the future of the Imperial Institute and the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau, and suggesting that the representatives of the Dominions and India should advise their Legislatures to make certain specific contributions annually to secure the sum of £8,000 for a period of five years.

5. I have carefully considered how the total contribution of £8,000 should be apportioned between the various Colonies and Protectorates, and I have already invited contributions, for a period of five years, of the sums set out in the accompanying schedule.†

I hope that your Ministers also may be prepared to assist in the upkeep of the reorganized Institute and to recommend that Southern Rhodesia should continue to contribute to its funds. If so, I would suggest that an appropriate proportionate contribution might be the sum of £250 per annum.

6. I should add that His Majesty's Government attach particular importance to securing continuity of contribution. If, therefore, your Ministers see their way to recommend the Legislature to vote a contribution to the Institute, it would be most desirable that the contribution should be made available not only in the ensuing year, but also in the four succeeding years, that is, for five years in all from the 1st of April, 1924.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

30th May, 1924.
WITH reference to previous correspondence on the subject of the Imperial Institute, I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to state, for the information of Mr. Secretary Thomas, that the Government of India have accepted the Resolution of the Imperial Economic Conference adopted on 2nd November, 1923, subject to the condition that the Resolution is also accepted by the self-governing Dominions. In the latter event the Government of India agree to make an annual contribution of £1,200 for a period of five years towards the expenses of the reorganized Imperial Institute on the understanding that the necessary funds will require to be voted each year by the Legislative Assembly. No provision has been made in the Budget for any contribution for the year 1924-5, but the Government of India, on learning that the scheme has been accepted by all the other parties, will apply to the Legislative Assembly for a supplemental grant of £1,200.

I am accordingly to inquire whether the self-governing Dominions have agreed to contribute for five years definitely the amounts specified in the above-quoted Resolution of the Imperial Conference.

I am to say that the Government of India have no observations to offer on the Imperial Institute Bill. With regard to the modifications made in the original draft of the Bill for the purpose of enabling Exhibition Galleries to be maintained, the Government of India, while not objecting to these modifications, are not prepared to make any additional contribution to the Institute for the upkeep of Exhibition Galleries. They also stipulate that no part of their contribution of £1,200 shall be spent on such Galleries without their specific authorization.

Downing Street, 21st October, 1924.

WITH reference to my despatch [Dominions No. 334] [No. 270] of the 23rd of July* on the subject of the Imperial Institute, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government regret that the exigencies of Parliamentary business during the summer session did not permit the passage of the Imperial Institute Bill, of which copies were enclosed in my despatch under reference, through the House of Commons, and no further opportunity occurred owing to the dissolution of Parliament.

2. It is hoped to reintroduce the Bill in the next Parliament at the first opportunity, and every effort will be made to bring the scheme of reorganization into force as early as possible next year.

WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 495 of the 21st October,† I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have had under consideration the financial arrangements necessary in order to continue the work of the Imperial Institute pending the passage of the Bill to provide for the reorganization of the Institute which His Majesty's Government have decided to reintroduce into Parliament at the earliest opportunity.

2. Contributions from the Colonies and Protectorates amounting to more than the sum of £8,000 recommended by the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, have already been received; and the Colonies and Protectorates concerned have been invited also to make a further contribution towards the additional sum required for the upkeep of the Exhibition Galleries of the Institute.

3. His Majesty's Government have also paid to the Institute an advance of £3,000 in respect of their contribution; and they would be glad to learn whether your Ministers would agree to authorize payment to the Institute for the current year 1924-5 of the amount recommended by the Imperial Economic Conference, viz., [To Canada and Commonwealth of Australia: £2,000,] [To New Zealand and Union of South Africa: £1,200,] [To Newfoundland: £200,] [Not to Union of South Africa: and, in addition, of a further contribution towards the retention of the

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, copies of an extract* from the proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference relating to Co-operation for Technical Research and information, and to request you to invite the attention of your Ministers to the resolutions adopted by the Conference on the subject of Co-ordination of Research. (Page 491.)

2. His Majesty's Government welcome this resolution; and the following observations are offered as to the mode of co-operation in giving effect to it.

(a) Exchange of scientific and technical information.—The Department of Scientific and Industrial Research would be glad to receive scientific and technical information on subjects falling within the scope of its activities as outlined in the memorandum on co-ordination of research in the Empire (paragraphs 7 to 27 on pages 493-499), or would be willing to supply such information as it has available, in answer to any inquiries in relation to those activities which may be addressed to it by Government Departments or representative research organizations in the Dominions.

(b) Co-operation in the conduct of research.—The Department will be prepared to co-operate with the Dominion Governments or with scientific, industrial, or agricultural organizations of recognized standing in the conduct of any investigations falling within its scope of mutual interest to this country and the Dominions. In this connexion attention is particularly invited to paragraphs 29 to 39 of the Department's memorandum referred to above (pages 499-503), in which the suggestion is made that co-operation in research might advantageously be undertaken in directions such as the following:—

- (i) Between industrial research organizations established under the Department (vide paragraphs 11 and 12 of the memorandum) and organizations engaged in producing primary materials in the Dominions;
- (ii) Between research organizations under the Department (vide paragraphs 14 to 28 of the memorandum) and official or other bodies engaged in the promotion of the development of the natural resources of the Dominions.

In Appendices II and III to the memorandum (pages 508-514), two examples are given of fields of work which might well be explored by the Research Department and the interested bodies in the Dominions concerned in co-operation (viz., the investigation of processes for the production of power alcohol and research on problems of the overseas transport of fresh fruit and vegetables);

* Not reprinted: pages 480 to 519 of [Cmd. 2009].

- (iii) By the extension of the membership of research associations in this country to include firms resident in the Dominions.

While it is true that nearly all research associations have powers to admit such firms to membership, they are practically autonomous bodies, and would be free to decide their own policy in a question of this kind.

3. The question of the future of the Imperial Institute, to which reference is made in the enclosed extract, is being dealt with in separate correspondence.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 22nd September, 1924.)

(No. 453.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 2nd September, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch Dominions No. 171 of the 11th April, 1924,* copies of Minutes from Ministers on the subject of the Resolution adopted at the Imperial Economic Conference regarding the Co-ordination of Research.

I have, &c.,

Governor-General.

Enclosure 1 in No. 462.

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 27th May, 1924.

MINUTE No. 400.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 73/31 of the 9th May on the subject of the Resolution adopted at the Imperial Economic Conference regarding the Co-ordination of Research, and to inform His Excellency that the matter is receiving attention.

J. C. SMUTS.

Enclosure 2 in No. 462.

Prime Minister's Office, Cape Town, 29th August, 1924.

MINUTE No. 678.

WITH further reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 73/31 of the 9th May, 1924, transmitting copy of despatch No. 171 of 11th April last from the Secretary of State for the Colonies on the subject of the resolution adopted by the Imperial Economic Conference, regarding the Exchange of Scientific and Technical information and Co-operation in the conduct of Research, Ministers have the honour to inform His Excellency that there are in existence at present in the Union of South Africa under the Department of Mines and Industries the Oil Fuel Committee and the Research Grant Board which were specially created for the purpose of dealing with research on industrial and general scientific questions. The Research Grant Board was intended to be the co-ordinating body connecting and linking up all research work in the Universities and elsewhere throughout the Union including researches on oil fuel and minerals.

Research work in connexion with agricultural problems is carried on in the laboratories attached to the Botanical, Entomological, Veterinary divisions of the Department of Agriculture, and in some of the Universities.

In the Veterinary Research Laboratory facilities are afforded for the conduct of investigations by foreign scientists in instances in which it is probable that both the Union and the countries represented by those scientists will gain from the results of the researches conducted.

* No. 461.

The results of the investigations of the Research officials are published from time to time, and copies of the publications are exchanged with oversea scientists and scientific institutions.

The Departments in the Union for years have been working in close touch with the leading societies and scientific institutions in other countries.

The Departments hope to institute a regular method of interchange of views as well as of results with similar institutes in other parts of the Empire, and in addition, where practicable, to arrange that facilities be given to scientists in South Africa to visit bureaux overseas and possibly even to exchange scientists for the investigation of particular problems.

Experience has shown that research work on most of the agricultural problems must be carried out in the Union if the best results are to be obtained, but there are some classes of research work which cannot be carried out in the Dominion or which would be more suitably carried out at a central institute such as the Imperial Institute and Minerals Research Bureau.

Ministers desire to inform His Excellency that the suggestions made in despatch No. 171 from the Secretary of State for the Colonies appear to be eminently suited to meet the case, and they have been communicated to the departments concerned.

SIR, Government House, Wellington, 26th August, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch Dominions No. 171 of the 11th April,* forwarding copies of an extract from the proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference relating to co-operation for technical research and information, and inviting the attention of my Ministers to the resolution adopted by the Conference on the subject of co-ordination of research.

2. My Ministers advise me that the New Zealand Government already facilitates and assists by monetary grants scientific and industrial research, and co-operates with the New Zealand Institute and other institutions in furthering this object.

3. Ministers add that they will give earnest consideration to the proposed setting up of a special organization dealing with such research.

(K) Immunity of State Enterprises.

It was decided that the following resolutions be adopted:—

I.

This Imperial Economic Conference, so far as it is competent for its members without prejudice to the rights of the States or Provinces of a self-governing Dominion, agrees with the recommendation of the Committee on the Liability of Dominion and Foreign Governments, &c., to United Kingdom taxation expressed in the following terms, viz.:

"Any Government within the Empire, so far as it engages in trade, shall be treated as liable to the taxation of any other country within the Empire in which it may either own property in connexion with trade or make trade profits; the liability of the United Kingdom Government or any Dominion Government so far as engaged in trade shall be co-extensive with the liability of a private trading corporation in similar circumstances."

It is agreed that each of the several Parliaments of Great Britain, the Dominions, and India shall be invited to enact at the earliest opportunity a declaration that the general and particular provisions of its Acts or Ordinances imposing taxation shall be deemed to apply to any commercial or industrial enterprise carried on by or on behalf of any other such Governments in the same manner in all respects as if it were carried on by or on behalf of a subject of the British Crown. It is not contemplated that such legislation should have retrospective effect for any year prior to 1924.

This Conference further agrees that, as soon as possible after the passing of the aforesaid legislation, negotiations should be opened with the Governments of foreign countries, in accordance with the recommendations of the aforesaid Committee, with a view to reciprocal agreement between those countries and the Empire to the following effect: If or when the Government of a foreign country carries on trade in the United Kingdom or in a Dominion, and if or when the Government of a country within the British Empire carries on trade in a foreign country, the trading Government shall not, in its character as such, be treated as entitled to any sovereign immunity from taxation either directly or through the claim of superiority to the jurisdiction of municipal Courts; nor shall a Government so trading be treated as entitled to any sovereign immunity from taxation in respect of property in the other country concerned which it may own or hold in a trading capacity or in connexion with trade.

It is understood that, as the Committee recommended, it would be a proviso to the whole agreement that it should be without prejudice to the national interests of a sovereign State in any emergency of war.

II.

"The Conference further recommends that the draft convention on the immunity of State-owned ships adopted by the meeting of the International Maritime Committee held at Gothenberg in August last, and amended after consultation between the British Admiralty and Board of Trade, should be adopted throughout the Empire as the basis on which an international convention might be concluded. This amended draft is as follows:—

Immunity of State-owned Ships.

(Amended Draft: October 26, 1923.)

"Article 1.—Vessels owned or operated by States for trading purposes, cargoes owned by them and cargo and passengers carried on such vessels and the States owning or operating such vessels shall be subjected in respect of claims relating to the operation of such vessels or to such cargoes to the same rules of legal liability (i.e. liability to be sued for payment) and to the same obligations as those applicable to private vessels, persons or cargo.

"Article 2.—Such liabilities shall be enforceable by the tribunals having jurisdiction over and by the procedure applicable to a privately-owned ship or cargo or the owner thereof.

"Article 3.—Ships of war, State Yachts, Surveying Vessels, Hospital Ships and other vessels owned or operated by States and employed on other than trading purposes shall continue to enjoy the respective privileges and immunities hitherto enjoyed by them by the comity of nations. Liabilities against such ships in respect of collisions or salvage claims shall, however, be enforceable, but only by action before the competent tribunals of the State owning or operating such vessels; and no such vessel shall be liable to arrest. Similarly, State-owned cargo carried for non-commercial purposes in ships owned or operated by the State shall not be subject to seizure, but shall be liable to process of Law, but only in the Courts of the State owning such vessels.

"Article 4.—The provisions of this Convention will be applied in every contracting State in all cases where the claimant is a citizen of one of the contracting States, provided always that nothing in this Convention shall prevent any of the contracting States from settling by its own laws the rights allowed to its own citizens before its own Courts.

"Article 5.—This Convention shall not be binding on a belligerent State in respect of claims arising during the period of belligerency."

No. 464.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

(29th April, 1924.)

MR. SNOWDEN: . . . First, there is the proposal relating to the immunity from taxation of State enterprises. It was suggested that the Government of any part of the Empire, when carrying on trade operations in any other part of the Empire, should be liable to the taxation which was in operation in that part of the Empire in which it traded. The establishment of this principle was to be the preliminary to negotiations between the Empire and Foreign States for an international arrangement of the same kind. That Resolution raises a very interesting, as well as a very important, international question, and, though I see no reason to dissent from the course proposed, I would like more time to consider it. The Resolution of the Conference was without prejudice to the right of State and Provincial Governments in Federal Dominions, and, although I have no reason to expect that they would take any exception to it, still, I think the postponement would give us an opportunity of ascertaining the views of the various Dominions upon this aspect of the question. Therefore, I propose to postpone that question until next year.

It was further agreed that a Conference should be arranged between representatives of His Majesty's Government and the Canadian Government to consider the question of the administrative interpretation of the terms of "The Importation of Animals Act, 1922."

CANADIAN STORE CATTLE.

Memorandum by the Minister of Agriculture.

(Received in Colonial Office, 14th November, 1923.)

1. At the meeting at the Colonial Office on the 31st ultimo, I promised to put into writing the proposals I made to meet the points raised by the Canadian representatives as to the interpretation and administration of the words in Section 1(8) of the Importation of Animals Act, 1922, which inter alia define store cattle as castrated or spayed animals "which are intended for feeding purposes and not for immediate slaughter."

2. It was made clear that the British Government are not prepared to propose any amendment of the Act in this respect, but they are ready and anxious to co-operate in arriving at a satisfactory settlement of the manner in which the definition should be interpreted and administered, having regard always to their responsibility to Parliament to see that the law is observed.

3. In view of that responsibility the Ministry of Agriculture cannot surrender the final word in deciding whether any particular animals come within the facilities afforded by the Act, and as to the conditions under which their movement should be licensed out of the Landing Place. But subject to this I am prepared to give instructions to the Ministry's Inspectors as follows:—

(a) In the case of any cattle which the Inspector is satisfied can reasonably be regarded as suitable for feeding for a further period of not less than 28 days before slaughter, the Inspector will on application grant a licence for their removal from the Landing Place to any special authorized market or other premises, subject only to the conditions embodied in the Schedule to the Importation of Animals Act, 1922.

(b) In the case of cattle where the Inspector is not so satisfied, the Inspector will on application either:—

(1) Grant a licence for their removal to a slaughter-house for slaughter with such conditions as may be considered necessary to secure their slaughter thereat and will not, as at present, require them to be slaughtered at the Landing Place, or

(2) If the owner of the cattle is prepared to undertake that they will be fed for not less than 28 days before slaughter, the Inspector will grant a licence for their removal to premises other than a slaughter-house, subject to such conditions as may be considered necessary to secure that the undertaking will be observed.

In either case the additional conditions imposed by the Schedule will necessarily apply.

4. Cattle for which a licence is not applied for, or in respect of which a licence cannot be granted in accordance with these instructions, will have to be slaughtered at the Landing Place as heretofore.

5. It must be understood that cattle which have not complied with the conditions applicable to stores, i.e., three days isolation and supervision in Canada and supervision by a veterinary surgeon on the ship, must continue to be landed at an imported animals wharf and not at an imported animals Landing Place, and will accordingly be slaughtered in the wharf. The Ministry has no power to allow such cattle to be moved from the wharf to a slaughter-house.

6. I make this offer with the desire of meeting as far as possible the case made by the Canadian representatives, consistently with my primary duty to safeguard the interests of British agriculturists, but I couple it with the request to the Canadian Government that they on their part will co-operate with us in carrying out the provisions of the Act, and that they will give instructions to their officers not to certify as store cattle animals which cannot reasonably be regarded as suitable for feeding for the period above referred to.

7. The Ministry of Agriculture has no desire whatever to whittle away by administrative means the privileges granted by Parliament to Canada for the importation of her store cattle, and the Ministry is confident that with goodwill on both sides the provisions of the Act can be carried out satisfactorily. It was inevitable that some difficulties would arise in the early stages, but there is every reason to hope that the trade will soon adapt itself to the conditions so that it can be carried on to the mutual advantage of both countries. The Ministry of Agriculture will spare no effort to secure this result, and I am confident that the Canadian Department of Agriculture will do the same.

MR. MACKENZIE KING (PRIME MINISTER) to SIR ROBERT SANDERS
(MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES).

(Received in Colonial Office, 14th November, 1923.)

DEAR SIR ROBERT, The Ritz Hotel, London, 8th November, 1923.

I AM in receipt of your note of 5th November including memorandum* re your proposed administration of the Importation of Animals Act, 1922, in so far as it affects the admission of stores from Canada.

Your memorandum sets forth substantially the conclusions reached at the meeting in the Colonial Office on 31st October. If your inspectors carry out the instructions contained in sub-clauses 1 and 2 of Clause (b) of Section 3 of your memorandum, we believe the export of store cattle from Canada to Great Britain can be carried on with quite a measure of success, and we wish to express our appreciation of the proposed changes in administration of the Act.

In view of your Government's definite decision not to amend the law, or place the order for breeding cattle before Parliament, in accepting the proposed changes outlined in your memorandum and the proposal for reciprocal trade in pure bred cattle, we would like to have it clearly understood that Canada does not in any way abate her claim for the complete removal of the embargo against any of her cattle, and she will from time to time continue to press for the same treatment, in the matter of "Diseases of Animals," as she is accorded by other countries.

Yours sincerely,

W. L. MACKENZIE KING.

MR. PACAUD (SECRETARY TO HIGH COMMISSIONER) to MR. NOEL BUXTON
(MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES).

(Received in Colonial Office, 1st April, 1924.)

[Answered by No. 477.]

Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, Kinnaid House, Pall Mall East, London, S.W.1, 18th March, 1924.

DEAR SIR, In the absence of Mr. Larkin, who will be away on the Continent for some weeks, I desire again to bring to your notice a matter of importance to the Canadian Government.

I understand that Mr. Larkin spoke to you a short time ago respecting the admission of breeding cattle from Canada, which at that time was, and no doubt still is, engaging the attention of His Majesty's Government in connexion with the application of the Cheshire farmers for permission to import cattle from Canada to replace some of their losses due to the ravages of foot-and-mouth disease. I gather from a statement you are reported to have made in Parliament that at that time you were unable to accede to the request of the Cheshire farmers which, if granted, would have gone behind the decisions of the Imperial Conference.

The statements attributed to you, together with newspaper comments, have been cabled to Canada, and these have been brought to my notice by the Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The statements appearing in the press despatches to the effect that the matter (of the importation of breeding stock from Canada into Great Britain), does not come within the range of the agreement at the Imperial Conference whereby the importation of pedigreed breeding animals should be reciprocal between the Old Country and the Dominions, apparently endeavours to give the impression that an agreement was reached at the recent Imperial Conference on the subject of the importation of breeding cattle. This, however, is not in accordance with the facts.

Sir Robert Sanders in his speech at a meeting of the Conference held on 26th October, 1923, gave his view of the situation, but no agreement in this connexion was reached by Canada's representatives at these meetings.

What Canada stands for, and always has stood for in this matter is the carrying out of the conditions appearing in Section 2 of the Importation of Animals Act, 1922, as quoted below:

"2. The Minister may, notwithstanding anything in the principal Act, by order authorize any Canadian animals, other than store cattle, to be landed in Great Britain without being subject to the provisions of Part 1 of the Third Schedule to the principal Act, if, in the case of any such animals being cattle, there is produced a certificate issued by a duly authorized officer of the Dominion of Canada to the effect that the animals were within one month before shipment effectively tested for tuberculosis and were found to be free therefrom, and if the animals are landed in accordance with such conditions, to be prescribed in the order, as may, in the opinion of the Minister, be necessary or expedient for the prevention of the introduction of disease, other than tuberculosis, into Great Britain."

Canada therefore repudiates the suggestion that any agreement reached on the matter of the importation of pedigreed cattle at the Imperial Conference affects in the least degree the agreement reached in connexion with the importation of non-pedigreed breeding stock at the Conference in 1922, and incorporated in the Importation of Animals Act in December of the same year.

While it is not suggested that the press despatches accurately represent your views on the subject, the matter is regarded as of such importance by my Government that they would welcome an expression of your views. At the same time they would be glad to learn that the agreement reached in 1922 between representatives of His Majesty's Government and the Canadian Government relative to the importation of non-pedigreed breeding cattle will be carried out by issuing the order authorizing the admission of Canadian cattle other than store cattle, and thus giving effect to the provisions of Section 2 of the Importation of Animals Act.

As my Government is most anxious that the agreement should be carried out I would appreciate your reply at an early date so I may advise them of your decision.

Yours faithfully,

LUCIEN PACAUD.

MR. NOEL BUXTON (MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES) to

MR. PACAUD (SECRETARY TO HIGH COMMISSIONER).

(Received in Colonial Office, 8th April, 1924.)

Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries,

DEAR SIR, 10, Whitehall Place, S.W.1, 7th April, 1924.

I AM sorry that the remarks which I made on 25th February in the course of the debate in the House of Commons on the Diseases of Animals Bill, with regard to the offer of the Canadian Government to facilitate the supply of cattle to replace the losses of stock in Cheshire, should have given the impression that I wished to imply that the Canadian representatives at the Imperial Economic Conference had entered into any agreement as to the non-admission of ordinary breeding cattle into this country. My object was to remove any feeling that might exist that our action in regard to that offer was in conflict either with the express terms of the resolution of the Conference or with the statement made on behalf of the British Government in the course of the discussions. The Resolution related only to pedigree cattle; and in regard to other breeding cattle my predecessor made it clear (see pages 527-8 of Cmd. 2009) that he would not be able to take any action towards promoting their admission.

I am preparing a Bill to give effect to the recommendation of the Conference as to the admission of pedigree stock. I am, however, aware both from what was said by the Canadian representatives at the Conference and from the last paragraph of Mr. Mackenzie King's letter to Sir Robert Sanders of the 8th November* relative to the meeting at the Colonial Office on the 31st October that the passing of this measure will still leave matters in a position which the Canadian Government do not regard as satisfactory; but I am afraid that in the present state of political parties in this country, and of agricultural opinion, it would be quite impossible to obtain the consent of Parliament to the admission of breeding stock other than pedigree stock, and I can therefore hold out no hope of any departure from the attitude taken up by my predecessor on this point.

Yours faithfully,

N. BUXTON.

Enclosure in No. 478.

IMPORTATION OF PEDIGREE ANIMALS BILL.

EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM.

To understand this draft it is necessary to refer to SS. 24 and 27 of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, as amended by the Diseases of Animals Act, 1896, and Part II of the Third Schedule to the Act of 1894.

Section 24 as amended by Diseases of Animals Act, 1896.

"The provisions set forth in Part I (slaughter at port of landing) of the Third Schedule to this Act shall apply to all foreign animals other than—

- (a) foreign animals, the landing of which is for the time being prohibited by order of the Board of Agriculture; and
- (b) foreign animals intended for exhibition or other exceptional purposes, and the landing of which is allowed for the time being by the Board, subject to the provisions of Part II (quarantine) of the Third Schedule to this Act."

Section 27.

"Notwithstanding anything contained in this Act or in any order of the Board of Agriculture, the Board may make such orders as they think fit for allowing the landing of any foreign animals intended for exhibition, or for other exceptional purposes, and for allowing such animals to be landed without being subject to the provisions of Part I (slaughter at port of landing) of the Third Schedule to this Act, and the provisions of Part II (quarantine) of the said Schedule shall apply to any animals so allowed to be landed."

THE THIRD SCHEDULE.

PART I.

"Slaughter at Port of Landing.

1. The animals shall be landed only at a part of a port defined for that purpose by order of the Board of Agriculture, to be called a foreign animals wharf.
2. The animals shall be landed in such manner, at such times, and subject to such supervision and control as the Commissioners of Customs direct.
3. The animals shall not be moved alive out of the wharf."

PART II.

"Quarantine.

1. The animals shall be landed only at a part of a port defined for that purpose by order of the Board of Agriculture, to be called a foreign animals quarantine station.
2. The animals shall be landed in such manner, at such times, and subject to such supervision and control as the Commissioners of Customs direct, and subject to such conditions in respect of the animals, or of the vessel from which they are landed, as the Board by order prescribe.
3. When landed the animals shall be placed in sheds or other receptacles in the quarantine station, prepared by the local authority or the owners of the quarantine station, or the consignees of animals, or other persons, and approved by the Board.
4. The animals shall not be moved out of the quarantine station except on conditions prescribed by order of the Board.
5. Notwithstanding anything in the foregoing provisions of this part of this schedule the provisions of this Act relating to slaughter in case of the existence of disease, and to compensation or other payment in respect of animals so slaughtered, and to the ownership of carcasses of such animals, shall apply to animals within a foreign animals quarantine station."

The limited power of the Minister under S.27 to admit animals for exhibition or other exceptional purposes is by the Bill extended in relation to His Majesty's Dominions so as to cover registered pedigree stock to be imported for any purpose, although naturally breeding is the purpose for which they would generally be imported. When imported, they will not be subject to Part I of the Third Schedule to the Act, which requires slaughter on landing, but will be subject to quarantine under Part II. The period of quarantine will be entirely within the discretion of the Minister and be prescribed by the landing order.

The intention is to make Orders allowing the landing of particular animals, and not to issue a general Order allowing, e.g., the landing in Great Britain of any cattle brought from Canada which are registered in a recognized Canadian herd book.

The necessity for sub-section (3) is that S.5 of the Act of 1922 refers only to animals in an "imported animals wharf" or "approved landing place," both of which expressions have a technical meaning and might not be held to include an "imported animals quarantine station," such as would be provided for animals landed under the new Act.

Sub-section (4) is required, as the Schedule applies generally to imported animals with the exception only of animals landed "for exhibition or other exceptional purposes."

WITH reference to Mr. Thomas's despatch of the 3rd September, Dominions No. 436, Confidential,* relative to the draft of a Bill to amend the law with respect to the landing in Great Britain of pedigree animals, I have the honour to state that my Ministers have no specific observations to offer with regard to the extension of existing powers which the Bill is intended to effect.

2. They are advised that if, as a result of the measure, the importation of overseas stock were to assume any considerable proportions, the danger of introducing foot and mouth disease or cattle plague would be appreciably increased, and that, in that event, it would be necessary for this country to regulate even more strictly than at present the importation of animals from Great Britain. They assume, however, that His Majesty's Government have not overlooked this aspect of the matter.

SIR, Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 31st May, 1924.

WITH reference to your despatch of the 22nd ultimo (Dominions No. 189)† and enclosure, on the question of the Forestry Institute now being established at Oxford, I have the honour to inform you that my Ministers have considered the matter.

2. They are of opinion that the opportunities which the proposed Institute would afford to Forestry students or officers from Saorstát Éireann may be considered under two heads, viz.:—

(1) Those who have taken up a course of training in forestry, or gone through a science course in the College of Science or other Irish University or Training Institution.

(2) Forest officers already employed by the Free State who might be selected for future training, after some experience has been gained in practical work and administrative duties.

3. As regards the former class, my Ministers do not consider it probable that a student who has gone through a course of training in Ireland would be induced to take up a further course at his own expense, unless he could be assured of an appointment at its termination which would justify the outlay incurred. It is not possible at the present time to guarantee employment in the Saorstát to men possessing the qualifications attaching to such a course of training, but the Department of Agriculture can undertake to point out the advantages of the course to any graduates of Universities or Colleges intending to adopt a forestry career.

4. With regard to forestry officers at present in the employment of the Department of Agriculture, it is not considered that a course at the Institute would be of advantage to the Department. Future developments may possibly render it desirable to give forestry officers in the Department's service opportunities for further training. Should such cases arise, my Ministers would be glad to give full consideration to the question of availing of the courses proposed to be provided at the Forestry Institute.

2. I am informed by my Ministers that at present the Forestry Service of the Colony is very small. It consists of two qualified technical officers, the first appointment having been made in 1920. In the course of time the Forestry Department of the Colony will doubtless expand, and opportunities will occur for the Government to support the Forestry Institute at Oxford by deputing officers to attend courses, but at present, with a Forest Service in its infancy, it is scarcely possible for this Government to guarantee any definite support. Nevertheless, the value of such training and refresher courses as are proposed is fully recognized, and in the event of any officer of the Forest Service wishing to avail himself of long leave to take a special course of study as indicated in the preliminary Notice accompanying your despatch every facility will be given him by this Government to do so.

Resolution I.

Non-Resident Workmen.

"That this Imperial Economic Conference, taking note of the existing restrictions in the Workmen's Compensation laws of certain parts of the British Empire on the payment of benefits to workmen and their dependants on the ground of non-residence in the State in which the accident happened, and having regard to the tendency of such restrictions to discourage movement within the Empire, is of opinion that no British subject who is permanently incapacitated, and no dependant of a British subject who has been killed, by accident due to his employment in any part of the Empire should be excluded from any benefit to which he would otherwise be entitled under the Workmen's Compensation law of that part of the Empire on the ground of his removal to or residence in another part of the Empire."

Resolution II.

Seamen.

"That this Imperial Economic Conference, having had its attention drawn to cases where British sailors injured by accident while serving on ships registered in some part of the Empire have had no claim to compensation owing to the law of that part of the Empire being restricted, in its application to seamen, to accidents occurring within territorial waters or other limited area, is of opinion that the Government of any such part of the Empire should ensure that the benefits of its compensation law will extend to all accidents to seamen serving on ships registered within such part of the Empire wherever the ship may be when the accident takes place. And, furthermore, the Conference invites the Government of any British Colony or Protectorate where there is a register of shipping, but where legislation giving compensation rights to seamen does not at present exist, to consider the adoption of such legislation."

Resolution III.

Aliens.

That this Imperial Economic Conference, taking note of the disabilities imposed under the workmen's compensation laws of certain foreign countries on British subjects residing in those countries and their dependants, invites each Government of the Empire, regard being had to its own particular conditions, to consider the possibility of adopting in workmen's compensation legislation the principle of reciprocity—that is that the benefits of such legislation should be accorded to subjects of foreign countries upon the condition that and to the extent to which such foreign countries accorded reciprocal treatment to British subjects.

The Conference notes in adopting the foregoing resolutions that in certain of the Dominions workmen's compensation falls wholly or partially within provincial or State jurisdiction, and is in those cases and to that extent outside the control of the Dominion Government.

2. Copies of the relevant extracts from the Record of Proceedings of the Conference are enclosed.†

3. The position, so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned, is, as regards Resolution I of the Conference, that under the Workmen's Compensation legislation in force in this country, provision is made for the payment of compensation to permanently disabled workmen going to reside abroad, and no restriction is imposed as regards residence in the case of dependants; and, as regards Resolution II, that compensation is payable for injuries arising from accidents on a British ship, as defined in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, wherever the ship may be at the time of the accident.

4. In view of the fact that a proposal for an International Convention, providing for reciprocity in Workmen's Compensation, is one of the subjects on the Agenda for the next International Labour Conference to be held at Geneva in June, His Majesty's Government propose to defer further consideration of any action to be taken by them under Resolution III, until after that Conference. In this connexion the enclosed copy‡ of the reply of His Majesty's Government to the questionnaire prepared by the International Labour Office on the subject of "Equality of Treatment for National and Foreign Workers as regards Workmen's Compensation for Accidents," may be of interest to your Ministers.

5. It will be observed that provision for giving effect to reciprocal arrangements entered into with foreign countries on the subject of Workmen's Compensation is made by Section 26 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1923 (13 and 14 Geo. V, Ch. 42) [of which a copy is enclosed.] [of which a copy was enclosed in my predecessor's despatch under reference.]

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 155 of even date,* I have the honour to request Your Excellency to invite the attention of your Ministers to the memorandum† (No. I.E. (W) 2, a copy of which is enclosed for convenience of reference), laid before the Workmen's Compensation Committee of the Imperial Economic Conference, summarizing the legislation in force in the Dominions in regard to the position of non-residents and seamen in respect of Workmen's Compensation.

2. It appears from this memorandum that the practice in certain of the Canadian Provinces is not at present altogether in accord with the principles set out in Resolutions I and II of the Conference on the subject.

3. His Majesty's Government hope, however, that in the light of the views expressed at the Conference, the principles embodied in these Resolutions may prove acceptable to the Canadian Provinces.

(59499/24.)

8. IMPERIAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE.

It was decided to adopt the following resolution:—

That in the opinion of this Imperial Economic Conference (Canada dissenting)—

(1.) It is desirable to establish an Imperial Economic Committee, comprising representatives of the Governments represented in the Imperial Conference, and responsible to those Governments.

(2.) The function of the Committee should be to consider and advise upon any matters of an economic or commercial character, not being matters appropriate to be dealt with by the Imperial Shipping Committee, which are referred to it by any of the constituent Governments, provided that no question which has any reference to another part of the Empire may be referred to the Committee without the consent of that other part of the Empire.

It was further decided that in the constitution of the proposed Imperial Economic Committee representation should be allotted to the various constituent Governments as follows:—

Great Britain	4 members.
Dominions	2 members each.
India	2 members.
Colonies and Protectorates	2 members.

In view of the promise made that all recommendations of the Economic Conference would be submitted to a non-party vote in the House of Commons I cannot believe that you, on behalf of the Government, have taken the definite line against the Economic Committee communicated by the press cable which obviously must prejudice the decision in Parliament. Ends.

MR. 19TH JUNE. Since my telegram of 20th February* His Majesty's Government have given further consideration to question of proposed Economic Committee. As I intimated in my speech in the House of Commons in the course of this week's debate on the Preference proposals of last year, we have come to feel that there are economic matters of great importance to the Empire needing investigation which do not raise controversial questions of fiscal policy. If there were general agreement that any of these matters should be examined, we would gladly co-operate.

Our idea would be that, if all the Governments were willing, a Committee should now be set up with one definite reference in the first instance so framed as to exclude tariff issue and that the question of continuing the Committee in being or entrusting further investigation to a similar Committee should be decided by the Governments of the Empire in the light of the experience gained in the course of the first investigations.

Would your Government be willing to participate in establishment of Committee on these lines, membership of which would be as proposed at the Imperial Economic Conference, viz., Great Britain 4, Dominions 2 each, India 2, Colonies and Protectorates 2. If so, we suggest that Committee should deal with the very important question of marketing of Oversea produce in this country, terms of reference being as follows:—

"To consider the possibility of improving the methods of preparing for market, and of marketing within the United Kingdom, the food products of the overseas parts of the Empire, with a view to increasing the consumption of such products in the United Kingdom and promoting the interests both of producers and consumers."

We should contemplate that Committee would concentrate its attention first on meat and fruit.

I may add that it would be intention of His Majesty's Government, in event of Committee being appointed, to choose its own representatives solely with reference to their qualifications for inquiry of such a character.

Similar telegram sent to other Dominions and to India.—THOMAS.

As I particularly stressed this point at the Imperial Economic Conference and moved the resolution for appointment of an Economic Committee, the decision of His Majesty's Government as indicated by your telegram is warmly welcomed. I also agree that the question of continuance of the proposed Committee could be decided after the first investigation had demonstrated its utility. The constitution of the Committee is approved, but I suggest that, if those Governments of the Empire that are particularly concerned with the problems in the terms of reference agree, constitution and functioning of the Committee should not be dependent upon acceptance of all Governments. My Government agrees to the terms of reference within which it is assumed all methods other than fiscal for assisting both producer and consumer would come. Ends.

TELEGRAM.

2ND JULY. Your telegram of 19th June* regarding the advisability of investigating certain Inter-Imperial economic questions and proposing the establishment of joint Committee to investigate the marketing of overseas produce in Britain beginning with the consideration of meat and fruit with tariff issues excluded.

When the Imperial Economic Committee proposal was under consideration at the recent Imperial Conference the Canadian representatives expressed readiness to co-operate in inquiry into feasible methods of increasing Inter-Imperial trade to common advantage, but did not consider advisable the appointment of permanent London Committee with fixed personnel to consider the varied economic questions. This is still the position of Canadian Government. Present proposal for ad hoc committee to consider specific question of marketing overseas produce in Britain has approval of my Ministers.

Government is ready to investigate any possible means of increasing extent and economic efficiency of such trade and is prepared to appoint representatives with special reference to meat and fruit, but assumes that consideration can later be given to other produce of interest to Canadian producers and British consumers, in which case it may prove desirable to vary in parts the personnel of the representatives. My Ministers assume that Committee would report to the several Governments and that all would share proportionately in cost of inquiries. As to suggestions of future action Canadian Government will be prepared, particularly if proposed marketing committee proves successful, to suggest or consider appointment of other ad hoc committees to deal as they arise with specific economic questions considered to be of joint interest.—BYNG.

1ST OCTOBER. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Further (to) your telegram of 19th June.* Imperial Economic Committee. It is noted that Canada, New Zealand, South Africa and Australia, the Dominions most vitally concerned in the problems with which the proposed Committee will deal, have expressed their willingness to participate. Newfoundland, Irish Free State and India have not replied, which after such long delay plainly suggests that while they are not opposed to the immediate appointment of the Committee their interests are so little concerned that they are indifferent. In these circumstances my Government will be glad to learn whether your Government, which has already expressed its appreciation of the importance of marketing problems and its intention to co-operate, will take early steps to constitute the Committee, thus giving effect to the resolution of the Imperial Economic Conference and subsequent request of the four great Oversea Dominions. SIR, Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 22nd October, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your Confidential despatch of the 6th instant‡ and to previous despatches on the subject of the proposed Imperial Economic Committee.

2. My Ministers understand that it is now intended to set up a Committee on the basis suggested in the telegram§ from the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia of which a copy was transmitted with your despatch of the 22nd August,* to deal with the question of marketing overseas produce, particularly meat and fruit.

3. Should the proposal materialize, my Ministers desire to be represented on the Committee by the High Commissioner of Saorstát Éireann in London, on the understanding that his place on the Committee could be taken by a technical member of his staff whenever such a procedure should appear to be desirable. It is presumed that no expense would be incurred by Saorstát Éireann.

4. If it is contemplated, however, that the Committee should engage on the investigation of other important matters, and that as a result expenditure would be incurred, my Ministers would require to have an approximate estimate of their possible liability in the matter before they could commit themselves to providing the necessary provision for this purpose from public funds.

25TH NOVEMBER. Confidential. Imperial Economic Committee. His Majesty's Government are prepared to take immediate steps for establishment of Committee on lines indicated in my predecessor's telegram of 19th June.§ They would, however, propose small alteration of terms of reference so as to read at end "increasing the consumption of such products in the United Kingdom in preference to imports from foreign countries and to promote the interests both of producers and consumers." Object of addition, which does not affect sense of reference already agreed, is to avoid any possible misapprehension on the part of British farming interests. His Majesty's Government agree that Committee should concentrate its attention first on meat and fruit, and think that inquiries on these two points should be held concurrently.

His Majesty's Government would suggest that subject to concurrence of other Governments concerned Sir Halford Mackinder, Chairman of Imperial Shipping Committee, should be appointed also Chairman of the Economic Committee, with a view to securing co-ordination between work of the two Committees which might otherwise overlap. If Sir Halford Mackinder's appointment as Chairman proves acceptable, His Majesty's Government would propose that other nominations to the Committee made by themselves should be limited to three. In selecting representatives their idea is that choice should be based on principle of securing persons with wide general knowledge, so that continuity in personnel could be preserved should investigations of Committee be extended later to other food products, or kindred subjects of an economic character. As regards expenses His Majesty's Government would be prepared to pay, at the outset at any rate, whole of expenses of Committee apart from travelling and other personal expenses of oversea representatives on the Committee which they assume would be paid by Governments represented. Should be glad to learn by telegraph views of your Government on these proposals. Similar message sent to other Dominions.—AMERY.

The proposed small alteration in the terms of reference having for its object the avoidance of any possible misapprehension on the part of British farming interests has the approval of my Government which recognizes that the interests of the British farmers must be the first consideration of the British Government, the principle underlying all our representations being that subject to this proviso the Dominions should have preference over foreign countries. The appointment of Sir Halford Mackinder as Chairman of the Economic Committee is concurred in and is regarded as the most suitable in view of the necessity of securing co-ordination between the work of the Imperial Shipping Committee and the Economic Committee. It is noted that His Majesty's Government has agreed the Committee should concentrate its attention first on meat and fruit and that inquiries on these two points should be held concurrently. This also is concurred in by my Government. TELEGRAM.

13TH DECEMBER. Your telegram 25th November* states that the British Government are prepared to take immediate steps for establishing Imperial Economic Committee on lines indicated in your telegram 19th June.†

My Ministers in my telegram 2nd July‡ expressed their readiness to co-operate in inquiry as to the means of increasing the extent and efficiency of marketing overseas produce in Britain. They added that objection previously taken to permanent Imperial Economic Committee sitting in London and with fixed personnel which would not correspond to wide variety in subject matter and range of possible inter-Imperial Economic issues still held good, and suggested that the proposed marketing Committee be of an ad hoc character and that as other economic questions arose in the future they might be referred to the Committee or other means of inquiry of composition required by the circumstances of each case. These considerations do not appear to be noted in your telegram of 25th November.*

Canadian Government would suggest naming Committee now proposed Overseas Produce Marketing Committee or some abbreviation or variation of such title.

My Ministers agree with the suggestion that inquiry into meat and fruit marketing should be held concurrently and approve of proposed slight alteration in terms of reference. They would be pleased to concur in the appointment of Sir Halford Mackinder as Chairman of the Marketing Committee. As regards expenses, whilst preferring proportionate distribution of any joint expense they would concur in the British Government's proposal that it would bear this at the outset but concurrence subject to reconsideration if expenses assume any considerable extent. Canadian Government would of course provide for full expenses of its own representative.

My Ministers believe that inquiries of the Committee on the lines proposed should prove of distinct value both to Britain and to the Dominions.—BYNG.

PACIFIC CABLE BOARD—AMENDMENT OF CONSTITUTION.

Secretariat Note.—In October, 1923, a vacancy occurred in the Chairmanship of the Pacific Cable Board. In accordance with the powers vested in them by paragraph 5 of the Schedule to the Pacific Cable Act, 1901 (1 Edw. VII, Ch. 31), the Treasury announced their intention of appointing Sir W. Mercer to be Chairman, and this intention was notified by telegram to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and at the same time to the Prime Ministers of those Dominions then present in London. In November, discussion took place between the Prime Ministers and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, as a result of which the Chancellor of the Exchequer agreed (i) that legislation should be introduced to amend the constitution of the Board in certain respects; (ii) that Sir W. Mercer should retire from the Office of Chairman in twelve months, i.e., after the legislation involved in (i) had passed; (iii) that in future the Board should be consulted before a new Chairman was appointed.

In December, the Board put forward to the Treasury certain proposals for the amendment of its constitution, including those referred to under (i) above. As a result of this the following correspondence ensued.

2ND FEBRUARY. Question of amendment of constitution of Pacific Cable Board in certain respects was recently raised by Board, which has put forward following proposals:—

(1) Reduction of number of British representatives to two; each Government to have power to appoint a deputy during absence of a member representing such Government:

(2) Payment to Chairman of maximum salary of £1,000 a year, Board to have power to vary the amount if the contributing Governments concur, and payment to each member of Board of allowance not exceeding £500 a year so long as such member does not hold office of profit under British or any Dominion Government:

(3) Chairman of Board, on occurrence of vacancy, to be appointed by Board from amongst members, subject to agreement of contributing Governments. Chairman to hold office for one year, being, however, eligible for re-election:

(4) Surplus of receipts over expenses in connexion with cable to be applied in such manner as Board may direct.

Board also wish provision to be made by law giving them power to construct and work land lines in connexion with their cable. Preliminary views of His Majesty's Government on these proposals as follows:—

(1) Suggestions that British representatives should be reduced to two, and that there should be power to send deputies to meetings of Board not acceptable. No objection, however, to the increase of the number of representatives of Canada and Australia to three each:

(2) No objection to the increase of the maximum salary of Chairman of Board to £1,000 a year, or to provision for payment by Board of allowance to members, but allowance of £300 thought sufficient.

(3) Suggested that appointment of Chairman should be made by Treasury as at present, but after consultation with Board.

(4) Thought that arrangements under which surplus is to be applied in such a manner as Treasury direct should stand. Entire capital of Board has been provided by British Government, and so long as this is the case, and capital has not been wholly repaid, it appears reasonable that Treasury should decide on disposal of any surplus. In the past no difficulty has in practice arisen from this provision and very large sums have in recent years been placed to reserve and applied to purposes of Board.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

19TH FEBRUARY. My telegram 2nd February.* Pacific Cable Board. Following is summary of Bruce's comments on behalf of Commonwealth Government (with which Government of Canada understood to be in accord) and views of His Majesty's Government thereon.

(1) Commonwealth Government would prefer reduction of number of representatives of British Government to two as keeping number of Board on more workable basis, but would accept increase of representation of Canada and Australia to three. His Majesty's Government still think latter course better.

(2) Commonwealth Government support Board's proposal for allowance to members not exceeding £500. His Majesty's Government are advised that analogous payment to directors of business organizations in this country would be about £250: in the circumstances they still think maximum of £300 sufficient.

(3) Commonwealth Government consider that appointment of Chairman should be matter for consultation between Governments and should only be made after agreement reached. His Majesty's Government quite prepared to consult partner Governments instead of Board prior to appointment.

(4) Commonwealth Government consider that disposal of surplus of receipts over expenses should be in hands of Board or alternatively should be settled by consultation between partner Governments, and are unwilling to accept argument that as original capital was provided by British Government disposal of surplus should therefore be in hands of British Government, on grounds

(a) that repayment of the capital is amply assured by sinking fund and by accumulated profits, in addition to guarantee of other Governments;

(b) that all partner Governments are responsible proportionately for losses on working.

His Majesty's Government feel, nevertheless, that sufficient cause has not arisen for alteration of present law, which has so far worked satisfactorily. Section 4 of Pacific Cable Act, 1901, provides that surplus receipts of Board whilst capital outstanding are to be applied to reduction of advances made by His Majesty's Government. This provision has been very liberally interpreted, large sums having in recent years been placed to reserve and applied to purposes of Board, and there is no reason to doubt that this liberality of interpretation will be continued.

As regards other proposals of Board referred to in my telegram of 2nd February,† His Majesty's Government regard proposal that Chairman should be appointed for one year only as inconvenient for business purposes, and likely to render appointment unattractive to suitable candidates: but they would agree to fixing the term of appointment at three years with possibility of extension. They deprecate proposal that Board should have power to vary amount of Chairman's salary subject to approval of partner Governments. They agree that Board should be given any necessary additional powers as regards construction and working of land lines.

Please telegraph views of your Government on suggested modifications of Board's proposals as soon as possible.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

NOTE OF CONCLUSIONS AT A MEETING BETWEEN THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES AND THE HIGH COMMISSIONERS FOR CANADA, THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, AND NEW ZEALAND ON MONDAY, 25TH FEBRUARY, 1924.

SIR C. T. DAVIS (Colonial Office),
MR. M. F. HEADLAM (Treasury), and
MR. E. J. HARDING (Colonial Office)

were also present.

(1) Composition of Board.—It was agreed that the Board might consist of the following representatives:—

United Kingdom	3
Canada	3
Australia	3
New Zealand	2

(2) Allowance to Members.—It was agreed that the maximum allowance should be fixed at £300 per annum.

(3) Nomination of Chairman.—The High Commissioners agreed in Mr. Thomas's suggestion that the Board might nominate, after agreement between the partner Governments, as to the person to be nominated.

(4) Disposal of Surplus.—The High Commissioners agreed in Mr. Thomas's suggestion that any surplus might be dealt with by the Board after agreement between the partner Governments.

Mr. Headlam said that the Chancellor of the Exchequer must be consulted on points (3) and (4) which, in the meantime, he could not accept on behalf of the Treasury. Mr. Larkin suggested on point (4), as an alternative, that the question of disposal of the surplus might be left over for a year.

(5) Tenure of Office of Chairman.—It was agreed that a term of three years might be fixed, with power of extension.

(6) Variation of Chairman's Salary.—The High Commissioners would have preferred that power to increase the Chairman's salary should be given in the Bill: the matter was left over.

TELEGRAM.

12TH MARCH. Your telegram of 2nd February.* your telegram of 19th February.† Pacific Cable Board. My Ministers have fully considered the points raised by you. In reply they desire to reaffirm Prime Minister's statement that they attach utmost importance to the amendment of the Constitution and view with very great apprehension any extension of operations unless and until this is done. If, however, His Majesty's Government regard such extension as vitally urgent Commonwealth Government, on receipt of assurance that the Constitution will be amended as set out below at an early date, is prepared to acquiesce.

With regard to your telegram of 19th February, paragraph No. 1, Commonwealth Government prepared give way on this point if it will lead to settlement.

Paragraph No. 2. Commonwealth Government regard this as a very minor point and, while still holding original view expressed by Prime Minister, if same is regarded as being important by His Majesty's Government, no further objection will be raised.

* No. 535. † No. 539.

Paragraph No. 3. Commonwealth Government adheres to view expressed, and understand that His Majesty's Government now agrees that appointment of Chairman should be matter for consultation between the Government(s) and should only be made after agreement reached.

Paragraph No. 4. Commonwealth Government still strongly of opinion that disposal of surplus receipts over expenses should be in the hands of the Board or, alternatively, should be settled by consultation between partner Governments. Under no circumstances will the Commonwealth Government agree to control being in the hands of His Majesty's Treasury. Subject to this very definite decision, my Government will approve any methods by which the partner Governments, either through consultation or through their representatives on Board, shall determine allocation of surplus receipts.

With regard to other proposals mentioned, Commonwealth Government prepared to acquiesce in proposal that Chairman should be appointed for three years, but are still of opinion that Board should have power to vary amount of Chairman's salary subject to the approval of the partner Governments.

It is noted that His Majesty's Government agrees that the Board should be given the necessary additional power as regards construction and working of the land-lines.

The foregoing leaves very few points of disagreement, and on these the Commonwealth Government regrets it cannot give way. In the circumstances, Ministers would be glad to receive the concurrence of the British Government on the matter above mentioned and to hear that amendments of the Constitution can be effected.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

PACIFIC CABLE BOARD.

NOTE OF CONCLUSIONS REACHED AT A MEETING BETWEEN THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES, THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND, AND SIR CAMPBELL STUART, REPRESENTING THE GOVERNMENT OF CANADA (IN THE ABSENCE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER) ON WEDNESDAY, 2ND APRIL, 1924, IN CONTINUATION OF A MEETING HELD ON THURSDAY, 27TH MARCH, AT WHICH THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA WAS ALSO PRESENT.

SIR C. T. DAVIS (Colonial Office),
MR. M. F. HEADLAM (Treasury),
MR. J. E. STEPHENSON (Colonial Office),

were also present.

(A) Composition of Board (see Conclusion (1) of meeting of 25th February*). It was agreed, on the proposal of Sir C. Stuart, that the numbers of representatives of the partner Governments on the Board should be:—

United Kingdom	2
Canada	2
Australia	2
New Zealand	1

(B) Variation of Chairman's salary (see Conclusion (6) of meeting of 25th February). It was agreed that provision should be made for power to be given to the Board to increase the salary of the Chairman above £1,000 per annum in the case of the appointment of a person possessing high technical qualifications, subject to the concurrence of the Governments concerned.

(C) Disposal of Surplus (see Conclusion (4) of meeting of 25th February). Following on a suggestion put forward by the High Commissioner for the Commonwealth and supported by the High Commissioner for New Zealand and Sir C. Stuart at the meeting of 27th March, it was agreed that power should be taken to apply the accumulated reserve of the Board to paying off the money advanced by the British Government, the amount so repaid being replaced by the partner Governments in shares on the proportionate basis laid down in the Act of 1901; and, if this transaction were carried out, to leave the control of future surpluses to the Board without any obligation to accelerate debt repayment.

* No. 539.

(D) It was agreed that the Parliamentary Counsel should be asked to draft clauses for incorporation in a Bill making provision for the above arrangements, and also the arrangements previously agreed to as set out in Conclusions (2), (3) and (5) of the meeting of the 25th February.

April, 1924.

Secretariat Note.—As arranged at D in No. 541 above, a Bill was drafted to give effect to the amendments of the constitution of the Board on which agreement had been reached. Copies of the draft Bill were sent to Sir C. Stuart and the High Commissioners for the Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand. After some delay, replies were received to the effect that the draft Bill was approved in principle by the Governments of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, and New Zealand; but Sir C. Stuart and the High Commissioner for the Commonwealth of Australia expressed a desire for a further meeting to discuss certain points of detail in connexion with the drafting of the Bill. Various circumstances, especially the political situation in October, 1924, prevented the holding of such a meeting, and the consequent introduction of the Bill into Parliament prior to the expiration of the twelve months of Sir W. Mercer's appointment, and, as a result, the following correspondence took place.

8TH OCTOBER. Confidential. As your Prime Minister is aware it was arranged when Sir William Mercer was appointed Chairman of Pacific Cable Board last year that he should hold office for a year from the date of his appointment, i.e., 20th October. At that time it was thought that amending legislation as regards constitution of Board would be in operation by now, and also that new West Indian cable arrangements would be practically completed.

These expectations have not been realized, since terms of amending legislation have not yet been finally settled and initiation of new West Indian scheme entails a great deal of complicated work. In these circumstances, best course seems to be that Mercer should continue for the present to act as Chairman, it being understood that he will retire as soon as other arrangements can be made after passing of new legislation. Please telegraph whether your Prime Minister agrees. Similar telegram sent to other Dominions concerned.—THOMAS.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 24th March, 1924.)

[Answered by Nos. 547 and 548.]

(No. 100.)

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 11th March, 1924.
I HAVE the honour to enclose, herewith, for consideration, a copy of a letter from the Department of the Secretary of State for External Affairs on the subject of wave lengths.

I have, &c.,
BYNG OF VIMY.

Enclosure in No. 546.

FROM DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

SIR, Ottawa, 10th March, 1924.
I HAVE the honour to represent that public interest in radio continues to grow and there are now 45 broadcasting stations in the Dominion of Canada, and 544 in the United States, while the number of receiving sets installed is increasing at an unprecedented rate.

In an effort to reduce the interference from so many transmitting stations working simultaneously, the United States has allotted waves out of the band 222-546 metres, while the Dominion Government is allotting those between 350 and 450 metres.

Unfortunately, this band includes two wave lengths used by ships, viz., 300 and 450 metres, and at night-time the interference experienced from ship stations is very objectionable, particularly in the case of receiving stations located near the coast, and with a view to alleviating the situation, a Conference of all parties on this side of the Atlantic interested in the question was held in New York on the 11th of January, at which the Canadian and United States companies operating ship stations agreed to abandon the use of 450 metres for ship to shore and inter-ship working, and to increase the wave lengths of the coast stations previously using the 450 metre wave.

This agreement, of course, applies to United States and Canadian ships and stations only, and there still remains interference from British and foreign ships using this wave length, which, the Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries states, has noticeably increased since the wave has been abandoned by the coast stations.

The Government of Canada is anxious to do everything possible to clear the broadcast band from this interference, and I have the honour to request that His Excellency the Governor-General may be humbly moved to cause an inquiry to be addressed to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, asking if His Majesty's Government would be disposed to issue an order forbidding the use of 450 metres by ships when west of, say, 40° Long., on the Atlantic, and when east of, say 150° Long., on the Pacific, during the evening broadcast hours, viz., 6 p.m. to 2 a.m., E.S.T. (75th Meridian) for the Atlantic, and from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m., P.S.T. (120th Meridian) for the Pacific, and would also, on behalf of this Government, place this proposal before other European administrations which have ships plying to North America.

The Government of Canada would be prepared to issue reciprocal regulations forbidding the use of any European broadcast waves by Canadian ships, when in certain prescribed areas on the European side of the Atlantic.

I am to add that it is the intention of the Dominion Government to introduce a resolution at the next International Radio Conference, recommending the reservation of a band of wave lengths exclusively for broadcasting.

I have, &c.,

JOSEPH POPE,

Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

MY LORD, Downing Street, 19th August, 1924.
WITH reference to my despatch No. 160 of the 16th April,† on the subject of wireless wave lengths, I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the question raised in your despatch No. 100 of the 11th March* has now been further considered.

2. His Majesty's Government are prepared to arrange for the discontinuance of the use of the 450 metres wave within 250 miles of the Canadian coast, and, also, if so desired, of the coast of Newfoundland, by British ships, the wireless installation on which is operated under licence from the Postmaster-General, on condition that Canadian ships will similarly be forbidden to use this wave within 250 miles of the coast of this country except in so far as its use is necessary in order to obtain bearings.

3. If this proposal is satisfactory to the Canadian Government, His Majesty's Government would then be prepared to approach the United States Government with a view to extension of the arrangement to the United States coast and to United States ships.

4. On the completion of such an arrangement His Majesty's Government would also be prepared to make a similar proposal to European countries, in particular to France.

5. I should be glad to be informed as soon as possible whether this procedure is satisfactory to your Government.

(No. 401.)

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 15th September, 1924.

WITH reference to your despatch No. 360 of the 19th August,* on the subject of interference caused by the use of wave length of 450 metres by ships when west of 40° longitude on the Atlantic and when east of 150° longitude on the Pacific during the evening broadcasting hours, I have the honour to inform you that the Government of Canada is pleased to note that His Majesty's Government is prepared to arrange for the discontinuance of the use of the 450 metres wave by British ships when within 250 miles of the Canadian coast, and also, if desired, when within that distance of the coast of Newfoundland, subject to the condition that Canadian ships will similarly be forbidden to use this wave length when within 250 miles of the coast of the British Isles; it accepts this proposal and will issue forthwith suitable regulations forbidding the use of 450 metres by Canadian ships when within 250 miles of the British Isles, except for the purpose of obtaining D.F. bearings. It is requested that the prohibition in the case of British ships may include the area within 250 miles of Newfoundland as well as of Canada.

A public announcement of this arrangement will be made on 24th September, unless His Majesty's Government requests otherwise in the meantime.

It is learned with pleasure that His Majesty's Government is prepared to make a similar proposal to European countries, in particular to France.

(No. 274 (R).)

CANADIAN Government have suggested that, in order to lessen interference with the reception of broadcast programmes, British ships should be prohibited from using 450 metres wave within 250 miles of the coast of Canada and the United States

- (1) Paragraph 44, Secret memorandum (No. 176—C).

Tanks for the storage of oil-fuel at Simonstown are being built, and it is probable that the work will be completed during the coming financial year, 1923-24. As soon as the tanks are erected, arrangements will be made for a supply of oil-fuel being obtained.

It may serve a useful purpose to state here shortly what further steps have been and are being taken by the Union Government in the matter of Naval Services generally.

* No. 2 in Dominions No. 82.

(a) South Africa Naval Service.

The Survey Sloop and two Minesweeping Trawlers obtained by the Union Government from His Majesty's Government after the Imperial Conference in 1921, are being used as intended, viz. :—

- (i) The role of the Survey Sloop is the hydrographic survey of South African waters under Admiralty direction, and when not so employed, it will carry out fishery research work.
- (ii) The role of the Trawlers is to visit the coast ports, and train the personnel of the Minesweeping Section of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve (South Africa Division), referred to below.

At present these Trawlers are engaged in training their Permanent Ships' personnel.

(b) Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve (South Africa Division).

This Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve consists of three Sections, a General Service, a Minesweeping and a War Reserve Section.

- (i) The General Section at present consists of five Companies comprising volunteers who have entered for training in the South Africa Division. The personnel is intended primarily to supplement His Majesty's ships on the Africa Station in time of war, by supplying tradesmen such as fitters, carpenters, etc. They will also be available for duty in connexion with the Naval Control Service, e.g., as crews for any Auxiliary Cruisers that may be put into commission, or as gun crews for merchantmen armed for self-protection. Further, they will man the small craft necessary for harbour control and examination services, and undertake whatever naval transportation duties may be required ashore.

These Companies embark annually for training on His Majesty's ships.

- (ii) The Minesweeping Section will consist of four Flotillas, and will comprise the personnel to man Auxiliary Trawlers, which in time of war will have assigned to them the task of maintaining the free navigation of the Union's sea trade routes. At present, three Flotillas have been authorized, and sixteen vessels, after having been "sighted," have been noted as suitable for Minesweeping duties.

- (iii) The War Reserve Section.—Arrangements are being made to organize a War Reserve Section, to which will be posted all personnel who have completed their Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve training, and also all ex-members of the Royal Navy or Mercantile Marine resident in the Union and available in case of emergency to supplement the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve (South Africa Division).

(c) Provision of Store and Workshop Accommodation—East Dockyard, Simonstown.

The Union Government has agreed to provide new store and workshop accommodation in the East (or new) Dockyard, in order to make that Dockyard self-contained, and to release accommodation which might be required for the South African Naval Services in the West (or old) Dockyard.

The Union Parliament has approved of the following Services, viz. :—

(i) Plumbers Shop and Galvanizing Shop ...	3,000.
(ii) Extension of Fitting Shop with Pattern Shop ...	20,000.
(iii) Electric Generating Station and Battery Room ...	40,000.
(iv) Machinery for (i), (ii) and (iii) above ...	80,000.
(v) Store for Guns and Gun Mountings ...	19,000.
Total	£162,000.

An amount of £25,000 was included in the expenditure from Loan Funds voted by the Union Parliament for the year ending 31st March, 1923, in order that a beginning might be made with these works.

Honkong and Fiji.—These Colonies, being east of longitude 110 degrees E, are, therefore, affected by the status quo clause of the Four-Power Naval Treaty. The only local measure they can undertake appears to be that of the institution of Naval Volunteer Organizations. COMMITTEE OF IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

EMPIRE NAVAL POLICY AND CO-OPERATION.

Memorandum by the Naval Staff.

THE question whether the present arrangements are adequate for keeping the various Dominion Governments fully advised as to the Naval needs of the Empire with a view to obtaining continuity of Naval policy has already been brought to the notice of the Dominion representatives in the various Committee of Imperial Defence Papers forwarded to them on the subject of Empire Naval Defence.

2. Any arrangements which are come to should be such as to require only a minimum of adjustment to enable a supreme Naval authority to function in time of war, and it is also fully recognized that the Dominions, unless they have decided otherwise, will continue to retain in their own hands not only the development and disposition of their own forces in peace, but also the right of decision whether or not these forces are to be placed at the disposal of the Admiralty in time of war.

3. Arrangements for co-operation between the Naval Services and Forces of the Dominions of Canada and Australia and the British Navy were agreed to at the 1911 Imperial Conference, and arrangements have, as the services of other Dominions developed, been made with those Dominions.

4. The arrangements were severely tested during the war and they proved a fairly satisfactory basis for co-operation, but, in view of the recent reductions of the British Fleet and the possible further extension of Dominion Fleets, it is considered that they now require some elaboration and amendment; the question of Staff co-operation in particular seems to require further consideration.

5. On paper, the Empire Navy of one-power Standard, as contemplated by the Imperial Conferences of 1921 and 1923, and made up of the various Dominion Navies, together with that of Great Britain, might well appear equal to that of another Power, but there is a grave danger that its collective efficiency might fall short of that required to safeguard the Empire unless suitable arrangements exist for all parts to be trained and prepared so that they can act as one in war. The problem which has to be faced by each Government is how best to organize, train and prepare its Navy in peace so that in war all the various portions of the combined Empire Navy may be able to act together for the defence of the Empire with an efficiency and striking power at least equal to that of any foreign fleet.

6. In all matters affecting naval fighting efficiency a Government is advised by its Naval Board or Admiralty which, in giving advice, is in turn assisted by its Naval Staff. The Naval Staff at the Admiralty is an organization apart from the Administrative and Technical Departments, and is solely charged with questions of Naval policy, war plans and training for war. The British Naval Staff is at present composed of seven divisions, attached to which are a total of some fifty-six Naval and Marine Officers. The divisions, and a summary of their functions, are shown in the attached table:—

Intelligence Division	Collection and distribution of intelligence. (World wide.)
Plans Division	Preparation of plans and policy.
Operations Division	Movements of ships, &c.
Trade Division	Plans for protection of shipping.
T. and S. D. Division	Principle of training generally.
			Principles of staff organization and co-ordination between the divisions of the staff.
Gunnery Division	Use of weapons.
Torpedo Division

In addition, there are two small sections, an Air Section and a Tactical Section, to advise on these particular subjects.

7. It is felt that the setting up of a Naval Staff comparable with the above by each Dominion in the early stages of its naval development would be hardly practicable, as overhead expenses would be out of all proportion to the size of the Navy maintained. At the same time it seems clear that a Dominion Navy will require its own Naval Staff, and it is most important that the separate staffs should not work in watertight compartments.

8. These difficulties can perhaps best be overcome by the appointment of Dominion Naval Officers to the Admiralty Naval Staff and British Naval Officers to the Dominion Naval Staffs, and by arranging for a free interchange of advice being maintained between the Naval Advisers at the Admiralty on the one hand and the Naval Advisers of the Dominions on the other. The organization would be analogous to the Imperial General Staff, agreed to in principle at the 1907 Imperial Conference, when it was pointed out that this function of advice was performed by the General Staff "without in the least interfering in questions connected with command and administration."

9. It will be recognized, however, that, in order that suitable officers may be available to fill the appointments on the several Naval Staffs, Staff training will be essential, and it seems desirable that this Staff training should be uniform. The setting up of separate Naval Staff Colleges by the Dominions would be expensive, but, as a Staff College has already been established in Great Britain, it is suggested that, as each Dominion Navy develops, selected Dominion Officers should be trained at this College with a view to their subsequent employment on the British and Dominion Naval Staffs. The actual strength of the several Naval Staffs would be a matter to be settled by the Governments concerned.

10. To sum up, it is proposed that the following general principles should now be adopted:—

- (a.) In order to obtain continuity of Naval policy and to ensure that the best advice on questions concerning the Naval defence of the Empire is always available for the British and Dominion Governments, the several Naval Staffs should be built up by uniform Staff training and a free interchange of officers between the British and Dominion Naval Staffs.
- (b.) A free interchange of advice should be established between the British and Dominion Naval Staffs.

11. It is suggested that this development of the Staff aspect of Naval organization should be marked by adding the title of Chief of Naval Staff to those of the first Naval Members in Australia and New Zealand and of the Director of Naval Services in Canada, and that the Chief of the Naval Staff, Admiralty, should, on the analogy of the Chief of the Imperial General Staff, be described as the Chief of the Imperial Naval Staff.

- (b) As it is not envisaged that New Zealand will embark upon a separate list of officers, as is the case with the Australian Navy, officers trained in War Staff duties can always be obtained on loan from the Admiralty; and when an expansion of this Division takes place it is considered that the loan of an officer for this purpose will become necessary.

The Prime Minister advises that the procedure suggested in the Memorandum has been in operation in the Royal Australian Navy for some years, to the extent possible, and that it is proposed to continue to develop the organization in the manner indicated as Royal Australian Naval Officers of suitable seniority and training become available.

The First Naval Member of the Commonwealth Naval Board is also Chief of the Naval Staff (vide Regulation 14, Statutory Rules 1921, No. 1), and the Naval Staff, Navy Office, Melbourne, is organized on the lines of the Admiralty Naval Staff as set out in the Memorandum in question. Owing to financial stringency, however, the Staff, which two or three years ago consisted of officers as directors of the various sections, has been very considerably reduced, and now consists of a nucleus only with the same organization which can be developed in time of emergency.

of Empire Naval Policy and Co-operation, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] to inform your Ministers, with reference to paragraph 33 of that memorandum, that His Majesty's Government have decided to start work upon the establishment of a naval base at Singapore, on the understanding that no considerable expenditure will be incurred during the financial year 1923-24, and only a moderate expenditure during 1924-25. The provision made in the estimates for the financial year 1923-24, is £160,000, and the total estimate for the work is £11,000,000.

2. It will be remembered that at the Imperial Meetings held in 1921, the strategic situation in the Pacific was discussed, and the urgent need for establishing a base for the British Fleet at Singapore, for the protection of Australia, New Zealand, India and the Colonies in the Far East was pointed out.

3. The discussions which have led up to the development of Singapore, should still be regarded as secret, although the actual programme of development has now been made public. Debates in the House of Commons* on the subject (the required references are noted in the margin) will be of interest as showing the extent of what has been said in this country.

4. GENERAL Smuts is rather concerned about the announcement that the Admiralty proposes to proceed with the construction of the naval base at Singapore. The approval of the 1921 Imperial Conference ceased, he contends, to have any significance after the conclusion of the Washington Treaty profoundly altered Naval policy. He was always opposed to the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, but was anxious to terminate it without alienating Japan. At Washington this result was achieved by negotiating a Pacific Pact in its place with the concurrence of Japan. All this good work, he thinks, will be neutralized by our naval activities at Singapore which Japan is, in his opinion, certain to regard as a national menace. The obvious reply is, of course, that the Singapore Harbour was recommended in the Jellicoe Report, and has been under consideration by the Admiralty ever since as the ideal central base for the Empire; but General Smuts argues that considerations of this kind will not influence the opinion of the Japanese people as a whole as they will interpret our motives solely by our deeds without regard for any logical explanation. General Smuts is all the more concerned because he realises the other Dominions are not likely to be in accord with his ideas.

MINUTE No. 360.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Royal Highness the Governor-General's Minute No. 2/1894 of the 20th April, transmitting a copy of the Secretary of State's despatch No. 119, of 27th March, on the subject of the expenditure of £11,000,000 upon the establishment of a naval base at Singapore, such expenditure to be extended over a period of years, and without prejudice to any decisions of the forthcoming Imperial Conference.

Ministers desire to take this opportunity of putting on record their views in this matter, and to request that their views may be communicated to the other Dominions for their information.

One of the most beneficent results of the Washington Conference was the signature of the Quadruple Pacific Treaty, which replaced the Anglo-Japanese Alliance without disturbing the friendly relations between Great Britain and Japan. The result of the agreement was to minimize for the duration of the pact any danger of war in the Pacific Ocean, and the fact that America joined in this pact at once altered the conditions under which a base at Singapore was considered at the Prime Ministers' Conference in 1921. A reconsideration of the whole Naval policy of the British Empire is therefore rendered necessary.

Attention is drawn to the Resolution adopted in respect of this matter under the heading, Imperial Defence (Naval) at the Conference held in London in 1921, when it was resolved that any definite decision in regard to Naval Defence, or the manner of co-operation, should be deferred until after the Conference at Washington.

Ministers regret that any statements should have been made on the subject of Singapore, in view of the imminence of the Prime Ministers' Conference, especially having in mind the fact that no expenditure on this project is provided during the year 1923-24, and only a very moderate expenditure thereafter during 1924-25.

A great fortified base at Singapore, may, in its effect on Japanese opinion, produce far-reaching re-actions for the foreign policy as well as for the naval policy of the Empire, and the whole subject in all its possible bearings should have received the careful attention of the Imperial Conference before a decision on any detail was announced.

The last review of the Naval position is contained in the Memorandum* of the Committee of Imperial Defence dated 28th July, 1922, and if there has been any further development in the views of the Admiralty, Ministers trust that His Majesty's Government will prepare and issue for their consideration a fresh appreciation of the world naval position so that in coming to the Conference in October, they may be advised in advance of the views that the Admiralty may submit.

COMMITTEE OF IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

ESTABLISHMENT OF NAVAL BASE AT SINGAPORE AND ITS EFFECT UPON THE FOREIGN AND NAVAL POLICY OF THE EMPIRE.

(Approved by the Standing Defence Sub-Committee on June 19th, 1923,
S.S. 33rd Minutes.)

WITH reference to the Minute of the 18th May, 1923, signed on behalf of the South African Government by General Smuts and forwarded by the Governor-General,† protesting against the announcement of the decision in regard to Singapore pending the discussion of the whole subject by the Imperial Conference, the history of this question, including the facts as to what happened at the Imperial Conference in 1921 and at the Washington Conference, 1921-22, is as follows:—

2. Until the British Fleet was centralized in Home waters in consequence of the development of the German menace, a British Battle Fleet was maintained in the Pacific as well as in the Mediterranean, and the base at Hong Kong was maintained on the scale necessary for a first-class naval base under the conditions prevailing in those days. During the ten years preceding the War all modern battleships were withdrawn from the China Station in accord with the policy of concentration in Home waters which was forced upon the Admiralty by the development of the German menace. During the nineteen years which have elapsed since this withdrawal began, the increase in the size of battleships, the developments of ordnance and the introduction of oil fuel have rendered Hong Kong in its present state useless as a base for a modern Battle Fleet. The Navy was therefore in the position that, if political circumstances should ever render it desirable again to maintain a Battle Fleet in the Pacific, they would be unable to do so owing to the lack of any naval base.

3. In the Memorandum on Naval Policy (E. 4 of February, 1921), which was prepared by the Admiralty for the Imperial Conference, 1921, reasons were put down why it would be preferable to develop a new naval base at Singapore rather than to bring the base at Hong Kong up to date.

4. The original decision to create a naval base at Singapore was taken by the late Cabinet on the 16th June, 1921.

5. The reasons for this decision were communicated to the Imperial Conference, in the first instance, by Mr. Balfour on the 28th June, 1921 (E-8th Meeting). It is interesting to note that the occasion chosen by Mr. Balfour to make this statement was during the discussion on the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, and that he gave as one of the principal reasons in support of renewing the Anglo-Japanese Alliance the necessity of gaining the considerable time required for the creation of a base at Singapore:—

"In these circumstances, we have come to the conclusion that one of the most pressing needs for Imperial Defence is that Singapore should be made into a place where the British Fleet can concentrate for the defence of the Empire, of our interests in the East, our interests in India, our interests in Australia, our interests in New Zealand, our interests in the smaller Possessions there, and that for that purpose it is absolutely necessary to undertake works at Singapore. Those works cannot be finished in a day. They cannot be finished in a year. They must take some time to complete.

"MR. MASSEY: They are going on.

* No. 22. † No. 17 and enclosure.

"MR. BALFOUR: Not yet. This question has only been taken in hand quite recently. Therefore, until Singapore is rendered the place which we think it ought to be made—a place of concentration, a place of refitting and refuelling—until this is done, we are at a relative disadvantage undoubtedly in the Pacific, and that is a very strong strategical reason, putting all wider considerations apart, why we should remain on the most friendly terms with Japan, and why we should continue a policy we have hitherto pursued with such success, that is, of joint action with Japan in the Far East."

6. It should be noted that Mr. Balfour did not suggest that a renewal of the Alliance with Japan would render it unnecessary to proceed with the base at Singapore, although, in an earlier passage, he had recalled that in the past "the fact of the Japanese Alliance was held to relieve the Admiralty of the day of any serious responsibility in regard to the Pacific." On the contrary, he pointed out to the Conference that the substitution of oil for coal for fuel for battleships had rendered it absolutely necessary to create a base at Singapore as an indispensable condition of action by the Fleet in the Far East.

7. The question of Singapore was discussed in greater detail at the Imperial Conference at the meetings devoted to Naval Defence, the record of which, owing to its secrecy, was limited by the Conference itself to a single copy. In those discussions Lord Lee said (E-14th Meeting):—

"The Home Government have therefore come to the decision that Singapore must be developed as the main base for the British Fleet in the Pacific." Later on, in the same statement, Lord Lee made it quite clear that the proposals of the Admiralty were unaffected by the question of the renewal or otherwise of the Anglo-Japanese Alliance, except that, if the Alliance were dropped and Japan became hostile, "then undoubtedly there would be increased urgency for the development and establishment of our bases in the Pacific and our oil reserves."

8. After the preliminary discussion, further conversations took place at the Admiralty with the representatives of the Dominions, and the Admiralty, on the 11th July, circulated a summary of their recommendations (E-32). This included the following:—

"In the Admiralty opinion, Australia, New Zealand and India should be asked to contribute a considerable portion of the expenditure necessary to develop Singapore as a Fleet base, since they are intimately concerned therein."

9. On the 11th July the British Government accepted the invitation to the Washington Conference. It was already clear that a Pacific agreement would be one of our objects at the Conference, for a statement to this effect was included in the announcement made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Lloyd George) in the House of Commons on the 11th July as representing the opinion of all the members of the Conference on the question of the Pacific and also on the question of disarmament.

10. The subject of Naval Defence was again taken up by the full Conference on the 19th July (E-26th Meeting), when Lord Lee again emphasized the importance of Singapore. This statement, it should be noted, was made a week after the announcement referred to above that a Pacific agreement was part of our policy for the Washington Conference. The records of this meeting of the Conference contain no suggestion that the development of Singapore as a naval base should be postponed if a Pacific agreement was achieved.

11. It is quite true, as mentioned in General Smuts' Minute, that the following Resolution was passed by the Conference in regard to the naval defence of the Empire:—

"That, while recognizing the necessity of co-operation among the various portions of the Empire to provide such naval defence as may prove to be essential for security, and while holding that equality with the naval strength of any other Power is a minimum standard for that purpose, this Conference is of opinion that the method and expense of such co-operation are matters for the full determination of the several Parliaments concerned, and that any recommendations thereon should be deferred until after the coming Conference on Disarmament."

12. The policy set forth in this Resolution is that equality with the naval strength of any Power is a minimum standard for the British Empire. It was not the policy, but the method and expense of co-operation among the various portions of the Empire which, by this Resolution, was deferred until after the Washington Conference. So long as the British Fleet is entirely unable to operate in the Pacific it cannot be considered that a one-Power standard is being maintained. In these circumstances, His Majesty's Government felt that the development of the naval base at Singapore was a matter which should not be further delayed, and they had no reason to believe that any Dominion held a contrary view.

13. The instructions of the British Government to Mr. Balfour and his colleagues for the Washington Conference are contained in a Memorandum drawn up as the result of an enquiry by the Standing Defence Sub-Committee under the chairmanship of Mr. Balfour. These instructions, which were fully discussed and approved by the Cabinet, include the following in the summary of Conclusions:—

"SINGAPORE.

"That no agreement should be reached at the Conference which will in any way interfere with the development of Singapore as a British Naval Base, since such development is purely defensive in character and is already overdue."

14. At the outset of the Conference, Mr. Balfour at an informal meeting gave the British Empire Delegation full particulars as to his instructions and the lines on which he proposed to proceed. It is practically certain that he must have mentioned the decision in regard to Singapore, though no record was kept of what he said. In any event, there is no possible room for doubt that all members of the British Empire Delegation knew what was our policy in regard to Singapore. For example, at a meeting of the British Empire Delegation on the 2nd December, 1921, when the proposal for a limitation in regard to fortifications and naval bases in the Pacific was under discussion, Senator Pearce, the Australian Representative, pointed out the desirability of Singapore being left out of any restricted arrangement as to the construction of fortifications and naval bases in the Pacific, and Mr. Balfour remarked that in none of the conversations he had so far had was the question of Singapore raised, and he preferred to leave it alone.

Again, the question of Singapore was constantly referred to in the telegrams which passed between Mr. Balfour and the Home Government, copies of all of which were circulated to all members of the British Empire Delegation. Thus, a telegram dated the 18th December, from Lord Curzon, included the following:—

"With regard to fortifications in the Pacific, you say Singapore is not mentioned. We presume by this that we are free to develop Singapore as a first-class naval base if we think it necessary to do so. This we regard as indispensable, and we hope you will make sure there is no misunderstanding with the Americans and still more the Japanese on this point. As you are aware from discussions over which you have presided in the Committee of Imperial Defence, the defence of Australia and New Zealand might in certain circumstances depend entirely on Singapore."

On the 13th January, Mr. Churchill, who was acting as Chairman of the Standing Defence Sub-Committee in Mr. Balfour's absence, sent the following telegram:—

"With reference to your telegram No. 166 of the 15th December and the provision in the Three-Power Agreement on the Naval Ratio that the status quo shall be maintained with respect to fortifications and naval bases in the Pacific region, including Hong Kong, it is presumed that our freedom of action in regard to Singapore has been preserved."

15. So far as can be traced, Singapore was only once alluded to in the course of the conversations at Washington. A telegram, dated the 24th January, from Mr. Balfour, includes the following:—

"I introduced certain amendments to place beyond doubt the exclusion of Singapore (in which Baron Kato acquiesced) as well as territories of Australia, according to a formula designed by Senator Pearce; also to limit the status quo in fortifications and coast defences. I have since discussed draft with Mr. Hughes, who tells me that American Delegation have accepted all my amendments. During this conversation, Mr. Hughes volunteered the observation that of course Singapore was excluded as it was neither island nor in Pacific."

16. In the result it was definitely settled at the Washington Conference that no development should be made east of the meridian of 110° east longitude. That decision barred the further development of Hong Kong, but permitted Great Britain to develop Singapore. As shown above, it was not by an oversight that the line was so drawn. The territory specified in Article 19 was a matter of prolonged consideration at Washington, and the other parties to the Treaty fully appreciated that Article 19 as finally drafted left Great Britain to develop Singapore as a naval base.

17. South Africa did not send a representative to Washington, and the Treaty was signed on behalf of that Dominion by Mr. Balfour, so that these facts are possibly not familiar to General Smuts and the South African Government.

18. Finally, it should be mentioned that, in consequence of the agreements arrived at between the United States, Japan and this country at Washington, the naval situation resulting from the agreements was examined afresh by the Admiralty, and they produced a Memorandum (C.I.D. No. 176-C) showing how the naval policy of the British Empire had been affected by these treaties. In this Memorandum special consideration was given to the question of the development of Singapore, in view of the facts that any further development of Hong Kong would not be in accord with the terms of the Washington Treaty; that no British port in the Western Pacific is capable of serving as a base for a modern fleet, and that the United States are debarred from developing any naval base in the Western Pacific. The Admiralty therefore concluded that "for rapid concentration of the Fleet in the East it is essential that a secure base at Singapore can be counted on. The development of Singapore must take many years, even if substantial assistance is provided by the Dominions. The matter is therefore one of great urgency."

This Memorandum was considered and approved by His Majesty's Government, and copies were forwarded to the Dominions with a request for their remarks on the questions raised. The date of the despatch was the 23rd December.

19. The fifth paragraph of the Union Ministers' Minute contains the statement that "no expenditure on this project is provided during the year 1923/24 and only a very moderate expenditure thereafter during 1924/25." The despatch of the Secretary of State for the Colonies addressed to the Dominions on the 27th March, 1923, however, stated that "no considerable expenditure will be incurred during the financial year 1923/24 and only a moderate expenditure during 1924/25." The despatch then went on to say that "the provision made in the Estimates for the financial year 1923/24 is £160,000." To have held the question over for the formal approval of the Imperial Conference would have entailed the omission of this item from the Naval Estimates, and the postponement for a year of the commencement of a work which, as long ago as June 1921 had been described by Mr. Balfour as "one of the most pressing needs for Imperial defence" (paragraph 5 above), and which, as stated in paragraph 33 of C.I.D. Paper No. 176-C, is regarded by the Naval Staff as "of great urgency."

20. From the above it is clear that the British Government, at any rate, never conceived it to be the intention of the Imperial Conference, and the Governments represented there, either before, during or after the Washington Conference, that their policy of creating a naval base at Singapore was in any way affected by any of the acts of that Conference. On the contrary, they made it clear at the Imperial Conference that even if the Anglo-Japanese Alliance continued, it would be necessary to carry out their naval programme, which included a base at Singapore; that they instructed their Delegates to the Washington Conference not to agree to anything which would interfere with the development of Singapore as a British naval base, and several times during the Conference reiterated this instruction; that their Delegates faithfully followed these instructions; that this attitude was communicated to and received the full support of the British Empire Delegation, on which all the Dominions except South Africa, as well as India, were represented by specially appointed Delegates.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

(30th July, 1923.)

SINGAPORE BASE.

MR. LAMBERT asked the Prime Minister if he is aware that Count Uchida, the Foreign Minister for Japan, has expressed the opinion in a public interview that the establishment of a new naval base at Singapore conflicted in many ways with the spirit of the Washington Agreement, and for which there was nothing in Anglo-Japanese relations to require such an extensive undertaking; and whether he will enter into a frank discussion with the Japanese Government before finally committing the country to this large expenditure?

THE PRIME MINISTER: Count Uchida was incorrectly reported. It is now officially denied that he stated that the Singapore base conflicted with the spirit of the Washington Treaties. His Majesty's Government do not consider that any useful purpose would be served by raising a discussion with the Japanese Government on this subject. During the Washington Conference they made it clear that they reserved their liberty of action at Singapore, and this was fully understood by the other Governments concerned.

MR. LAMBERT: Considering that trade is so bad, and this base will cost so much money, is it not possible to postpone it for a time?

CAPTAIN BERKELEY: Is it a fact that the Japanese Minister stated that, owing to the proximity of the proposed dock to Formosa, it will be necessary for Japan to take special defensive measures?

THE PRIME MINISTER: I have not seen that.

CAPTAIN BENN: Can the right hon. Gentleman say exactly what he meant when he said, "They made it clear that they reserved their liberty of action at Singapore?" Was there any document or statement made which could be published?

THE PRIME MINISTER: No; not that I know of.

MR. MOSLEY: Is the right hon. Gentleman aware that it was stated in the recent debate that the matter was not discussed at Washington and that they were not informed?

NAVAL BASE AT SINGAPORE.

MR. MACLEAN (York):

1. With reference to the proposal of the British Government to expend £10,000,000 upon the creation of a naval base at Singapore, is it a fact, as stated in the British House of Commons on 1st of May last by Mr. Eyres-Monsell, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty, that—"This work was approved by the Dominion Conference in 1921 and it was most strongly represented by the Dominions"?

2. Is it a fact that Mr. Eyres-Monsell, at the same time and place, said, with reference to the expenditure, that—"he had great hopes that the Dominions, which had a very direct interest in the work, would see their way to co-operate with us in this direction"?

3. Is it probable that the hopes of Mr. Eyres-Monsell will be fulfilled?

4. Is it a fact that Colonel Amery, First Lord of the Admiralty, at the same time and place said—"He had no doubt that the Conference to be held in the autumn would endorse the conclusions arrived at by the Conference of 1921"?

5. Is it probable that the prediction of the First Lord will be fulfilled?

RIGHT HON. W. L. MACKENZIE KING (Prime Minister): The Government has no information with respect to the several questions asked.

RIGHT HON. ARTHUR MEIGHEN (Leader of the Opposition): I desire to call the attention of the House and the Government to the answer of the Prime Minister just given to question Number 4, asked by the hon. member for South York. He said that the Government had no information. As regards the first question, which is the pith of the questions, the Government has not only information, but all the information. The question is: With reference to the proposal of the British Government to expend £10,000,000 upon the creation of a naval base at Singapore, is it a fact, as stated in the British House of Commons on 1st of May last by Mr. Eyres-Monsell, Financial Secretary of the Admiralty, that—"This work was approved by the Dominion Conference in 1921 and it was most strongly represented by the Dominions?" The Government has the full report of that conference in its possession, and can certainly give an answer to this question.

RIGHT HON. W. L. MACKENZIE KING (Prime Minister): The Government has not any information as to what happened in Parliament in England.

MR. MEIGHEN: That is not the question.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: The House has the report and it is open to any hon. member to examine the report. The Government has received no information as to whether any such statement was ever made in Parliament.

MR. MEIGHEN: The question is: "Is it a fact that this was approved at the conference?" The Government has the information as to whether or not that is a fact, and the question whether it is contained in the report does not matter. The Government is asked a question in the House and should answer it, because it has the full information.

MR. MACKENZIE KING: The report of the conference has been laid on the Table of the House, and it is open to any member to examine it. I will be pleased to lay it on the Table again, if desired.

MR. MEIGHEN: The blue books are laid on the Table, but that does not absolve the Government from giving an answer to a question regarding them, much less does it excuse the Government for giving the wrong answer.

MR. MACLEAN (York): I would like the House to have an opportunity before the session closes of discussing in committee what took place at that conference.

NAVAL BASE, SINGAPORE.

CAPTAIN BERKELEY asked the Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty whether it is proposed to proceed with the Singapore dock?

LIEUT.-COMMANDER KENWORTHY asked the Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty whether he will consider the desirability of incurring no fresh expenditure on the projected dry docks for battleships at Singapore until the matter has been again before Parliament?

THE PARLIAMENTARY SECRETARY TO THE ADMIRALTY (Mr. Ammon): As is generally known, those responsible for the present Government have always taken the view that no adequate reason has been shown for the very large expenditure proposed by the late Government at Singapore. The Government, however, think it only right that they should hear and examine the case for the scheme before announcing their decision, and this they are proceeding to do. In the meantime, commitments such as are referred to by the hon. and gallant Member for Central Hull will certainly not be entered into.

LIEUT.-COMMANDER KENWORTHY: When the Under-Secretary is considering this very important question, will he take into consideration the alteration in the whole position caused by the terrible disaster in Japan; and is he aware that this has really put Japan out of the running for another ten years?

MR. AMMON: That matter is also receiving attention.

CAPTAIN VISCOUNT CURZON: Is the hon. Gentleman aware that the Japanese earthquake has made no material difference to the strength of the Japanese Navy, and can he assure us that before His Majesty's Government arrive at a decision they will consult the Dominions?

MR. AMMON: I can assure the Noble Lord that all the effects of the Japanese earthquake are being considered.

COMMANDER BELLAIRS: May we have an assurance that expenditure already ordered and sanctioned by this House is not being retarded by the Government?

MR. AMMON: I can give the hon. and gallant Gentleman an assurance that instructions have been issued to the officers on the spot not to incur further commitments.

MR. MARLEY: Will the hon. Gentleman inform the House what money has been expended on this scheme so far?

MR. AMMON: Up to the 20th January last about £13,000 has been spent, and, in addition, I think we are actually committed by signed contracts to an expenditure of £34,000. Liabilities have been incurred on work already in progress, such as railways, road connexions, water supplies, etc., but until further reports are received I cannot state how much expenditure has been or will be incurred.

MR. ORMSBY-GORE: Do I understand that the Government communicated to the Governments of Australia and New Zealand their intention to review this matter?

MR. AMMON: My answer was that the Dominions will be consulted.

An announcement of our decision will be made in Parliament shortly. We are considering its terms and will let you know when they are settled. Secret and Personal. You will be pleased to learn that we have decided in principle to proceed with the scheme for the development of the Singapore base. An announcement of our decision will be made in Parliament shortly. We are considering its terms and will let you know when they are settled.

It would be of great assistance to us in preparing our announcement if we could say something as to the contributions which other Governments of Empire most interested would be prepared to make towards the cost. We do not wish to suggest any contribution from New Zealand which would affect contemplated arrangements in regard to a second cruiser, and we do not know how far it would be possible in view of those arrangements for you to recommend to Parliament a grant towards the cost of Singapore base. But you will appreciate that such a grant if possible would be welcome and would be helpful in disarming opposition here, and if it is possible we should be grateful for the earliest possible intimation of your intentions and of your wishes as to the terms in which we might allude to those intentions in our announcement. We realize that if you are ready to propose a contribution, a statement of the precise amount may have to be deferred until it can be made to your own Parliament.

8TH DECEMBER. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Your telegram of 5th December,* my Government note with pleasure that the British Government has decided in principle to proceed with the scheme for the development of the Singapore base. I have already expressed both in cables and at the last Imperial Conference the views of my Government with regard to urgent necessity for the base from the standpoint not only of Great Britain and Australia but of the whole Empire, and we welcome decision which your Government has made. Since my telegram of 11th March† to your predecessor, however, in which I stated that Commonwealth Government recognized its obligation to contribute to cost of base, and would submit proposals as to such contribution to its Parliament at an early date, the position from the standpoint of Australian finances has undergone some very important changes. Consideration of our defence expenditure in 1923 had been postponed pending results of the Imperial Conference and decision of British Government with regard to Singapore. I pointed out to Parliament on the eve of my departure for Britain, that what was decided in regard to Singapore would naturally govern the extent to which we would make provision for our own defence. Despite our urgent representations and our definite offer to contribute to the cost of the base, contained in cable above referred to, late British Government decided to abandon the proposal, and my Government was, therefore, forced to a consideration of its own defence estimates. These estimates were based upon the serious position in which Australia found herself as a result of the abandonment of the Singapore base, and were the maximum amounts having regard to the financial circumstances of the Commonwealth which Government felt could be provided. A programme was laid down for the construction of two modern 10,000-ton cruisers, and in addition to the annual provision for defence, a special appropriation of £2,500,000 was made, and a further amount of £1,000,000 was provided out of a surplus for the year 1923-1924. A general defence programme covering a period of five years was submitted to Parliament involving an increased expenditure over expenditure for year 1923-1924 of £1,000,000 in each of the five years contemplated by the programme. These heavy commitments have considerably altered the position which existed when, in my telegram of 11th March† to your predecessor, the Government indicated that Australia would make a substantial contribution to the Singapore base. My Government is wholeheartedly in favour of the base and will co-operate as far as possible to ensure its speedy construction. The question of contribution by Australia in view of the altered circumstances will have to be very carefully considered, and any proposals will, of course, require the endorsement of our Parliament. It will be appreciated from the foregoing that the position is not without its difficulties, and the extent of our co-operation will naturally be affected by the action of the other Dominions. Australia is already well in advance of other Dominions in regard to naval defence, and having so lately embarked on considerable expenditure, to which I have referred, it is not unreasonable for us to ask that the other Dominions should indicate their willingness to contribute on a reasonable basis towards Empire Defence. My Government will be glad therefore if these facts can be conveyed to other Dominion Governments, and an early intimation of the action they are prepared to take communicated to us. I would reiterate the view already expressed by me that any contribution which Australia may decide to make towards the construction of the Singapore base should be in the form of material and not a cash payment.

* No. 36. † No. 10 in Cmd. 2083.

Ends.

8TH DECEMBER. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Secret and Personal. My official telegram of this day,* In view of circumstances outlined therein it is impossible to make any definite suggestion with regard to a contribution at this stage. For the purposes of your own announcement, however, I think your hand would be strengthened by a statement of the expenditure which Australia has already undertaken, and an intimation that despite these heavy commitments the Commonwealth has decided to submit to its Parliament at an early date proposals with regard to further direct contributions to Singapore which will probably take the form of material. SECRET. 8th December. Your telegram 4th December.* My Prime Minister asks me to convey the following reply:—

Begins: I have received with great pleasure the intimation contained in your telegram that His Majesty's Government intend to proceed with scheme for the development of the Singapore base. I scarcely need to reiterate that New Zealand fully realizes the importance of naval defence, and is anxious to do its full share in this connexion, but the Dominion at present is in a somewhat difficult position in regard to this matter when coupled with the proposal that we should take over maintenance of a second cruiser. Parliament agreed to the latter during its Session which has recently concluded. Of course, Parliament must decide whether a separate contribution towards Singapore can also be made. Personally, if we must choose as between one and the other I think it would be better to go on with the second cruiser, but I am satisfied that New Zealand realizes the importance of both proposals, and in addition to the estimated annual cost of a second cruiser, which will not be less than £250,000, I am quite willing, when opportunity offers, to consult Parliament with regard to a straight-out grant for Singapore.—

We are very glad, however, that you will consider the question of making such a grant, and we hope that your finances will permit of a favourable decision, the more especially as I understand that Bruce, who has naturally to take into consideration the very heavy commitments entailed by his new defence programme, feels that assistance which he can ask his Parliament to give must depend on support forthcoming from other Governments. SECRET and Personal. Following for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Secret and Personal. We are very glad indeed to learn from your two telegrams of 8th December,† that heavy commitments entailed by new defence programme will not exclude submission to Commonwealth Parliament of proposal for direct assistance in enlargement of Singapore base. We are not clear whether your suggestion is that we should inform all the other Dominions how you are placed, but if that is the case we think that you ought to know that we doubt desirability of such a step. As you will have seen from King's speech we have linked our decision with Resolution of Imperial Conference, 1923, and when we came to consider possibility of contributions from other Governments of Empire, we had to bear in mind not only the terms of that Resolution, which brings out the special position of Australia and New Zealand in the matter, but also the views expressed by Canada, South Africa and Irish Free State on proposal of late Government to suspend scheme (see Nos. 8, 6 and 11 Cmd. 2083). It is certain that no contributions would be forthcoming from these three Governments, and that replies from Canada and South Africa would be re-statement of previous attitude. Consequently we approached only yourself, Massey, and Governor, Straits Settlements. In the circumstances you will probably agree that it would be undesirable to communicate further with other Governments at present, but I am letting Massey know personally that your ability to assist will depend on extent to which other Governments can co-operate. Massey's position is similar to your own in that he has just undertaken to maintain second light cruiser at additional cost of £250,000 per annum, but I must communicate with him further before I can give you definite information as to what New Zealand can do. Straits Settlements will hand over land already acquired at cost of 1,250,000 dollars. Hong Kong has made an offer to contribute £250,000. Ends.

Downing Street, 5th October, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [Your Royal Highness] [you] to inform your Ministers that, with a view to putting the procedure for mobilizing Royal Naval Reservists Overseas on a uniform basis, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have suggested that the Special Admiralty Order (R.V. 53 C.), by which men of the Royal Naval Reserve of the United Kingdom absent from the British Isles are notified of mobilization, should in future be issued, in all cases, by the Officers Administering the Governments of the Dominions and Colonies.

2. The list of ports at which a Naval Officer is available to issue this Order is necessarily liable to alteration and by vesting this authority invariably in the Officer Administering the Government the necessity for periodically revising the procedure in different Dominions and Colonies would be avoided.

3. It is further proposed that the Proclamation should be issued and forms R.V. 53 C. distributed in all Dominions and Colonies without exception which possess a seaboard.

HIS MAJESTY THE KING having issued His Proclamation ordering and directing that the Royal Naval Volunteers (commonly known as the Royal Naval Reserve) under the Royal Naval Reserve Act, 1859, or as many or such part of them as the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty may direct be called into Actual Service;

Notice is hereby given that all men in the Royal Naval Reserve who are absent from the British Islands are liable to serve in the Royal Navy, if called upon by the Officer Commanding any of His Majesty's Ships.

Royal Naval Reserve men serving in Merchant Ships abroad, on receiving notice of the issue of the Royal Proclamation at any Port they may call at, are to report themselves to the Senior British Naval Officer at that Port, or to the first British Naval Officer they may meet; or failing that, to the nearest Registrar of Naval Reserve on arrival in the British Islands.

Royal Naval Reserve men abroad, but not serving in Merchant Ships, are to report themselves to the nearest British Naval, Dominion, Consular, or Colonial Officer forthwith.

FROM DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS to GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

SIR,

Ottawa, 29th October, 1923.

WITH reference to a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governor-General, dated 5th October, 1923, on the subject of the procedure for mobilizing Royal Naval Reservists Overseas, I have the honour to represent that in the event of mobilization of the Royal Naval Reserve the Department of National Defence could arrange for the distribution of forms R.V. 53 C., on behalf of the Admiralty in Halifax, St. John, New Brunswick, Montreal, Quebec, Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminster and Prince Rupert.

The posting up in each of these towns of twenty-five copies of the notice and the communication to the Press of a news item to the effect that the Royal Naval Reserve was being mobilized, would, it is thought, ensure that the news of the mobilization would reach the ears of all men of the Royal Naval Reserve in Canada.

As regards the form of these notices, it is suggested that the copies for distribution in Canada should be specially printed, the fourth paragraph being amended in some such form as the following:—

"Royal Naval Reserve Men in Canada, but not serving in Merchant Ships, are to report their names, address and rank or rating, by telegraph, to the Department of National Defence, Ottawa, requesting instructions as to their future movements."

On receipt of the telegram above referred to, the Department of National Defence could, with the concurrence of the Admiralty, allocate the officers and men to H.M.C. Ships and Establishments, under the provisions of Admiralty Memorandum "C," and could arrange for those for whom there was no employment in the Canadian Naval Service to be sent to England to join Royal Naval Barracks.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to cause the Secretary of State for the Colonies to be informed in the above sense.

ADMIRALTY to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Admiralty, S.W.1, 12th August, 1924.

I AM commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to transmit herewith, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, copy of a letter dated 22nd ultimo, forwarding a copy of a Confidential Memorandum from the Naval Board of Australia, relative to the mobilization of the Royal Naval Reserve.

2. I am to request that it may be brought to the notice of the Commonwealth Government that paragraph 3 of the Naval Board's Memorandum is not in accordance with the agreed arrangements in Memorandum (C), which accompanied Admiralty letter of the 3rd March, 1922.† Under that Memorandum, Officers of the R.N.R. domiciled in a Dominion may be utilized by the Dominion Government on mobilization; but ratings, R.N.R., are discharged from the Reserve prior to emigration. The Memorandum states that both Officers and Men, R.N.R., who are temporarily in a Dominion are required in the Royal Navy, and that "in order not to disorganize the Mercantile Marine, it is considered desirable (unless in exceptional circumstances, of which the Naval Commander-in-Chief should be the judge), Officers and Men should not be taken from Merchant Ships till completion of the round voyage on which they are engaged at the time of mobilization." The Paragraph in question clearly does not contemplate that the Naval Board should in this particular matter exercise the power granted to ordinary Naval Commanders-in-Chief in exceptional circumstances only of removing R.N.R. men from Merchant Ships for service in the Royal Navy.

I am to refer in this connexion to your letter of the 21st June last,* transmitting copy of a despatch from the Commonwealth Government agreeing to the suggestion in Admiralty letter of the 31st July, 1923,† that the Special Admiralty Order (R.V. 53 C) should be issued in Australia. This proposal was made with a view to mobilizing R.N.R. men temporarily in Australia for Imperial Service, as laid down in Memorandum (C), and it had been intended to prepare detailed instructions for their mobilization and disposal. Questions have, however, recently arisen which may render it necessary to alter the present arrangements for the mobilization of R.N.R. men abroad, and in the circumstances I am to request that the Commonwealth Government may be asked to leave this matter in abeyance for the present.

A copy of this letter has been sent to the High Commissioner for Australia.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 3rd February, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's Confidential despatches of the 2nd of June and the 23rd of October, 1922,‡ regarding proposals for utilizing for the naval service of Australia naval personnel raised in Great Britain who at a time of mobilization are in the Commonwealth and vice versa, and to request you to inform your Ministers that both despatches have been communicated to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty. The question referred to in paragraph 2 of the despatch of the 2nd of June is still under consideration and a further communication in the matter will be addressed to you.

* No. 57. † No. 58. ‡ Nos. 67 and 71 in Dominions No. 82.

2. As regards officers of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve resident in Australia referred to in your despatch of the 23rd of October, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty state that it is not anticipated that there will ever be any officers or men on the Active List of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve in Australia, and that they have no lien on the services of officers and men of that Force when they cease to be on the Active List. As to retired officers of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, the Lords Commissioners state that the number is so small as to be practically negligible, and that no list of such officers resident in Australia is available.

26th January, 1923.

MY LORD DUKE,

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Grace, herewith, with reference to your despatch, Confidential, of the 24th November, 1922,* minute from Ministers on the subject of the position under the South Africa Defence Act Amendment Act of officers and men of His Majesty's Reserve Forces.

I have, &c.,

ARTHUR FREDERICK,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 61.

Prime Minister's Office, 23rd January, 1923.

MINUTE 41.

MINISTERS have the honour to state in reference to His Royal Highness the Governor-General's minute 1/1340 of the 22nd December, 1922, that the effect of the amendment of Section 124 of the South Africa Defence Act previously advised is that any male British subject domiciled in the Union other than a British subject serving in His Majesty's Royal Navy, Regular Military Forces or Royal Air Force or employed on the personal staff of the Governor-General of the Union, is required to conform to the laws of the Union providing for every citizen being liable for personal service in time of war for the defence of the Union or for service in the prevention and suppression of internal disorder, consequently all officers and men belonging to the Imperial Naval Reserves who are citizens of the Union at the time of mobilization would be liable to be utilized.

(2) Ministers suggest that in order to meet the requirements of the Admiralty the latter should from time to time furnish lists of officers and ratings of the Imperial Naval Reserves domiciled in the Union, for whose services outside the Union it is at all likely a demand would be made, excluding those temporarily in but not domiciled in the Union, and submit that there will be no difficulty in meeting the wishes of the Admiralty as the earmarking of Union personnel to meet the requirements of Naval Control Service, Royal Naval Reserve and South African Division, Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, will be done in consultation with the Commander-in-Chief, His Majesty's Ships and Vessels, Africa, who presumably will be aware of Admiralty requirements.

This disposes of paragraphs 1, 2 and 5 of Admiralty memorandum "C."

(3) In regard to paragraph 3 of the above-mentioned memorandum, Ministers point out that such reservists when called out for service under the Defence Act would under ordinary circumstances fall to be dealt with under the Union Regulations affecting them and would only come under Imperial Regulations when called out for service with Imperial units, and it is suggested that, in such event, payment from Union Funds would only be made after arrangements with the Union Government.

* No. 70 in Dominions No. 82.

(4) Paragraph 4 of the memorandum "C" is agreed to.

(5) Ministers note that copy of His Royal Highness' despatch No. 523 of 23rd September, 1922,* was communicated to the War Office and Air Ministry, but would point out that approval to the Union proposals by the Air Council has already been advised in cable from Secretary of State for the Colonies dated 14th June, 1922.†

WITH reference to your letter of the 28th December‡ relative to the inquiries recently made as to the possibility of arranging for a proportion of Royal Fleet Reservists to settle in British Dominions or Colonies while retaining their membership of the Reserve, I am commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to request you to inform Secretary the Duke of Devonshire that on consideration of the representations made in your letter they are in agreement with his view that it would have been more proper for their communication on this subject to have been made to him alone in the first instance and not to the High Commissioner or to the Commodore, New Zealand, and they trust that His Grace's consideration of the matter has not been at all seriously hampered.

I am, &c.,

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 67.]

SIR, Downing Street, 8th May, 1923.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Royal Highness's Confidential despatch of the 26th of January§ relative to the utilization of the services of officers and men of the Naval Reserves who may happen to be in the Union of South Africa at the time of mobilization, and to request you to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty assume from Ministers' Minute No. 41 that the Union Government concur in Memorandum C subject to paragraphs 2 and 3 of that Minute.

2. With regard to the point mentioned in paragraph 2 of Ministers' Minute, the Admiralty state that it is not possible to furnish "lists of officers and men of the Imperial Naval Reserves domiciled in the Union, for whose services outside the Union it is at all likely a demand would be made." Apart from the fact that the Admiralty have no means of distinguishing Naval pensioners who are domiciled in the Union from those who are only temporary residents, the circumstances of a future Naval war are so impossible to forecast with any exactitude, and are liable to such profound changes during the course of the war, that any lists which could be sent beforehand might well prove to be of no value either on mobilization or subsequently.

3. Their Lordships consider it essential in the interests of the Naval defence of the Empire as a whole that they should be in a position, if circumstances render it in their opinion necessary, to utilize the services of certain categories of officers and men, as specified in Memorandum C, either immediately on mobilization or at any later stage. As stated in the Memorandum they will not wish to call on the officers and men referred to in paragraph 1 (b) and (e) of the Memorandum unless their services are really urgently required elsewhere. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty trust that your Ministers will see their way to agree to the proposals which have already been concurred in by the Governments of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and India.

4. As regards paragraph 3 of Ministers' Minute it is inferred that the Union Government accept paragraph 3 of Memorandum C, except the suggestion that officers and men utilized by the Union Government, other than officers on the Emergency List, should be permitted to come under Imperial regulations as regards pay, allowances, etc., if they prefer to do so. In the circumstances, the Admiralty do not wish to press this particular point.

5. It would appear that the last Clause of paragraph 3 of Ministers' Minute, viz., "it is suggested that, in such event, payment from Union Funds would only be made after arrangement with the Union Government," is based upon a misapprehension of the views of the Lords Commissioners as set out in paragraph 3 of Memorandum C. That document contemplates that certain officers and men will automatically come under the Union Government on mobilization and that they will remain under the Union Government unless and until the Admiralty request that they be withdrawn for Imperial Service. Their Lordships presume that whilst serving under the Union Government such persons would be paid from Union funds and they would be glad to receive an assurance to this effect. There was no intention, however, of suggesting that the Union Government should bear the cost of the pay of these United Kingdom Reservists after they had been released for Imperial Service.

6. With reference to paragraph 2 of my Confidential despatch of the 24th of November,* the attention of the Lords Commissioners has since been called to Lord Gladstone's Confidential despatch of the 18th of August, 1913,† which offered to place the South African Division of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve at His Majesty's disposal. Under this arrangement it would be possible for any members of the Division who might be in the United Kingdom at a time of mobilization to be detailed for service with the Royal Navy.

WITH reference to a Confidential despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governor-General, dated the 16th December, 1922, making proposals for the revision of the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations in so far as they make residence in the United Kingdom a condition of membership of that Reserve, I have the honour to represent that the Department of National Defence will be glad to give to the Lords of the Admiralty every assistance within its power in connexion with the training in His Majesty's Canadian Ships and Establishments of Men of the Royal Fleet Reserve who are domiciled in Canada.

* No. 70 in Dominions No. 82.

† 31228/13: not printed.

Pending development of organization for training men of the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve, and Royal Canadian Naval Reserve, it is not possible to state how many men of the Royal Fleet Reserve could be received for training, but it is hoped that the following estimate may be realized:—

One hundred and fifty Royal Fleet Reserve ratings to be trained every year: the training being that given to men of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Instructions to be given in Gunnery, Torpedo, Signals and Wireless Telegraphy, Seamanship, Engine-room and Regulating duties.

It is not possible to state, at present, when any ratings with anti-submarine qualifications could be received.

Men holding non-substantive ratings, and men of the Royal Marines, to be instructed in one of His Majesty's Canadian ships, provided their number is not more than seventy-five yearly. These seventy-five men are included in the one hundred and fifty ratings referred to above.

As regards men of the Royal Marines who, owing to distance from a sea-port, cannot carry out training in His Majesty's Canadian ships, facilities for training with the Militia Forces of the Dominion will be afforded, it being assumed that the number of Royal Marines (Royal Fleet Reserve) to be trained in any one District, will not be very large.

The training centres, other than Halifax and Esquimalt, at which Royal Marines can be received, are as follows:—

Quebec: Infantry.
Montreal: Infantry.
Kingston or Petawawa: Artillery.
Toronto: Infantry.
London: Infantry.
Winnipeg: Artillery and infantry.

No difficulty is foreseen as regards making suitable local arrangements for candidates for the Royal Fleet Reserve to be examined locally as to their suitability, etc., or making arrangements for their drills, and for the payment of bounties, etc.

The question whether additional clerical assistance would be necessary in this connexion and whether, if this were the case, it would be possible to obtain the services of an Accountant Officer of the Royal Navy to act as Royal Fleet Reserve Registrar at Naval Service Headquarters, Ottawa, might be left for consideration until such time as it is possible to foresee the number of Royal Fleet Reserve Men who will be enrolled in Canada, and the amount of clerical work involved.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to cause the Secretary of State for the Colonies to be informed in the above sense.

I AM commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to acquaint you for the information of the High Commissioner that they have had under consideration the question of the utilization by Dominion Governments for Naval services of the various categories of officers and men liable to serve in the Royal Navy who may be in a Dominion at a time of mobilization.

2. My Lords consider that it would be of advantage if uniform and reciprocal arrangements could be adopted for regulating the extent to which Naval personnel raised in Great Britain who happen at a time of mobilization to be in one of the Dominions should be utilized for the Naval Service of the Dominion and vice versa.

3. Their Lordships accordingly suggest for consideration the scheme outlined in the accompanying Memorandum marked "C," and I am to inquire whether the Government of the Dominion of Canada would be prepared to agree to the arrangements therein proposed and to accord reciprocal facilities to the Admiralty.

4. On receipt of your reply a further communication will be sent as regards mobilization arrangements.

MEMORANDUM "C" AS TO THE UTILIZATION BY THE GOVERNMENT OF A DOMINION, FOR MINESWEEPING AND THE CONTROL OF MERCHANT SHIPPING, OF NAVAL PERSONNEL WHO ARE IN THE DOMINION AT A TIME OF MOBILIZATION.

Note:—The word "Dominion" is used throughout to include "Commonwealth" and "Union."

1. (a) Officers, Royal Navy, on the Emergency List.—These officers are Volunteers and are under no binding obligation to serve in time of war. The Admiralty have no objection to the Dominion Government utilizing their services on mobilization, if they themselves consent. Such officers would be given the option, when they proceed abroad, of serving either in the Royal Navy or under the Dominion Government.

(b) Retired Officers, Royal Navy.—The Admiralty have no objection to these officers, whether permanently or only temporarily in the Dominion, being utilized in the first instance by the Dominion Government and regarded as lent to the Dominion Service in the same way as Active Service officers lent to the Dominions in time of peace, provided that the names of all such officers who have been called up by the Dominion Government are at once telegraphed to the Admiralty. My Lords reserve the right to re-allocate to the Imperial Service such of them as may be specially required on account of their Gunnery or other qualifications. This right would not be exercised unless the officer's services were really urgently required elsewhere.

(c) Special Reserve of Engineer Officers, Royal Navy.—The Admiralty agree to the utilization by the Dominion Government of such of these officers as can be found employment in sea-going fighting ships, but request that any surplus may be left at the disposal of the Admiralty, the names of such officers in either category being telegraphed to the Admiralty as soon as possible after mobilization.

(d) Officers, Royal Naval Reserve. (i) Domiciled in the Dominion.—The Admiralty are prepared to allow the services of these officers to be utilized by the Dominion Government.

(ii) Temporarily in the Dominion.—The services of all these officers would be required in the Royal Navy, and the Admiralty regret that it would not be practicable to allow them to be utilized by the Dominion Government. Moreover, in order not to disorganize the Mercantile Marine, it is considered desirable that (unless in exceptional circumstances, of which the Naval Commander-in-Chief should be the judge), officers and men should not be taken from merchant ships till completion of the round voyage on which they are engaged at the time of mobilization.

(e) Royal Navy Pensioners. (Long Service and Disability). (i) Domiciled in the Dominion.—The Admiralty agree to these men's services being utilized by the Dominion Government subject to the conditions stated above in the case of retired officers, Royal Navy. It would, however, be sufficient to telegraph the names of those pensioners who held non-substantive ratings other than Seaman Gunner or Seaman Torpedo Man, complete lists being forwarded by post at the earliest opportunity.

(ii) Temporarily in the Dominion.—The services of these men will be required in the Royal Navy.

(f) Ratings, Royal Naval Reserve and Royal Fleet Reserve. (i) Domiciled in the Dominion.—Such men are under present Regulations discharged from the Reserves prior to emigration. The question, however, of relaxing this rule is under consideration, and a further communication will be made on the subject.

(ii) Temporarily in the Dominion.—The services of these men will be required in the Royal Navy, and the Admiralty regret that they are unable to agree to their being utilized by the Dominion Government. The observations in the case of officers, Royal Naval Reserve, as to the undesirability of removing them from merchant ships till the voyage is complete apply equally to men.

2. The Admiralty are willing that those officers and men, referred to above, to whose employment by the Dominion Government on mobilization no objection is offered, should be permitted, if they desire, to join a local Naval Reserve Force in time of peace, at the same time retaining their ranks and ratings in the Imperial Naval Service.

3. As regards pay, allowances, outfit grants and pensions payable on account of disability, or to widows and children of deceased personnel, the Admiralty consider that as a general rule all officers and men mentioned above who may be loaned to the Dominion Government should come under that Government's Regulations unless and until they are re-allocated for Imperial Service; but that they should be permitted to come under the Imperial Regulations (at the charge of the Dominion Government) governing these matters if they prefer to do so, except in the case of officers on the Emergency List volunteering for Dominion Service, who would in all cases be governed by the Dominion Regulations.

4. Leave and Sick Leave would be governed by Imperial or Dominion Regulations according to the Service in which the officer or man was employed.

5. It is desirable that the lists of officers and men who are thus to be utilized by the Government of a Dominion should be completed as far as possible in time of peace and communicated to the Admiralty.

MINUTE 489.

MINISTERS have the honour to state, with reference to His Royal Highness the Governor-General's Minute 1/1356 of the 1st June, 1923, that the assumption of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty set out in paragraph 1 of Minute dated 8th May, 1923, from the Secretary of State, is correct.

(2) In regard to paragraphs 1 (b) and (c) of Memorandum "C" Ministers appreciate the difficulties set out in paragraph 3 of the said Minute from the Secretary of State and, although not able to vary the status and obligations of a citizen of the Union of South Africa as laid down by Act of Parliament, they nevertheless agree, where it is at all possible and in the interests of the Naval Defence of the Empire, to exempt from service in the Union Defence Forces citizens of the Union of South Africa referred to in the said paragraphs of Memorandum "C" as may be called up by the Admiralty.

Ministers do not anticipate any difficulty in this respect because, as previously stated in their Minute of the 23rd January, 1923, the earmarking of all Union personnel likely to be required by the Admiralty is now being carried out in consultation with the Commander-in-Chief, His Majesty's Ships and Vessels, Africa, and any further requirements could be similarly dealt with.

(3) With regard to paragraphs 4 and 5 of the Minute dated 8th May from the Secretary of State, Ministers are in agreement with the principle that so long as any officers and men are in the service of the Union Government they will be paid from Union funds at Union rates of pay and allowances except where special and different arrangements are agreed upon.

(4) In regard to paragraph 6 of aforementioned Minute from Secretary of State, Ministers would draw attention to Section 22 of the South Africa Defence Act, 1912, and are of opinion that should it become necessary there would be no difficulty in meeting the requirements of the Admiralty in the direction indicated in above-mentioned paragraph.

MY LORD DUKE,

Governor-General's Office,

Melbourne, 13th September, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Grace's Confidential despatch dated 16th December, 1922,‡ and in continuation of my cablegram of 20th August, 1923,§ which read:—

"Confidential. With reference to your despatch of 16th December, training of Royal Fleet Reserve in Australia, Commonwealth Government heartily in accord with Admiralty proposals. Facilities for training exist. Despatch follows by mail."

I have the honour, at the instance of my Acting Prime Minister, to ask that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty may be informed that the Commonwealth

* No. 68. † No. 67. ‡ No. 72 in Dominions No. 82. § 41425/23: quoted in despatch.

Government is heartily in accord with the suggestion communicated in the Admiralty letter of 18th November, 1922, a copy of which accompanied your despatch, that the Regulations for the Royal Fleet Reserve should be modified to admit of members of that force being permitted to retain their membership whilst resident in Australia.

A Naval Reserve Force, similar to the Royal Fleet Reserve, has been established in Australia, and the regulations governing that force follow, as closely as local conditions permit, those for the Royal Fleet Reserve, so that the facilities for training the Royal Australian Fleet Reserve are available for the training of members of the Royal Fleet Reserve who may be resident in Australia.

The bulk of the training would be carried out at the Flinders Naval Depot, at which establishment the gunnery, torpedo, signal, stokers' and other schools for the Royal Australian Navy are located. Garden Island, Sydney, is also available for the training of all ratings except those men holding higher non-substantive ratings.

These two naval establishments would provide for ratings who may reside in the vicinity of Melbourne and Sydney respectively.

Naval Reserve Training Depots, for training members of the Citizen Naval Forces, are established at Brisbane, Newcastle, Geelong, Launceston, Hobart, Adelaide and Fremantle, and arrangements could be made for Royal Fleet Reserve men, including Royal Marines, in those districts to carry out the necessary drill at the depots mentioned when this cannot be undertaken during the periodical visits of His Majesty's Australian ships thereto.

With regard to paragraph 8 of the Admiralty letter, my Ministers point out that, as most of the men who come to Australia will probably in the first instance reside in country districts far distant from the naval ports, the cost of providing for travelling and subsistence will be considerable, particularly if it is considered necessary for gunnery, torpedo and signal ratings to carry out their training at the schools at the Flinders Naval Depot.

The procedure for keeping records and for mobilization, as set out in paragraphs 6 to 11 of the Admiralty letter, could be carried out as part of the organization already in existence for dealing with the Royal Australian Fleet Reserve, and it is suggested that the Registrars, Royal Australian Fleet Reserve, might be authorized to communicate on matters of routine direct with the Registrars, Royal Fleet Reserve, concerned.

A copy of the regulations governing the Royal Australian Fleet Reserve is forwarded herewith.*

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 29th January, 1924.)

(Confidential.)

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne,

MY LORD DUKE,

20th December, 1923.

WITH reference to your Confidential despatch dated 20th July, 1923,† on the subject of the utilization of Naval Reserve personnel, I have the honour, at the instance of my Acting Prime Minister, to inform Your Grace that the reciprocal facilities which the Commonwealth Government is in a position to accord to the Admiralty in respect of the utilization of Australian Naval Reserve personnel who at the time of mobilization may be in Great Britain are very limited. They are set out in paragraph 4 hereunder.

* Not reproduced.

† No. 66.

2. The Commonwealth Government maintains the following reserves:—

(i) Retired list: Officers who have served in the Australian seagoing force, and on discharge have been allowed to retain their commissions. These officers, by virtue of retaining their commissions, are under a moral obligation to serve when called upon to do so, but under existing legislation could not be compelled to serve until called out by universal proclamation with the remainder of the citizens of Australia. The Commonwealth Government, not having in force any system of retired pay or pensions, has no financial hold upon the services of retired officers or ratings after their discharge from the Service.

(ii) The emergency list comprises—

(a) Officers who have retired or resigned from the active list of the Royal Australian Navy after satisfactory service.

(b) Officers who have retired or resigned from the active list of the Royal Navy or the Navy of a British Dominion after satisfactory service, provided they are under no obligation to rejoin their former Service in an emergency, and intend to reside permanently in Australia.

These officers have intimated their willingness to serve in war or any emergency, irrespective of the issue of a proclamation.

(iii) Royal Australian Naval Reserve (seagoing): Officers only. The conditions of service in and regulations for the Royal Australian Naval Reserve (seagoing) are based upon those governing the Royal Naval Reserve. Officers are liable for service in case of national emergency on being called out by special proclamation.

(iv) Royal Australian Fleet Reserve: Ex-members (men only) of the Permanent Naval Forces (seagoing) who engage for periods of five years. They are paid retainers, perform annual training, and are liable to be called out by proclamation for service in an emergency.

(v) Royal Australian Naval Reserve: Officers and men of the Citizen Naval Forces, who are liable to training in peace time and for service on being called out by special proclamation.

(vi) Royal Australian Naval Volunteer Reserve: Officers and men liable for service in war or emergency within the limits of the Australian Naval Station when called out by special proclamation.

3. The Royal Australian Naval Reserve (seagoing), Royal Australian Fleet Reserve, Royal Australian Naval Reserve and Royal Australian Naval Volunteer Reserve form the Citizen Naval Forces of the Commonwealth. A proclamation calling out the Citizen Forces would therefore be effective as regards the four Naval Reserve Forces mentioned. Alternatively, provision exists for the issue of special proclamations calling out either one of the Naval Reserve Forces individually, apart from the Citizen Forces as a whole.

4. With reference to Memorandum "C," enclosed with the Confidential letter from the Admiralty to the High Commissioner for Australia in London dated 3rd March, 1922,* the following is the position as regards reciprocal facilities which can be afforded by the Commonwealth Government:—

1 (a) Officers on the Royal Australian Navy Emergency List.—Officers permanently leaving Australia would cease to be borne upon the Royal Australian Navy Emergency List, but might continue to be borne on the Royal Australian Navy Retired List. The Commonwealth Government would have no objection to the Admiralty utilizing the services, on mobilization, of any officers who might temporarily be resident in the United Kingdom, subject to their consent; and the Admiralty would on mobilization be informed by the Commonwealth Government of any officers known to be temporarily in the United Kingdom.

(b) Retired Officers, Royal Australian Navy.—The Commonwealth Government would have no objection to these officers, if permanently or temporarily in the United Kingdom, being utilized by the Admiralty in the first instance, under similar conditions to those laid down in Memorandum "C" as regards retired officers of the Royal Navy. Owing to there being no system of retired pay it is somewhat difficult for the Commonwealth Government to keep in touch with the movements of officers on the Retired List. In every case, however, where it is known that an officer on the Retired List intends to take up permanent domicile in the United Kingdom the Admiralty would be informed. The Admiralty would also be informed on mobilization of any officers known to be temporarily in the United Kingdom.

(c) Special Reserve Engineer Officers.—There is no reserve of these officers in the Royal Australian Navy corresponding to the special reserve of the Royal Navy.

(d) Officers of the Royal Australian Naval Reserve (seagoing).—Officers intending to take up domicile permanently outside Australia would be removed from the list of the Royal Australian Naval Reserve (seagoing). The Commonwealth Government would have no objection to the Admiralty utilizing the services of officers who might be temporarily in the United Kingdom on mobilization, under similar conditions to those laid down in Clause (d) (ii) of Memorandum "C." Particulars as to any such officers would be notified to the Admiralty on mobilization.

(e) Pensioners.—There are no Royal Australian Naval pensioners (ratings) corresponding to Royal Naval pensioners.

(f) Ratings: Royal Australian Fleet Reserve.—Ratings who leave Australia, or are serving in ships outside the waters of the Pacific and Indian Oceans, are not retained in the Royal Australian Fleet Reserve. In the event of a Royal Australian Fleet Reserve rating transferring his domicile to the United Kingdom the question of his transfer to the Royal Fleet Reserve, Class B, would be taken up, but such cases will probably be rare.

5. With regard to paragraphs 3 and 4 of Memorandum "C." the Commonwealth Government desires to give further consideration to the question of arrangements regarding pay, allowances, outfit gratuity, pensions on account of disability or of widows and children of deceased personnel, leave, sick leave, etc., for officers and men loaned by the Admiralty to the Dominion Governments, and vice versa. A further despatch on this subject will be sent to Your Grace at a later date.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNORS-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 76.]

(Commonwealth of Australia. }

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 10th September, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch, [Confidential (2) of the 30th of June,*] [Confidential of the 13th of September,†] 1923, regarding the training of members of the Royal Fleet Reserve in [Canada] [the Commonwealth of Australia] and to request you to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty note with satisfaction that the [Canadian] [Commonwealth Government] are in agreement with their proposals on this subject, and are prepared to afford facilities for the training of the Royal Fleet Reservists who become domiciled in [Canada.] [Australia.]

2. Their Lordships are accordingly issuing instructions to the effect that men of the Royal Fleet Reserve, Classes A and B, may in future be permitted to migrate to [Canada] [Australia] without taking their discharge from the Reserve, and that discharged Naval ratings and Royal Marines resident in [Canada] [Australia] if otherwise eligible under the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations may be enrolled in the Reserve, subject to the following conditions.

[To Canada only: 3. In view of the information furnished by the Canadian Government regarding the estimated numbers which could be received for training in His Majesty's Canadian ships and Establishments, the Lords Commissioners have decided for the present to limit the number of Royal Fleet Reservists permitted to reside in Canada to 150, including not more than 75 men holding non-substantive ratings.]

* No. 64.

† No. 71.

[To Australia only: 3. It may be found necessary to impose a limit upon the numbers of Royal Fleet Reservists permitted to reside in Australia; but this would depend upon the numbers which the Commonwealth authorities would be prepared to train, and the Lords Commissioners would therefore be glad to learn what is the maximum number of Royal Fleet Reservists who could be received for training in Australian Naval Establishments.]

[To Canada only: 4. The Lords Commissioners note that facilities exist in Canada for the training of specialist ratings allowed to settle in the Dominion, but that the Canadian Government are unable to provide at present for the reception of Anti-Submarine ratings. Their Lordships will be satisfied if gunnery or torpedo training, according to the non-substantive rating held in the Service, can be given to those ratings of the Seaman Class for whom training in other special branches is not available, and if gunnery training can be given to men holding no non-substantive rating. They note that, in the case of Royal Marine Reservists resident in Canada, training with the Militia Forces will be afforded where distance from a Port precludes training in His Majesty's Canadian ships.]

[5.] [4.] The Lords Commissioners are prepared to defray from Naval funds the expenses of travelling and subsistence in connexion with men's journeys to and from their homes when attending drill, up to a limit, until further notice, of £8 per man per drill. They observe in this connexion that prior to 1912 the allowance payable for these purposes from Naval funds to Reservists abroad was limited to £3 per man per drill, and they anticipate, therefore, that the limit now proposed will enable men to live at greater distances from the training centres than was formerly possible; further, to meet the case of members of the Royal Fleet Reserve, Class B, who may reside at a distance from the training centres involving a greater expense than £8. Their Lordships are prepared to agree to such men performing fourteen days' training biennially, instead of seven days annually, and to defray travelling and subsistence expenses from Naval funds up to a limit of £16 per man for each biennial drill, provided that arrangements can be made for such men to be received for a fortnight's training in alternate years in Dominion ships and Establishments. Their Lordships would be glad to be informed as to the extent to which these limits are likely to restrict the liberty of movement of Reservists allowed to settle in [Canada.] [Australia.] having regard to the present local level of travelling and other expenses.

[6.] [5.] To enable the development of the scheme to be duly watched, Reservists in [Canada] [Australia] will be retained on the Registers of their respective Home Port Divisions. The Lords Commissioners consider, however, that it will be necessary for local Registers to be kept by the [Canadian] [Commonwealth] Naval authorities of the names, ratings and official numbers of Royal Fleet Reservists domiciled within their jurisdiction, and for this purpose to notify the Registrars of the Royal Fleet Reserve at the respective Home Ports of enrolments, re-enrolments or discharges of such Royal Fleet Reservists and of drills performed by them. [To Canada only: Their Lordships note that the Canadian Government anticipate the possibility of the services of an Accountant Officer of the Royal Navy being required as a Royal Fleet Reserve Registrar at the Naval Service Headquarters, Ottawa; but they concur in the view that this question may be left over for consideration until the scheme has reached a further stage of development.] [To Australia only: There would be no objection to direct communication between the Registrars, Royal Australian Fleet Reserve, and the Registrars, Royal Fleet Reserve, for this purpose.] [To all: Payments made by the [Canadian] [Commonwealth] Naval authorities in respect of Royal Fleet Reserve men would be reclaimed from the Accountant-General of the Navy in the usual manner.]

[7.] [6.] A new edition of the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations is now in the Press and copies will be supplied to the [Canadian] [Commonwealth] Naval authorities when ready.

[8.] [7.] In the event of mobilization of the Royal Fleet Reserve, the Lords Commissioners understand the [Canadian] [Commonwealth] Government to concur in the view that the procedure followed should be that indicated in paragraph 11 of Admiralty letter of the 18th November, 1922,* of which a copy was enclosed in my predecessor's Confidential despatch of the 16th December, 1922.* The details of the mobilization arrangements will be the subject of a further communication.

* No. 69 in Dominions No. 82.

No. 74.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 78.]

(Confidential.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 1st October, 1924.

WITH reference to my predecessor's Confidential despatch of the 8th of October, 1923,† and previous correspondence on the subject of the utilization of the services of officers and men of the Naval Reserves who may happen to be in South Africa at a time of mobilization, I have the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have had under consideration, as stated in paragraph 1 (f) (i) of Memorandum C (a copy of which was enclosed in the letter from the Admiralty to the High Commissioner for the Union of South Africa of the 3rd of March, 1922‡), the revision of the present provision in the regulations for the Royal Fleet Reserve, under which residence in this country is a condition for membership of that Reserve, and men proceeding abroad for periods exceeding six months are discharged.

The Lords Commissioners' proposals under this head are set out in the enclosed letter sent from the Admiralty to the Commander-in-Chief, His Majesty's Ships and Vessels, Africa; a copy of this letter was also sent to the High Commissioner for the Union of South Africa. In the light of the correspondence referred to above on the subject of Naval Reservists, the Lords Commissioners hope that your Ministers will see no objection to the retention by the Admiralty of a prior claim to the services of any Royal Fleet Reservists who may be resident in the Union. Subject to the concurrence of your Ministers in this view, the Lords Commissioners would propose that the responsibility for the administration of the Royal Fleet Reserve in South Africa in time of peace, and the allocation of such Reservists in the event of mobilization, should rest with the Imperial Naval Authorities. They would, however, be grateful if the Union Government could agree to afford facilities for Royal Marine Reservists, domiciled at distances from ports which render impracticable their instructions on board His Majesty's ships, to undergo training with the military forces of the Union, as set out in paragraphs 3 and 5 of the enclosed letter. Their Lordships would be prepared to defray from Naval funds the expenses of travelling and subsistence in connexion with the journeys of such men to and from their homes when attending drill, up to a limit, until further notice, of £8 per drill; and, in the case of members of Class B of the Royal Fleet Reserve who may reside at a distance from the training centres involving a greater expense than £8, Their Lordships would be willing that such men should perform fourteen days' training biennially, instead of seven days annually, and they would defray training and subsistence expenses up to a limit of £16 per man for each biennial drill, if arrangements could be made to retain such men for a fortnight's training in alternate years. As the training prescribed for Class A of the Royal Fleet Reserve already consists of a week in alternate years it would not be possible to include Class A in the arrangement proposed for Class B. In this connexion Their Lordships observe that prior to 1912 the allowance payable from Naval Funds for these purposes was limited to £3 per man per drill, and they anticipate, therefore, that the limit now proposed will enable men to live at greater distances from the training centres than was formerly possible. Any payments made by the Union Government in respect of such training could be reclaimed from the Accountant-General of the Navy.

* No. 72 in Dominions No. 82. † No. 70. ‡ See enclosure in No. 67 in Dominions No. 82.

The Lords Commissioners would also be glad to learn the views of your Ministers as to the extent to which the proposed maximum limit of allowances payable is likely to restrict the freedom of movement of Reservists settled in the Union having regard to the present local level of travelling and other expenses.

I have, &c.,
J. H. THOMAS.

[57214]

Enclosure in No. 74.

Admiralty, S.W.1, 20th November, 1922.

The Commander-in-Chief,
His Majesty's Ships and Vessels, Africa.

I AM to acquaint you that Their Lordships have had under consideration the revision of the present provision in the Regulations for the Government of the Royal Fleet Reserve, under which residence in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man is a condition of membership of that Reserve and men proceeding abroad for periods exceeding six months are discharged.

2. The existing state of employment in the United Kingdom renders it desirable to consider the possibility of allowing a proportion of Royal Fleet Reservists to settle in British Dominions or Colonies, while retaining their membership of the Reserve and the present and prospective benefits attaching to such membership, provided that arrangements can be made for them to carry out locally the periodical training prescribed by the Regulations; and I am to request that you will report to what extent it would be possible to make such arrangements in the case of Royal Fleet Reservists emigrating to the Union.

3. The rules now in force for the training of the Royal Fleet Reserve are as follows:—

(i) Class A (Long Service Pensioners) are required to perform one week's training during the calendar year following the year of enrolment in the Reserve, and one week's training during each alternate calendar year thereafter, excluding the year in which they become qualified for Reserve Pension and are finally discharged from the Reserve.

(ii) Class B (men discharged from the Royal Navy or Royal Marines without a Pension, and enrolled in the Reserve) are required to perform one week's training during the calendar year following that in which they enrol, and one week's training each subsequent calendar year. In cases where enrolment is not effected within one year of discharge from the Active Service, a week's training is also required immediately on enrolment. Training is not required in the year in which men are due for final discharge with Reserve gratuity.

(iii) In the case of Royal Fleet Reservists training at the Home Ports, a week's training consists of six forenoon and five afternoon drills. Special classes of instruction are formed—

- (a) for gunnery ratings at the Gunnery Schools;
- (b) for Torpedo ratings at the Torpedo Schools;
- (c) for Submarine ratings, who volunteer for further service as such, at the Submarine School;
- (d) for ratings with anti-Submarine qualifications at the anti-Submarine School;
- (e) for other Seamen and Stokers at the Royal Naval Barracks—training of Stokers being carried out by the Engineer Officers;
- (f) for Signal and Wireless Telegraphy Ratings at the Signal School;
- (g) for Sailmakers at the Dockyard Sail Lofts;
- (h) for the Regulating Branch at the Royal Naval Barracks and
- (i) for Royal Marines at the Royal Marine Headquarters.

4. Their Lordships appreciate that, in some cases, the same facilities for the Specialist training of Seaman ratings do not exist locally as in the United Kingdom. In such cases they would be satisfied if men were to carry out Gunnery or Torpedo training, according to the non-substantive ratings held by them in the Service, or where no non-substantive rating is held, if they performed only Gunnery training.

5. In the case of Royal Marines, Their Lordships suggest that they should undergo instruction in Gunnery on board His Majesty's Ships, and that, in cases where owing to distance from a port it is impracticable to carry out such training, arrangements might be made for them to undergo training with the Military Forces of the Union.

6. In the event of such a scheme being approved, it would further be necessary for suitable arrangements to be made for candidates for the Royal Fleet Reserve to be examined locally as to their eligibility and suitability for enrolment, and for the payment of retainers to qualified men of Class B in accordance with the Regulations.

7. The general procedure to be followed would be that laid down in Admiralty letter of the 12th February, 1903, N.14833/02.

8. Cases of misconduct on the part of Royal Fleet Reservists would be dealt with by the Local Senior Officer under the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations, any dismissals from the Reserve being notified to the Registrar, Royal Fleet Reserve, of the man's Port Division.

9. A list of Royal Fleet Reserve men on the station under your command would be kept under your authority, and it would be necessary to make arrangements for their mobilization locally in the event of emergency. As regards the employment of Royal Fleet Reserve men immediately on mobilization, while Their Lordships consider it essential that they should be regarded as available for general service in time of war, they are prepared to leave their allocation in the first instance on mobilization to the Local Senior Officer, observing that it would probably prove desirable to draft some of them as gun's crews to defensively-equipped merchant ships in Union ports and so enable the vessels to proceed to their destinations. The names of any men holding higher non-substantive ratings allocated to this or any other service by local authority should be telegraphed to the Admiralty.

By Command of Their Lordships,
CHARLES WALKER.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(Confidential.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 1st October, 1924.

WITH reference to paragraph (f) (i) of Admiralty Memorandum "C" of the 3rd of March, 1922, which was forwarded to the High Commissioner for New Zealand in Admiralty letter of the 3rd of March, 1922,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a letter from the Admiralty† on the subject of revision of the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations in order to enable Royal Fleet Reservists who settle in the Dominions to retain their membership of the Reserve.

2. Their Lordships are anxious that the scheme, which has been accepted by the Governments of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia, should receive the consideration of your Government with a view to the adoption of some similar arrangement in New Zealand. They point out, however, that in the case of New Zealand special considerations arise as the New Zealand Naval Defence Act, 1913, and the Naval Defence Amendment Act, 1922, if strictly applied, would lead to the enrolment of all eligible men discharged from the Royal Navy and resident in New Zealand in the New Zealand Royal Naval Reserve, and consequently preclude their enrolment, or, if already enrolled, their retention in the Royal Fleet Reserve. Their Lordships trust, however, that if your Ministers concur in their proposals, the Acts will not be applied so as to prevent ex-Royal Naval ratings living in the Dominion from joining or retaining their membership of the Royal Fleet Reserve, particularly as Royal Fleet Reservists discharged from the Reserve under such circumstances would under the Regulations be unable to qualify for the pension or gratuity payable by the Admiralty to men who complete their Reserve service.

* See enclosure in No. 67 in Dominions No. 82.

† No. 69 in Dominions No. 82.

3. If your Ministers concur in the general principle and can arrange for the periodical training prescribed by the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations, Their Lordships would be prepared to defray from Naval funds the expenses of travelling and subsistence in connexion with men's journeys to and from their homes when attending drill, up to a limit, until further notice, of £8 per man per drill. In the case of members of the Royal Fleet Reserve, Class B, who may reside at a distance from the training centres involving a greater expense than £8, Their Lordships would be willing that such men should perform fourteen days' training biennially, instead of seven days annually, and to defray travelling and subsistence expenses up to a limit of £16 per man for each biennial drill, if arrangements could be made to receive such men for a fortnight's training in alternate years. As the training prescribed for Class A of the Royal Fleet Reserve already consists of a week in alternate years it would not be possible to include Class A in the arrangement proposed for Class B. Their Lordships observe in this connexion that prior to 1912 the allowance payable for these purposes from Naval funds was limited to £3 per man per drill and they anticipate therefore that the limit now proposed will enable men to live at greater distances from the training centres than was formerly possible.

4. I should be glad to be informed whether your Ministers are prepared to co-operate in a scheme on the lines suggested and particularly if they concur in the proposals of paragraph 11 of the Admiralty letter enclosed regarding the employment of such Reservists on mobilization. If so, Their Lordships would be grateful to learn whether any maximum limit should be fixed to the numbers of such men trained in New Zealand and also as to the extent to which the maximum limit of allowances payable for travelling and subsistence is likely to restrict the liberty of movement of Reservists settled in New Zealand, having regard to the present local level of travelling and other expenses.

I have, &c.,

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 14th November, 1924.)

[Answered by No. 77.]

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Government House, Ottawa, 3rd November, 1924.

WITH reference to your Confidential despatch of the 10th September,* on the subject of the training of members of the Royal Fleet Reserve in Canada, I have the honour to enclose, herewith, for transmission to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, a copy of a communication from the Deputy Minister of National Defence.

I have, &c.,
BYNG OF VIMY.

Enclosure in No. 76.

Department of National Defence, Naval Service,

Ottawa, Canada, 22nd October, 1924.

SIR,

WITH reference to your communication of 22nd September enclosing copy of despatch dated 10th September, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governor-General, regarding training of men of the Royal Fleet Reserve resident in Canada, paragraphs 1 to 4, and paragraphs 6 to 8 of the despatch have been noted for information and necessary action.

2. As regards paragraph 5 of the despatch, relating to travelling expenses of men of the Royal Fleet Reserve when proceeding to and from Halifax and Esquimaux for annual drill:—

* No. 73.

The proposal of the Admiralty that members of the Royal Fleet Reserve, Class B, who may reside at a distance from the Training centres, involving a greater expense than £8 shall be permitted to perform fourteen days' training biennially instead of seven days annually, and that their travelling and subsistence expenses from Naval funds, up to a limit of £16 per man for each biennial drill, shall be payable, will solve a difficulty which requires to be overcome in connexion with members of the Royal Fleet Reserve resident in places more distant from Halifax and Esquimalt than Montreal and Calgary, respectively.

3. The cost of single second-class or tourist car fare by C.N.R. line at Government rates from various Canadian cities, and the number of hours necessary for the journey, are as follows:—

To Halifax.	Cost of 2nd class fare.	Number of hours journey.	To Esquimalt.	Cost of tourist car fare.	Number of hours journey.
	$			$
Quebec	11.30	18	Winnipeg	34.82	62
Montreal	14.04	25	Calgary	18.04	48
Hamilton	20.26	34	Saskatoon	26.95	47
Toronto	19.63	33	Edmonton	20.12	37
			Regina	27.34	58

Subsistence allowance payable to men below the rating of Petty Officer, under R.C.N. Regulations, is:—

For 24 hours	$2.25
Above 9 hours, but not absent a night	$1.15
Above 5 hours, but under 9 hours	$0.60

Considering, as test cases, the journey of an Able Seaman from Toronto and from Winnipeg to Halifax and Esquimalt, respectively, it will be noted, as regards Toronto, that the cost of a single fare is $19.63, exclusive of berth, which is not allowed for a journey from Toronto to Halifax, and that the journey occupies thirty-three hours.

Subsistence for an Able Seaman for thirty-three hours, at R.C.N. rates (which, it is assumed, will be payable to men of the R.F.R. when travelling in Canada) is $3.40, and the amount required for travelling expenses for the journey would be $23.63, or $47.26 for the journey to and from Halifax.

£8 converted into Canadian currency, at say $4.50 to the Pound, is $36.00, and an Able Seaman, Royal Fleet Reserve, travelling from Toronto to Halifax and return, would have to pay, out of his own pocket $11.26, in respect to the expenses of his journey.

As regards Winnipeg, the cost of tourist car fare at Government rates is $34.82 (including berth, which is authorized for R.C.N. ratings when travelling westwards) and subsistence payable to an Able Seaman at R.C.N. rates for a journey of sixty-two hours, is $5.65.

The amount required for travelling expenses for the journey to Esquimalt, would, therefore, be $40.47 or $80.94 for the journey both ways.

£8 converted into Canadian currency at say, $4.50 to the Pound, is $36.00, and an Able Seaman, Royal Fleet Reserve, travelling from Winnipeg to Esquimalt and return would, therefore, have to pay out of his own pocket $44.94 in respect to the expenses of his journey.

4. From the above figures, it will be observed that £8 is not sufficient for travelling expenses for men living in the central towns of Canada, but that £16 will be sufficient, except for journey from Winnipeg.

5. Arrangements can be made for Royal Fleet Reserve men, Class B, whose travelling expenses will exceed £8 to be accommodated in His Majesty's Canadian Ships and Establishments for fourteen days' drill biennially, instead of for seven days annually.

6. It is recommended, therefore, that the confirming approval of Their Lordships may be given to the proposal as regards fourteen days' drill biennially, and a maximum of £16 travelling expenses, which has been under discussion.

It would, of course, be made quite clear to men of the Royal Fleet Reserve resident in Canada, that the £16 was a maximum, and that the cost of the journey at Government rates, and subsistence allowed for corresponding ratings of the R.C.N. when travelling on duty, only, would be payable within the maximum of £16.

Pending Their Lordships' decision, the following information regarding travelling expenses is given to Royal Fleet Reserve men now resident in Canada:—

"Repayment of travelling expenses and subsistence incurred in proceeding to Training Headquarters and in returning to home town, is limited to a maximum of £8, or £4 for the journey each way to and from Training Headquarters. The £8 will be converted into Canadian money at the current rate of exchange, and the maximum amount payable will, therefore, be somewhat less than $40, or $20 for the journey each way.

The maximum of £8 is not payable to Royal Fleet Reserve men unless the length of the journey necessitates expenditure of that amount. The method which will be followed in assessing the travelling expenses is to allow, within the above maximum, the cost of rail transportation and subsistence, in accordance with the scale authorized for corresponding ratings in the R.C.N."

7. The following subsidiary questions present themselves for consideration if the proposal as regards fourteen days' drill biennially and increase of travelling expenses within a maximum of £16 is approved.

(a) Whether the first biennial drill in Canada should be performed in the year in which first annual drill in Canada is due.

For example:—Whether an Able Seaman due to drill in 1925 should be required to perform fourteen days' drill in 1925, and fourteen days in 1927, instead of fourteen days' drill in 1926 and fourteen days in 1928.

(b) Whether any arrangements can be made as regards travelling expenses in the case of a Royal Fleet Reserve man, who is resident in an inland town whence travelling expenses to and from Training Headquarters will be in excess of £8, and who is within four years of completion of period of enrolment, and who has only three annual drills to perform, being exempt for the last year, under Article 38 of the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations, 1924.

For example:—A man who takes up residence in Canada in 1924, who is due for drill in 1925, 1926 and 1927, and who is due for discharge on termination of period of enrolment in 1928. A solution of this difficulty might be to authorize such a man to perform ten days' drill in 1925, and eleven days in 1927 (a total of twenty-one days for the three years), travelling expenses within a maximum of £12 for each of these two periods being payable.

The following regulation is suggested as covering this proposal:—

"When during the last four years of enrolment, Royal Fleet Reserve men, Class B, resident in the inland cities of Canada (whence travelling expenses to and from Training Headquarters exceed £8) are due to perform only three periods of seven days' drill, such drill may be carried out in two, instead of in three periods, viz., ten days' drill during the third year prior to date of completing term of enrolment, and a period of eleven days during penultimate year of enrolment. Travelling expenses within a maximum of £12 will be allowed when proceeding to and from Training Headquarters for each of these two periods of drill."

8. Apart from Class B men, the travelling expenses of Royal Fleet Reserve men, Class A, living in the inland towns in Canada, would appear to require consideration.

Such men are required to perform seven days' drill biennially, but in cases where travelling expenses to and from Training Headquarters will be in excess of £8 it is recommended that during their first drill in Canada after taking up residence in the Dominion, they should perform ten days' drill, and thereafter, ten days' drill every third year; the number of days' drill performed in the year during which they carry out final drill prior to completion of enrolment being increased or decreased, if necessary, so that they shall not have performed, during period of residence in Canada as members of the Royal Fleet Reserve, more than the amount of drill specified in the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations, viz., seven days' drill biennially.

Travelling expenses in such cases for each period of ten days' drill, to be limited to a maximum of £12; the maximum travelling expenses for attending drill during the penultimate year of enrolment to be limited to the difference between £8 multiplied by the number of times that they would have been required to perform drill during their period of service in the Royal Fleet Reserve whilst resident in Canada and the amount of travelling expenses actually paid to them for attending drills whilst resident in Canada.

Taking for example the case of a Petty Officer, Royal Fleet Reserve, Class A, who takes up residence in Canada in 1924, and is due for drill in 1925 and thereafter biennially until 1934, when he is due for discharge:—

Such Petty Officer, under the proposal above, would perform ten days' drill in 1925 and ten days in 1928, and fifteen days' drill in 1931. He would receive a maximum of £12 travelling expenses when attending drill in 1925 and 1928, and a maximum of £16 travelling expenses when attending drill in 1931.

(ii) An alternative and more simple solution would be to authorize travelling expenses for Class A men resident in Canada, up to a maximum in excess of £8 (maximum of £12 is suggested) the men carrying out seven days' drill biennially in accordance with the regulations.

9. It is possible that cases may arise which are not covered by the above proposals in regard to period of drill and amount of travelling expenses of men living in the inland cities of Canada.

Their Lordships might, therefore, wish to consider the feasibility of entrusting to this Department authority to arrange periods of drill and amount of travelling expenses on the general lines indicated in this letter, subject to the restriction that the total number of days' drill performed during period of residence in Canada is to be the total which the Royal Fleet Reserve men would be due to perform under Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations, and that the total amount of travelling expenses payable during period of residence in Canada is not to exceed the amount which would be payable to them under A.F.O. 1713/24 for the numbers of periodical drills which they are required to perform during their residence in Canada.

10. It would be very convenient if Their Lordships' approval of the proposals made in paragraph (6) above could, if possible, be communicated by telegraph, in order that Class B men now resident in inland towns in Canada, who are due for annual drill in 1924, may be instructed to join Training Headquarters for fourteen days' drill for the years 1924 and 1925, with maximum travelling expenses of £16.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 10th December, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to confirm my telegram of the 8th of December,* which read as follows:—

"Your Confidential despatch of the 3rd November.† Training of members of Royal Fleet Reserve in Canada. Admiralty approve proposal set out in paragraph 6 of enclosure to your despatch. Despatch follows."

2. I have to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty note that it will be made clear to men of the Royal Fleet Reserve resident in Canada, that the limit of £16 referred to is the maximum allowable for travelling and subsistence on any one occasion, and that the actual cost only of the journey at Government rates, and of subsistence at the rates allowed for corresponding ratings of the Royal Canadian Navy when travelling on duty, will be payable within that maximum.

3. With regard to the questions raised in paragraph 7 and following of the letter of the Deputy Minister of National Defence, dated the 22nd of October,‡ the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty agree to discretion being vested in the Department of Naval Service to arrange for the performance of drills and the payment of travelling expenses on the general lines proposed, provided that it is clearly understood that the total number of days' drills to be performed during the period of a man's membership of the Reserve, while resident in Canada, is the total which he is due normally to perform under the Royal Fleet Reserve Regulations; and that the total amount of travelling and subsistence expenses payable to him during that period is not to exceed the amount which would be payable under Admiralty Fleet Order 1713/24 for the number of periodical drills which he is due to perform during that period under the Regulations.

4. Their Lordships add that, in the case of Royal Fleet Reservists, Class B, who are permitted to perform fourteen days' drill in the second of two years in which two annual drills would normally have been performed, retainer will be payable in advance of drill up to, and including, the 30th of September in the second year, i.e., men will not be regarded as in arrear with drill provided that drill is performed before the time arrives for the final payment of retainer in the second year.

MINUTE No. 957.

MINISTERS have the honour to state with reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's Confidential Minute of the 24th October, 1924, No. 1/1409, transmitting Confidential despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies dated 1st October, 1924, that it is not possible to depart from the provisions of Section 124 of the South Africa Defence Act, 1912 (as amended by Act 22 of 1922), but, as stated in paragraph (2) of their Minute No. 489 of the 4th July, 1923,‡ they agree, where possible, to exempt from service in the Union Defence Forces any members of the Royal Fleet Reserve (Class A or B) domiciled in the Union, whose services may be specially required by His Majesty's Government, and it is suggested that a list of such personnel may be forwarded, in due course, when the necessary exemption will be granted.

(2) It is agreed that the responsibility for the administration of the Royal Fleet Reserve in South Africa in time of peace, and the allocation of such Reservists in the event of mobilization, should rest with the Imperial Naval authorities.

(3) Ministers are prepared to afford facilities for any Royal Marine Reservists who may be domiciled at considerable distance from the Ports, to undergo their training with the Union Defence Forces, it being agreed that all expenditure on rations, accommodation, travelling, etc., in connexion with such training will be defrayed from Imperial Naval Funds. No charge will be made by the Union Government for the actual training. In this connexion it is assumed that the names and addresses of such Reservists, together with a syllabus of the training to be carried out, will be communicated in due course.

* No. 74. † No. 67.

Ministers, however, desire to point out that the proposed travelling allowance of £8 and £16 respectively for the conveyance of Reservists from their homes to place of drill would be sufficient to cover the Second-Class return rail fare from Johannesburg to Cape Town, at concession rates, as the latter is at present £4 3s. 3d., and also to East London, Port Elizabeth or Durban, as these would be correspondingly less; in view of this it is thought that His Majesty's Government may possibly consider it more desirable to arrange for all Naval Reservists of the Royal Fleet Reserve, including Royal Marines, residing inland, to undergo their training at one or other of the Coast Ports, together with other members of that Reserve.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [Your Royal Highness] [you] to inform your Ministers that the Committee of Imperial Defence have recently had under consideration the probable forms of attack to which ports at home and throughout the British Empire may be subjected in war and the forms of defence which would be required to meet such attack. The scale of seaborne attack which may be expected has also been reviewed.

SECRET. [Your Secret despatch of 16th June, 1923,†] [Your Secret (2) despatch of 3rd May, 1923,‡] Conference of Flag Officers. Your Ministers will no doubt have been able to consider questions arising out of Admiralty memoranda laid before 1923 Imperial Conference, and as there has been no meeting since 1921 Lords Commissioners of Admiralty are anxious that a further meeting of Commanders-in-Chief and Senior Naval Officers, China, East Indies, Australia, and New Zealand Commands, should be held at an early date to proceed with plans for naval co-operation and suggest February, 1925, as suitable. Lords Commissioners of Admiralty, while appreciating your Ministers' desire that next Conference should be held in Australasian waters, consider it important that Conference should take place at Singapore for following reasons:—

(1) Discussion will very largely deal with operations connected with defence of Singapore;

(2) holding of Conference in Australasian waters shortly after decision to defer development of Singapore might give the impression that main strategy of war in Far East has been reversed;

(3) naval concentration in Australasian waters, which serves useful purpose in stimulating local interest in naval affairs, may well be postponed in view of recent visit of Special Service Squadron.

[To Commonwealth only: Admiralty trust that arrangements can be made for both First Naval Member and Commodore Commanding Australian Squadron to attend, as presence of both these Officers essential if full value is to be obtained from Conference. IN confirmation of my Secret telegram of the 28th of August,* I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the consideration of your Ministers, a copy of an Admiralty memorandum on the subject of the proposed conference of Commanders-in-Chief and Senior Naval Officers at Singapore in February, 1925.

I have, &c.,

MEMORANDUM FOR COMMUNICATION TO [COMMONWEALTH] [NEW ZEALAND] GOVERNMENT.

SUCCESS in the early stages of war will be dependent to a large extent on the close co-operation of the Naval Forces in the China, East Indies, Australia and New Zealand Commands.

2. The best method of achieving this co-operation can only be arrived at by personal discussion between the Officers concerned, and there has been no conference since the Meeting at Penang in March, 1921. Sufficient time has also now elapsed for full consideration of questions arising out of the Admiralty recommendations for the 1923 Imperial Conference.

3. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty attach great importance to an early meeting of the Commanders-in-Chief and Senior Naval Officers concerned in order that plans for the co-operation of the forces in the Far East may be drawn up.

4. The Lords Commissioners are aware that in 1922 the [Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments] [Government of New Zealand] expressed a wish that the next Conference might be held in Australasian waters, but, for the reasons given below, they are of the opinion that it is of great importance that the proposed Conference in February, 1925, should be held at Singapore.

(a) The discussions will very largely deal with operations connected with the defence of Singapore, and consequently it is of importance that the Conference should be held at Singapore.

(b) The holding of the Conference in Australasian waters shortly after the decision to defer the development of Singapore Dockyard might lead uninstructed opinion to imagine, what can never be the case, that the main strategy of a war in the Far East has been reversed.

(c) The concentration at any time of Royal Naval vessels in Australian or New Zealand waters will, it is hoped, serve a useful purpose in stimulating interest in Naval affairs in those countries.

In view, however, of the recent visit of the Special Service Squadron to Australia and New Zealand, it is considered a concentration next year would not have its full effect, whereas in two or three years' time it may be of great value.

[To Commonwealth only: 5. The discussions which take place at the proposed Singapore Conference will deal with questions of major strategy, and the Lords Commissioners are of opinion that the presence of the First Naval Member, as well as that of Commodore Commanding the Australian Squadron, is essential if full value is to be obtained from the Conference. They hope, therefore, that the Commonwealth Government may find it possible to arrange for both these officers to attend.]

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty suggest that, should the Commonwealth Government desire, Rear-Admiral Hall Thompson, C.B., C.M.G., First Naval Member, might hoist his flag on this occasion.]

[To New Zealand only: 5. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty hope that it may be possible for the Commodore Commanding the New Zealand Division to attend the Conference.]

6. In order that the arrangements for the Conference may be made in good time it is requested that the concurrence or otherwise in these proposals may be telegraphed at an early date.

My Ministers are convinced that it is of paramount importance, as pointed out in my Secret despatch of the 18th May, 1922,† that Senior Officers in Pacific waters should acquire first-hand knowledge of conditions in the South Pacific, and they feel that such knowledge can only be obtained by periodical visits to these waters. They would be glad of an assurance that the Conferences following that of February, 1925, will be held as suggested in Australian waters.—JELlicoe.

SIR,

Downing Street, 27th November, 1924.

WITH reference to my predecessor's telegram of the 24th of October,‡ regarding the forthcoming Conference of Flag Officers to be held at Singapore, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty state that when considering the question as to where the 1925 Conference should be held, they had before them the views of the New Zealand Government as expressed in Lord Jellicoe's Secret (2) despatch of the 18th of May, 1922.§ The reasons which influenced their decision to hold the Conference at Singapore instead of in Australian waters were fully expressed in the Memorandum that accompanied my predecessor's Secret despatch of the 3rd of September, 1924.||

2. Their Lordships again desire to express their thanks to your Government for their concurrence in that decision, and they regret that it was not found possible to hold the Conference in Australian waters. They state that they are in complete sympathy with the New Zealand Government as regards the Conference to be held after that in February next. These wishes have been placed on record, and although it will be readily understood that Their Lordships are unable to commit any future Board of Admiralty, they have no reason to anticipate that there will be any difficulty in arranging for the next Conference to be held in Australian waters.

MEMORANDUM.

North America and West Indies Station. Co-ordination of Imperial and Dominion Navies in time of war.

(1) Canada will be responsible for, and will have control of, all local defences and local patrols in the vicinity of the Canadian coast.

This will include any Imperial craft definitely assigned for such work.

(2) The Canadian Naval Board will control all war services operated on shore, e.g., promulgation of navigational warnings relating to Canadian and adjoining waters. The Canadian Naval Board will act in concert with the Admiralty and, as far as local circumstances permit, will adopt procedures and systems which the Admiralty are putting into force in other parts of the world.

(3) As regards the waters contiguous to the coasts of both Canada and Newfoundland, the Admiralty will initiate or advise on, as necessary, questions requiring co-operation of the two Dominion Governments. The Commander-in-Chief, North America and West Indies, may act as the Admiralty representative in such consultations.

(4) The responsibility of the Commander-in-Chief, North America and West Indies, for the seagoing forces on his station will remain unaltered. The Commander-in-Chief, North America and West Indies, will accordingly be kept informed of any details of the local defence or local patrol arrangements which in any way affect the movements or the freedom of action of this force, and will be consulted as to any change of policy as regards such arrangements.

(5) The limits of the North America and West Indies station not to be affected by the foregoing.

(6) All war measures to be concerted between Admiralty and Canadian Naval Authorities, the Newfoundland Government being consulted as necessary. Commander-in-Chief, North America and West Indies, may act as Admiralty representative.

(7) In the organization of convoy work, the responsibility of the local and seagoing forces respectively will be governed on the North America and West Indies station as elsewhere by the following general principles. The word "convoy" includes single vessels under escort of a seagoing war vessel.

- (i) The Ocean Escort is responsible for the safety of the Convoy.
- (ii) The Local Authorities are responsible for the provision of the Local Escort and all necessary information being given to it.
- (iii) The Authorities at the Port of Departure are responsible for informing the Authorities at the Port of Arrival what rendezvous the convoy will make, and when.
- (iv) The Authorities at the Port of Arrival are responsible for the promulgation of navigational warnings, and these may include an alteration in the rendezvous.
- (v) If the Local Escort cannot be at the rendezvous at the time stated, the responsibility for informing the Convoy lies with the local authorities.
- (vi) If the Convoy cannot be at the rendezvous at the time stated, the responsibility for informing the local authorities lies with the Ocean Escort.
- (vii) The Ocean Escort and Local Escort having joined company, the command and responsibility of the whole lies with the Ocean Escort so long as she remains in company, and Local Escort being in its turn responsible for giving the Ocean Escort all necessary information as to dangers, channels to be used, etc.

20TH JULY. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram 15th July*. Cruisers. Cannot understand information supplied re cost and time of delivery in view of estimate given to me while in Britain and on which I have based my statement to the Cabinet and Parliament. The then Minister and expert informed me in London cost of cruiser would be £2,000,000 or less, and time of delivery approximately two years. The increased cost is substantial and it is difficult to understand what has transpired since my visit to necessitate such a drastic alteration of estimate. This increase in cost is extremely serious but even more so is the greatly extended time of delivery which completely upset all our calculations which were based on urgency of the situation and necessity for replacing obsolete cruisers at once. The information now contained in your telegram necessarily compels a reconsideration of the whole question from the standpoint of both finance and defence. Before taking action in this direction I shall be obliged if you will look into the question further with a view to delivery more in accordance with the information supplied to me while in Britain. Please reply urgently. Ends.

FOLLOWING for your Prime Minister from First Lord of Admiralty:—

Begins: Your telegram 20th July.† I much regret that there should have been any misunderstanding when discussing prices with you. The cost of a cruiser was invariably quoted at approximately £2,000,000 and this was the figure you mentioned when you considered the financial aspect of this question with me on 25th January, 1924.

It is understood that at a meeting in the then First Lord's room on Saturday, 19th November, 1923, it was then thought that the price might work out at £1,900,000, spread over four years, owing to an anticipated fall in the price of material and labour.

We have now definite data to work on regarding price, and in view of the rise in the price of labour, especially as regards shipyard workers, it is now considered safer to quote the figure of £2,200,000. Should the cost of labour fall, it will naturally have a direct bearing on this figure.

As regards the duration of time for building, the period has invariably been quoted as approximately three-and-a-half years. It is possible that you may have in mind the time for completing the first gun mounting, which is now in hand. This mounting is of an entirely new design and will probably take two years to complete, after which repetition will follow at close intervals.

In C.I.D. Paper 195-C "Empire Naval Policy and Co-operation" reference is made to the replacement of "Melbourne," "Sydney," "Brisbane" and "Adelaide," and in each case the date for laying down a replacement vessel is given as four years in advance of the year in which the above-named cruisers are respectively due for replacement. In other words, it was considered that the period for building would approximately be three-and-a-half (3½) years with four annual payments. Ends.

10TH SEPTEMBER. Secret. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Government as you know has lately given consideration to the question of constructing two modern 10,000-ton cruisers for delivery as early as possible. It is proposed to invite tenders from shipbuilders in Great Britain, in three separate ways, namely (i) for construction of one cruiser in Great Britain, (ii) for construction of two cruisers in Great Britain, (iii) for construction of one cruiser in Britain and one in Australia by British firm. It is further proposed to invite local tenders for construction one cruiser in Australia. The Government will then decide whether one or both cruisers will be ordered in Britain.

When tenders were called for construction of "Melbourne" and "Sydney" the Admiralty invited tenders and acted on behalf of the Commonwealth Government. While such procedure would suggest itself as being the simplest in the present instance the question of cruiser construction has become acutely political, and the Government in the circumstances consider it desirable that the High Commissioner for Australia should invite tenders on behalf of the Commonwealth Government. There are several difficulties which immediately suggest themselves, and we realize that this course can only be followed if we receive the fullest co-operation of your Admiralty experts. This we most earnestly request.

With regard to tenders in Australia these will of course be called by our Naval Board, who will have charge of, and arrange for, necessary inspection of plans, etc., locally.

My Government would be glad if your Government could make available to our High Commissioner such plans and specifications of the latest type of 10,000-ton cruiser as are necessary for the purpose of calling tenders in London and also as in the case of "Brisbane" for despatch to Australia of the necessary duplicate set or sets for the purpose of calling tenders here.

We would appreciate also any assistance the Admiralty could give the High Commissioner with regard to the calling of tenders, answering technical questions, inspection of plans and final review of tenders when received. On receipt of your reply the High Commissioner will be instructed to get into touch with your Admiralty Authorities to consult them as to the best procedure to be followed.

We are anxious that tenders shall be invited in Great Britain at once, and that plans and specifications for use at this end should be sent to Australia without delay. Needless to say that every reasonable precaution will be taken by the Naval Board here and by the High Commissioner in London that you may suggest for maintenance of secrecy.

Your urgent co-operation in this matter will be very greatly appreciated. Ends.

Reference to proposed interchange of Royal Navy and Royal Australian Navy Light Cruisers, Australian Government is anxious to initiate this as early as possible on general lines of programme outlined by the Chief of Naval Staff, Admiralty, 5th December, 1923. Non-delivery of boiler plates for His Majesty's Australian Ship "Sydney," grounding of His Majesty's Australian Ship "Brisbane," necessitating about six weeks in dock after Southern latitude trial completed, and the absence of His Majesty's Australian Ship "Adelaide," make it impossible for the Royal Australian Navy cruiser to leave Australia before towards the end of December. MY LORD, Downing Street, 1st September, 1924.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's telegram of the 16th of August,* I have the honour to transmit to you, for the consideration of your Ministers, a copy of an Admiralty Memorandum on the interchange of light cruisers between the Royal Navy and the Royal Australian Navy.

2. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty suggest that, if your Ministers concur, the routine for the Australian cruisers outlined in the programme should commence in the autumn of 1925. As stated in my Secret telegram of 30th August,† H.M.S. "Concord" will in the meanwhile rendezvous with H.M.A.S. "Adelaide" at Malta in the middle of November, 1924, and will proceed in company with her to Australia.

3. In regard to the reciprocal visit of a vessel of the Royal Australian Navy, the Lords Commissioners much regret that the prior importance attached to the Conference at Singapore has compelled them to make proposals which may prevent the Commonwealth Government from being able to sanction the absence of another cruiser from Australian waters for the purpose of visiting European waters in the spring of 1925.

4. Should, however, the Commonwealth Government find it possible to send a vessel of the Royal Australian Navy both to Singapore and to European waters the Lords Commissioners will welcome such an arrangement.

MEMORANDUM ON INTERCHANGE OF ROYAL NAVY AND ROYAL AUSTRALIAN NAVY LIGHT CRUISERS.

In the papers (C.I.D. 194-C and C.I.D. 195-C) prepared for the Imperial Conference, the Admiralty recommended that an interchange should take place between ships of the Royal Navy and Royal Australian Navy. The Scheme was approved in principle by Mr. Bruce at the Imperial Conference.

2. The advantages of such an interchange are given in the above-mentioned papers, but, in addition, it must be remembered that, as in the future an increasing proportion of the One-Power Standard of Naval strength for the Empire may be provided by the Dominions, it is essential that the co-operation between the ships of the Royal Navy and those of the Dominion Navies should be as perfect as if all the ships belonged to one Service.

This can only be achieved if the ships of the Royal Navy and Dominion Navies frequently work together.

3. If the best results are to be achieved, it is essential that the interchange should take place each year and at such a time as to gain the maximum benefit.

* No. 122. † No. 123.

4. As the result of discussions which took place between the British and Australian Naval Staffs at the time of the Imperial Conference, the following proposals are put forward for the consideration of the Commonwealth Government:—

(a) One Light Cruiser of the Royal Navy and one Light Cruiser of the Royal Australian Navy to exchange stations annually. Thus ships of the Royal Navy and Royal Australian Navy would be working together almost continuously both in European and in Australian waters.

(b) The programme for the Royal Australian Navy Light Cruiser to be so arranged that she can take part in the Fleet Exercises which are carried out in the spring, a visit being paid to England subsequently.

(c) Both the Royal Navy and Royal Australian Navy Light Cruisers to be refitted just before leaving.

(d) The Royal Navy Light Cruiser to be oil-burning and of such endurance as will enable her to cruise with the Royal Australian Navy Light Cruisers.

Latter, with the concurrence of the Admiralty, will subsequently join the China Squadron for about four to six months, actual date being settled after discussion with the Commander-in-Chief, China. Commonwealth Government suggest that to effect economy the "Adelaide" and "Concord" should proceed to Singapore direct in time to join the Australian Flag at the time of the Conference, and ask that the Admiralty may employ these two vessels as thought best in the meantime. I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty state that, arising out of the subjects brought forward for discussion at the Imperial Conference in October last, an exchange of views has taken place between the Admiralty and the Commonwealth Naval Board regarding the future policy to be adopted for the common training and interchangeability of officers of the Royal Navy and Royal Australian Navy.

2. The matter was first brought before the Board of Admiralty by the late First Naval Member of the Commonwealth Naval Board, with the approval of the Prime Minister of Australia, in an Australian Naval Staff paper, a copy of the relevant portion of which is attached,* and the views of the Admiralty, as communicated to the Naval Board, are shown in the memorandum* enclosed in this despatch. It will be seen that the policy proposed follows that laid down by the Imperial Conference of 1911, the matters now discussed being the method of carrying out that policy in detail.

3. The Commonwealth Naval Board have now notified the Admiralty that the arrangements for the interchange of officers are concurred in generally, subject to further consideration regarding a general list for executive officers and their promotion and the procedure for financial adjustments, and they inquire whether any objection is seen to the Naval Board publishing the main lines of the arrangements for interchange so far agreed upon.

4. The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty concur in the proposal of the Commonwealth Naval Board to publish the main lines of the arrangements.

26TH JANUARY. Your telegram 15th January* relative to loan of officers and men from Royal Navy, there appears to be some misunderstanding. My Ministers represent that 400 men who originally left England in the "Chatham" were, at Admiralty request, in two categories, namely, men on loan for three years, and men who left Royal Navy permanently and joined New Zealand Division for three years. There are about 300 in the latter category, most of whom are taking their discharge in October next, and the remainder have volunteered for further service. Of the 90 odd men now on loan, several have Admiralty permission to complete time for pension or serve for the fourth year in the New Zealand Naval Forces. There are only about 35 of these men to be returned to Royal Navy in 1923, and about the same number in 1924. About 263 of all ranks and ratings are required to be lent in 1923. It is exactly two years since "Chatham" arrived and less since the Training Ship started, and therefore obvious that for new commissions, and, indeed, for some years, New Zealand can only supply young seamen and stokers, and, all other ranks and ratings must be lent without similar return. If the Admiralty cannot supply men on loan in June, the development of New Zealand naval policy will be entirely dislocated, training cease, and both ships will be laid up at heavy expense owing to the large number of young men borne. As nominal lists are not due in England till end of February, and first drafts should leave for New Zealand eleven weeks later, it is requested that volunteers be called for now. My Ministers suggest that services of Captain Prickett on passage home in "Ionic" be made use of on arrival to facilitate matters, as he is fully cognizant of the situation which is brought about by having men in two categories and which was foreseen at original discussion at Admiralty early in 1920.—JELICOE.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 9th March, 1923.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 431, Secret, of the 23rd of December,‡ forwarding a copy of a Secret memorandum prepared for the Committee of Imperial Defence, No. 176 C, on the subject of Empire naval policy and co-operation, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty desire that the particular attention of your Ministers should be invited to paragraphs 28, 32 and 38 of that memorandum, which deal with the provision of Oil Fuel Reserves for the use of His Majesty's ships.

2. The Lords Commissioners observe that the question of the provision of a small reserve of Government oil fuel in New Zealand is closely linked up with that of the employment of an oil-burning light cruiser in the New Zealand Division of the Royal Navy. Your Ministers will recollect that this matter formed the subject of telegraphic correspondence between my predecessor and yourself during 1922, and that it is hoped that such a vessel may be available after the middle of 1924.

3. It is considered most impolitic to allow the mobility of any unit to depend solely upon the availability of supplies of fuel from any commercial firm, however reliable, for the following reasons:—

(a) Such a practice is unlikely to effect economy.

(b) The grade of oil usually maintained by oil companies is inferior to that required by His Majesty's ships.

(c) Commercial stocks are regulated with a view to rapid turnover without consideration of locking up any reserves against war or other emergency.

* No. 131. † 48029/22: not printed; it stated that New Zealand Government rejected the policy of employing retired officers as not being in best interests of New Zealand Division of Royal Navy from point of view of present efficiency and future developments, and asked that reliefs for officers retiring might be arranged forthwith. ‡ No. 2 in Dominions No. 82.

(d) Having regard to the small stocks maintained it is quite possible that, unless Government stocks are held, an accident to an important oiler may seriously interfere with supplies at a critical moment.

4. For the above reasons the Admiralty regard the establishment in New Zealand of a Government oil fuel reserve as an urgent need, and, until there is a reasonable likelihood of such a reserve being guaranteed, it is considered somewhat hazardous, on grounds of naval policy, to send an oil-burning cruiser to South Pacific waters, since the provision of attendant oil-tankers can in no way be regarded as a substitute for reserves ashore.

5. In view of the above considerations, His Majesty's Government hope that the financial circumstances of the Dominion will be such as to enable your Ministers to make provision in the Estimates for 1923-24 for a Government oil fuel reserve for Naval purposes.

For several reasons Admiralty consider it to be most impolitic to allow the mobility of the relief cruiser to depend upon commercial oil fuel supplies, however reliable they may be, also that oil tankers cannot be regarded as substitute for reserves ashore and that, unless there is some prospect of reserves ashore, it might be somewhat hazardous to send oil-burning cruiser to South Pacific. His Majesty's Government hope that your Ministers may be able to make provision in 1923/24 Estimates for Government oil fuel reserve in view of above reasons.

provision being made for the supply of oil fuel independent of commercial stocks before an oil-burning light cruiser is sent to New Zealand waters and, as stated in my telegram of the 7th May,* provision is being made in the current year's Estimates for the erection of an oil tank at Devonport, Auckland.

2. The present proposal is to erect a 5,000 ton tank on a portion of the Auckland Harbour Board's property in the vicinity of Calliope Dock, to which the Board have signified their approval, and to consider, possibly next year, the erection of a further tank of like capacity, to complete to the reserve of 10,000 tons which the Admiralty have recommended. A further site can be found at Devonport for the second tank if it be decided to erect there in preference to another port.

3. My Ministers would now greatly appreciate a definite statement by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty in regard to the replacement of H.M.S. "Chatham" by an oil-burning cruiser, with more exact information as to the date such vessel will be available. Up to the present, they have only received the statement in your telegram of the 12th July, 1922,† that the Admiralty hoped to be able to arrange this in due course, but did not then anticipate that a cruiser would be available until the middle of 1924 at the earliest. In regard to this question, my Ministers advise me that all arrangements for recruiting, for the relief of ratings on loan from the Royal Navy, and in many other directions, have been based on the hope that the oil-burning light cruiser, and her attendant oil-tanker, will be ready to commission not later than August, 1924, and they trust that the Admiralty will shortly be able to give a definite assurance that this will be the case.

4TH JULY. Following are remarks on Naval Defence in Budget statement delivered by Prime Minister to Parliament, 3rd July:—

Begins: The time has arrived when we shall participate to a greater extent in the naval defence of the Empire and assume a share of the burden which it entails. I propose, therefore, to ask Honourable Members this year to increase the total appropriation for naval defence to £500,000. This amount will include working (?) expenses (?) provided for within the vote and a sum not exceeding £100,000 as a contribution towards the cost of establishing a naval base at Singapore. This base will be of more value to Australia and New Zealand than to any other British country in the Pacific.

The "Chatham" will in the near future be exchanged for an up-to-date oil-burning light cruiser.

The Admiralty have emphasized necessity for provision for oil fuel reserves in Dominion—independent of commercial stocks which moreover are practically non-existent at the moment—before oil-burning cruisers are sent to South Pacific. An item therefore has been placed on estimate(s) for erection of a 5,000-ton oil tank at Devonport, as Auckland has proved to be eminently suitable as a repairing and storing base for a small squadron.

Item appears in estimate(s) for effecting certain necessary improvements in facilities afforded by repair base at Auckland and of establishment there. A further item of £5,000 has been inserted with a view of relieving British Government of subsidy which they have been paying continuously since 1909 under agreement with the Auckland Harbour Board for payment of £150,000 over a period of 30 years, as under that agreement New Zealand now derives greatest benefits in docking and repair(s) of naval vessels.

* No. 135. † No. 35 in Dominions No. 82.

I may add that the Imperial naval authorities prefer the system of local expenditure in operation in New Zealand to any direct contribution and even with regard to cash contribution(s) towards the cost of a naval base at Singapore may prefer difference(?) between current expenditure and proposed total of appropriation of £500,000 should be used for strengthening the defence of our ports. Ends.

Expenditure for the year ending 31st March, 1923, was £293,000, including annual interest payment in respect of His Majesty's Ship "New Zealand."

Excluding any contribution(s) to Singapore estimated expenditure for the year ending 31st March, 1924, is £339,000 to which has to be added annual payment(s) for interest, etc., in respect of His Majesty's Ship "New Zealand."

MR. E. MARSH (COLONIAL OFFICE) to MR. W. F. MASSEY (PRIME MINISTER).

[Answered by No. 143.]

DEAR MR. MASSEY,

Downing Street, 23rd November, 1923.

IN your letter of the 4th of October,§ you inquired as to the position regarding the Oiler which is wanted by the New Zealand Government to work with H.M.S. "Dunedin."

The Duke of Devonshire has now heard from the Admiralty that they could let New Zealand have the Oiler "Dredgol" at an annual charge of £6,500, which represents the rate for chartering a similar vessel on a "bare bottom" (i.e., net) basis.

This vessel was constructed in 1918 and is a twin-screw steamer classified "100 A 1" in Lloyd's Register; she is 326 feet in length and has a loaded draught of 22 feet 3 inches. She is a coal burner with bunker capacity of 350 tons, and her present cargo capacity is 4,000 tons.

* No. 139. † No. 138. ‡ No. 140. § No. 141.

The Admiralty understand that you would require her to have an endurance of 4,000 miles at nine knots, and for this purpose it would be necessary to carry an additional 450 tons of bunkers. This could be provided by using the after oil fuel tank and fitting watertight doors in the bulkhead. This alteration would not impair the vessel's classification, and the work could be carried out in three weeks at an estimated cost of £295, which the New Zealand Government would be asked to meet. The alteration would, however, reduce the oil fuel carrying capacity to about 3,000 tons.

The "Dredgol" is at present at Hongkong, and the Admiralty state that the annual cost of wages and victualling for the ship (with Royal Fleet Auxiliary Officers and a Chinese crew) amounts to £5,000 approximately. The charges for repairs and stores may also be expected to reach a similar figure.

The Admiralty propose that the ship shall assist in fuelling H.M. vessels taking part in the forthcoming world cruise, and with this object in view, she would leave Hongkong in time to arrive at Singapore about the beginning of February; subsequently, she would proceed to Fiji, arriving there by the middle of May, and after discharging part of her cargo to H.M. ships, and refilling if necessary, she would proceed to any port which the New Zealand Government might select as suitable for effecting the transfer. From the date of transfer the New Zealand Government would be responsible for the ship's upkeep, repairs and manning, including the retention of her present classification in Lloyd's Register.

The vessel would be docked and would have all outstanding repairs completed prior to leaving Hongkong. She would also be completed with stores and would bring with her all available spare gear, and a complete outfit of hoses, adaptors, etc.

A full complement of Mercantile Marine Officers, drawn from the General List of Royal Fleet Auxiliary Officers manning the Admiralty Oilers, and a Chinese crew would be provided by the Admiralty for the vessel's passage to New Zealand. Should you wish to keep on all or any of this crew, they would be available for loan to the New Zealand Government on the terms set out in the attached note* for the remaining period of their agreements (approximately 2 years) and for further periods beyond that if they were willing to serve.

If you decide to take the ship, perhaps you could let me know whether you will want any of the crew, and whether the increased bunker capacity should be arranged. Other details of the transfer could no doubt best be arranged direct between the Admiralty and the New Zealand Naval Board.

The Secretary of State would be grateful for an early expression of your wishes in this matter, since, if you require this Oiler, the Admiralty are anxious to carry out the alterations and to make other necessary arrangements immediately.

E. MARSH.

Prime Minister's Office, Hotel Cecil, 27th November, 1923.

IN reply to your letter of the 23rd instant,† concerning the Oiler "Dredgol," I shall be glad if the Admiralty may be informed as follows:—

1. It is necessary that the endurance of the "Dredgol" be increased to 4,000 miles at nine knots, and it is requested that the alterations to effect this, as set forth in your letter, be put in hand forthwith, and made a charge against the New Zealand Government.

2. There is no objection to the arrangements concerning transfer of the Oiler to the New Zealand Government at a port in New Zealand; further details as to the port, and whether a further oil cargo for New Zealand is required or not, can be arranged later as suggested in your letter.

3. It is considered that the crew which will bring the Oiler to New Zealand are likely to be required for the full term of their agreement, but it is inexpedient to confirm this until after consultation with the New Zealand Naval Board.

Your telegram 30th August,* my telegram 4th August,† paragraph 3, Oiler. Arrangement made with Mr. Massey while here for loan of Oiler "Dredgol" at annual charge of £6,500. Vessel to be altered to have endurance of 4,000 miles at nine knots, cost of alterations estimated at £295 to be charged against New Zealand. Cost of wages and victualling of ship about £5,000 annually; charges for repairs and stores similar sum. Proposed that vessel should proceed to Fiji about May and after discharging part of cargo there in refuelling ships of Special Service Squadron should be at disposal of New Zealand Government. Ship would be manned with Royal Fleet Auxiliary Officers and Chinese crew, who would be available on loan to New Zealand Government for remainder of their agreements of approximately two years, and for extension if so arranged. It was agreed that details of transfer should be arranged direct.

Admiralty now state that owing to technical difficulties vessel named will not be available, but propose after consultation with Hotham to substitute "Nucula," which is larger vessel, capacity of 6,000 tons oil fuel and will not require alterations as set out above. Annual charge will be the same; arrangements as to transfer crew, etc., will be similar. Admiralty propose also that cargo, fuel, and stores, and money in Master's hands on board at time of transfer should be charged against New Zealand Government. Senior Naval Officer, Fiji, has been instructed to communicate with Commodore New Zealand Squadron to arrange transfer after use of vessel in refuelling Service Squadron ships at Fiji in May. MY LORD,

Downing Street, 12th January, 1924.

WITH reference to my telegram of the 9th January,§ on the subject of the loan of an Oiler for service under the New Zealand Government, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, copies of correspondence|| with the Right Honourable W. F. Massey regarding the loan of the Oiler "Dredgol." The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty now state that certain technical difficulties have arisen in connexion with the suggested structural alterations to the "Dredgol," and they propose accordingly to substitute the Oiler "Nucula."

2. The "Nucula" is a larger vessel than the "Dredgol," having a cargo capacity of about 6,000 tons of oil fuel, and possesses already the required radius of action. She is constructed to use either oil or coal as bunker fuel; her length is 370 feet; her loaded draught is 24 feet 9 inches.

3. The vessel will leave Hongkong about the middle of April and after calling at Singapore will proceed to Fiji, where she will assist in fuelling the Special Service Squadron. After this operation she will be at the disposal of the New Zealand Government, and provisional arrangements have been made for the Senior Naval Officer, Fiji, to communicate direct with the Commodore of the New Zealand Squadron, in order to ascertain the action desired in regard to sailing orders, etc., for the vessel.

4. The arrangements will otherwise be identical with those outlined in the enclosed letter of the 23rd November,* addressed to Mr. Massey; and the annual charge for the vessel will be £6,500. It is proposed that this charge and other liabilities, such as the wages and victualling of the officers and crew, should be borne by New Zealand from the date on which the vessel is placed at the disposal of the New Zealand Government. It is further proposed that any oil fuel cargo, bunker fuel and other consumable stores on board at that date should be debited to the New Zealand Government, together with the amount of public money then remaining in the Master's hands.

5. Rear-Admiral Hotham has been consulted and has provisionally agreed to the arrangements outlined above.

Revised estimate of cost of alterations to be borne by New Zealand Government, see (1) in my telegram of 4th August,§ is £200.

In respect of maintenance on voyage out, including fuel and stores, see (2) in my telegram of 4th August, proposed to make charge against New Zealand of £6,000 based on estimated cost of fuel stores, etc., consumed on direct journey from this country to New Zealand.

As "Dunedin" on leaving was stored generally for twelve months' requirements, in addition to the £6,000 worth of fuel and stores consumed on the passage out, stores and fuel will remain on board on arrival at Auckland to approximate value of £3,000, making £9,000 in all.

Manning, see (3) in my telegram of 4th August, proposed that New Zealand Government should assume responsibility for cost as from 10th May.

Should be glad to learn at an early date views of your Ministers as to Admiralty offer of second light cruiser in 1925, see my telegram 4th August.—THOMAS.

2. The arrangements outlined in paragraph 4 of your predecessor's despatch are agreed to by the New Zealand Government, namely:—
- (a) The annual charge for the vessel to be £6,500.
 - (b) This charge and all other liabilities such as the wages and victualling of the crew under their current agreements to be borne by New Zealand from the date on which the vessel is placed at the disposal of the New Zealand Government.
 - (c) Any oil fuel cargo, bunker fuel and other consumable stores on board at that date to be debited to the New Zealand Government, together with the amount of money then remaining in the Master's hands.
3. The New Zealand Government also accept responsibility for the ship's upkeep, repairs and manning, including the retention of her present classification in Lloyd's Register, as from the date of transfer.
4. As regards officers and crew, it is proposed that if the officers are in all respects suitable they should be retained under the orders of the New Zealand Government. It is probable that the Chinese crew will be retained possibly for the remaining period of their agreements (approximately until the end of 1925). They will then probably be replaced by Europeans.
5. The New Zealand Government will be responsible for passages, etc., as shown in the Note attached to the letter from Mr. Marsh to Massey, dated 23rd November, 1923,§ which was enclosed in the despatch under reply.
6. As regards the movements of the "Nucula," my Government propose, subject to H.M.S. "Dunedin" being completed to full stowage from other sources, that this vessel shall remain in the vicinity of Fiji to complete H.M.S. "Dunedin" with oil during the forthcoming cruise to the Islands, then proceeding as necessary to complete with a full cargo about the end of August.

THE PRIME MINISTER (MR. MASSEY) to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 19th October, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 158.]

Prime Minister's Office, Hotel Cecil, W.C., 18th October, 1923.

SIR,

Rescue Tug for New Zealand.

I HAVE the honour to bring to your notice that representations have been made to me for some time past for the necessity of the New Zealand Government acquiring a Rescue Tug for salvage and other purposes.

2. We have, unhappily, in the last two years, suffered some serious losses in New Zealand owing to shipwreck, one of which was the total wreck of the "Wiltshire," a vessel with very large refrigerated space and therefore difficult to replace.

3. The Naval Adviser to the New Zealand Government has made representations that from a war point of view some form of rescue or salvage vessel is almost a necessity to the ports which constitute naval bases, convoy assembly or refuge ports.

4. This officer has made inquiries at the Admiralty and finds that there are several salvage or rescue tugs, the property of the British Government, for disposal or sale, but he is given to understand that there is no market for the same.

5. I would suggest that sooner than allow such vessels to deteriorate and eventually become unserviceable, it would be an economy to offer them to the Dominion Governments, etc., and with the proviso that the tug's services were given free to all British men-of-war, British Government vessels, and vessels on Admiralty charter.

6. I would point out in this connexion that the New Zealand Government have relieved the British Government of the annual subsidy of £5,000, payable for another fifteen years or so to the Auckland Harbour Board for the use of the docks and workshop at that port which constituted the Naval Base.

7. It is in this port, if the British Government accede to this proposition, that the tug would be stationed, and the tug would be taken up in England in sea-going condition without further burden to the British Government and with the proviso mentioned in paragraph 5.

8. I would be glad if an early answer might be given to this letter so that arrangements, if satisfactory, can be completed before my return to New Zealand.

DEAR MR. MASSEY,

Downing Street, 26th November, 1923.

THE Duke of Devonshire has now received a letter† from the Admiralty respecting the Rescue Tug required by the New Zealand Government, from which it appears that there are available for disposal a salvage vessel worth £18,500 and a Rescue Tug valued at £11,000.

The Admiralty have been giving careful attention, in the light of what you say in your letter of the 18th of October,* to the question whether one of these vessels can be presented to New Zealand, but owing to the Dissolution it may be some little time before the consideration of the matter can be completed. It is hoped, however, that it will be possible to let you have a further communication before you leave.

I AM desired by the High Commissioner to enclose for your information copy of a communication addressed to the Admiralty on the 21st February last relative to the presentation to the Government of New Zealand of one of the "Saint" Class Tugs, of which it is understood there is a surplus beyond Admiralty requirements.

Government of New Zealand one of the "Saint" Class Tugs of which it is understood there is a surplus beyond Admiralty requirements.

It is suggested that this vessel should be used by the New Zealand Division of the Royal Navy for the purpose of moving H.M. Ships and Auxiliaries when required, towing targets for the Squadron, and also for salvage work should occasion arise. With reference to the last-named duty it is pointed out that on account of lack of salvage craft in New Zealand the occurrence of shipping casualties entails demands upon H.M. Ships, either Imperial or belonging to the New Zealand Division, for rescue work, etc., which would be avoided by the provision of a properly-equipped salvage vessel.

Should the request be granted, the Government of New Zealand is prepared to pay for the necessary alterations to convert the vessel for salvage purposes and for the expenses of taking her out to New Zealand.

The High Commissioner would greatly appreciate the decision of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty at an early date, as he is desired by his Government to communicate the result by telegraph in order that, in the event of Their Lordships being able to grant the request, arrangements may be made for the early transfer of the tug in question.

Hotham in connexion with the memoranda on the subject of Empire Naval Policy prepared for use at the Imperial Conference.

2. With reference to paragraph 4 (10) of the first enclosure to Mr. Massey's letter, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty concur that the wireless stations at Awanui and Apia if modernized with valve apparatus would meet naval needs for communication in this area, and observe that they would be most valuable either for working direct with His Majesty's ships and merchant ships or for transmitting by the "I" method, and that they would extend the area covered by Singapore (Seletar) and by Rabaul and Port Darwin when modernized.

3. Their Lordships would be willing to furnish advice as to the best method of carrying out the modernization of the two stations. If this advice is desired, the following information would be required concerning the two installations as they are at present:—

The complete staff in these and all other New Zealand Wireless Telegraphy stations are trained and re-qualified yearly in Naval Procedure, and would be mobilized as R.N.V.R. in time of war and left in these stations. ADMIRALTY to COLONIAL OFFICE.

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Admiralty, S.W.1, 13th October, 1924.

I AM commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to refer to your letter of the 2nd June last,* forwarding a copy of a despatch† from the Government of New Zealand expressing the desire of the New Zealand Government to receive advice as to the best method of carrying out the modernization of the wireless stations at Awanui and Apia.

2. In reply I am to acquaint you, for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that the following recommendations, which also meet Naval strategic requirements, have been prepared on the assumptions that:—

- (a) good intercommunication is required between Apia and New Zealand,
- (b) provision of a commercial ship-shore service on 600 metres spark and 2,400 metres C.W. is required at both stations.

Power Plant—Awanui.

3. The details available indicate that the alternator has an output of 60 K.V.A. at 500-volts and 500 frequency.

4. The H.T. Transformer is 300/400 primary and the secondary $2 \times 18,000$ volts. Taking this to mean that the secondary comprises two windings, the common point of which can be earthed, it is assumed that with the primary line voltage at 400-volts, the secondary supply would be 36,000-volts across outers.

5. At 350-volts primary supply the secondary voltage would be 31,500.

6. This line voltage with the mid-point earthed would be satisfactory for a valve set operating at full power.

Power Plant—Apia.

7. At Apia the alternator is 60 K.V.A., at 440-volts, 500-frequency, and the transformer ratio is understood to be 300/400 volts primary with a secondary of 21,000.

8. Their Lordships consider this transformer ratio to be too small for the efficient operation of a valve set, and they recommend that it be replaced by one suitable for the valve set to be installed.

Transmitting Plant.

9. Their Lordships recommend that at each of the two stations valve transmitting sets should be installed each with an output rating of at least 10 K.W., the valve set to include the following:—

(a) Rectifier-unit comprising four Type NU22 silica valves.

(b) Transmitter unit including three NT24 silica valves so arranged that either two or three valves can be used.

(c) Tuning unit with double wound loose coupled oscillation transformer.

The components of these units could be mounted on three separate angle iron structures with enclosing gates and panels, and could carry all the necessary condensers, valves, valve holders, wave changing switch, magnetic key, etc.

10. This transmitting set could be arranged to operate on a wave range of 1,000/5,000 metres, given a suitable aerial system. It is recommended that the valve transmitter should employ the Admiralty Patent circuit, with valve filaments at high frequency potential, which is now largely used in the British Navy and in commercial valve transmitters.

Filament Supply.

11. Their Lordships recommend that separate filament motor-alternators be supplied, and that these should be 4-1/2/5 K.W. output.

Aerial System.

12. It is understood that the aerial is of an umbrella type with single tower 394 feet high, and outer ends supported on 24 poles 20 feet high.

These data are insufficient for exact calculation, but it is probable that such an aerial system will have a capacity of the order of three to four jars, in which case

* 25623/24: not printed: it enclosed a copy of No. 164. † No. 164.

Their Lordships consider that wave lengths of from 2,000 to 5,000 metres can be obtained with good efficiency.

Ship Service.

13. For ship service on 2,400 metres C.W. the main transmitting set recommended would be quite satisfactory. For 600-metre spark service Their Lordships recommend the installation of a separate standard commercial $1\frac{1}{2}$ K.W. synchronous spark transmitter.

Estimated Cost.

14. The estimated cost of the equipment recommended, including the following items, is:—

Main Valve Transmitter,
Filament motor-alternator,
Synchronous spark transmitter, $1\frac{1}{2}$ K.W.,
Installation, material including spares and 200 per cent. spare valves,
Packed for shipment and delivered C.I.F. at a principal port in New Zealand. Approximately per set . . . £6,000.

15. Their Lordships suggest that contractors be requested to quote for the supply of the material and plant required.

16. If the services of a skilled engineer were required to supervise the erecting, adjustment and testing of the complete installations, the cost would probably be about £85 per month plus all travelling expenses.

17. At Apia where a new H.T. transformer would probably be required the total cost of the set would be increased by approximately £350.

Enclosure 1 in No. 167.

MINUTE 131.

Prime Minister's Office, Cape Town, 28th February, 1923.

MINISTERS have the honour to state, for the information of His Royal Highness the Governor-General, that as it is not proposed to introduce any amendments to the South Africa Defence Act (Act 13 of 1912) during the present Parliamentary Session, the South African Naval Services will be subject to the Naval Discipline Act administered by the Naval Commander-in-Chief without modification or adaptation, but it is desired by Ministers that they may be given an opportunity of viewing any cases where serious disciplinary action is taken against members of the South African Naval Services. Ministers would therefore be glad if steps could be taken to ensure their being granted the facilities for doing so.

Ministers would particularly emphasize that they merely wish to view such cases from a South African aspect, without fettering in any way the action or full disciplinary control of the Naval Commander-in-Chief.

YOUR ROYAL HIGHNESS, I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter to the Commander-in-Chief, No. 2/1865, of 5th March, 1923, enclosing a copy of Ministers' Minute No. 131 of 28th February.

2. As regards the request by Ministers to view any cases where serious disciplinary action is taken against members of the South African Naval Services, I beg to inform you that I am prepared, should I have occasion to try any member by Court Martial, to forward for Ministers' information complete copies of the proceedings. In this connexion it should be noted that the minutes of Courts Martial are subject to the scrutiny of the Law Officers of the Crown, and subsequent approval of My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.

3. Commanding Officers of His Majesty's Ships are empowered to award summary punishments up to a maximum of ninety days' imprisonment. This award is subject to the approval of the Commander-in-Chief or Senior Officer present, a procedure introduced with the object of securing uniformity of punishments as far as possible. In cases where ships are on detached service, Commanding Officers are empowered to award imprisonment without covering approval.

It is not considered expedient to alter this procedure, or to fetter in this respect the authority of Commanding Officers.

4. The Quarterly Returns of Punishments of all the South African Naval Service are forwarded to the Union Government for information.

5. Your letter, together with a copy of this reply, will be placed before the Commander-in-Chief on his return from the West Coast, for his information and for such further action as he may consider necessary.

19128

No. 168.

DRAFT OF PROPOSED NEW WAR OFFICE INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING CORRESPONDENCE WITH DOMINIONS AND COLONIES.

(Extract.)

CORRESPONDENCE WITH DOMINIONS AND COLONIES.

81. All official communications relating to the forces of Dominions or Colonies which raise general questions of policy or major matters of administration will be made through the Colonial Office. Considerable importance is attached by the Colonial Office to the observance of this rule. If a case occurs in which correspondence on a question of policy is opened by a High Commissioner, or in which correspondence on matters of detail develops so as to involve questions of policy, the reply should be sent to the High Commissioner through the Colonial Office. In any case of doubt as to the correct procedure to be followed, C. 1 should be consulted.

In addition, communications intended for or relating to Imperial military officers in the service of Dominions or Colonies will be made through the Colonial Office. In the case of the Dominions, important letters only should go through the Colonial Office, correspondence as to details being conducted through the High Commissioners.

82. Correspondence on the following subjects may, however, be made direct as described.

- (a) Indents for stores and the relative correspondence will continue to pass through the High Commissioners or the Crown Agents for the Colonies.
- (b) Correspondence regarding military examinations will continue to pass direct between the General Staff and the local sections of the Imperial General Staff.
- (c) Copies of specifications for stores will be sent to the High Commissioners or the Crown Agents for the Colonies.
- (d) Correspondence regarding appointments for temporary colonial service, such as construction works, railway survey, etc., will be conducted direct with the Crown Agents for the Colonies.
- (e) In the case of Dominions, matters of technical advice and of minor administrative detail should be dealt with by direct correspondence between the War Office and the High Commissioner or Defence Department concerned.

83. Communications for the High Commissioners should be addressed in the following manner:—

Dominion of Canada—

The Secretary,

Office of the High Commissioner for Canada,
19, Victoria Street, S.W.1.

Commonwealth of Australia—
The Official Secretary,
Commonwealth of Australia,
Australia House, Strand, W.C.2.
Dominion of New Zealand—
The Secretary,
Office of the High Commissioner for New Zealand,
413-416 Strand, W.C.2.
Union of South Africa—
The Secretary,
Office of the High Commissioner for the Union of South Africa,
Trafalgar Square, S.W.1.
Newfoundland—
The Secretary,
Office of the High Commissioner for Newfoundland,
58, Victoria Street, S.W.1.

All accounts from the Commonwealth of Australia forwarded for payment will be addressed to "The Accountant, Commonwealth of Australia."

84. In Canada and Australia, questions of defence pertain to the Dominion and Commonwealth Government respectively; and the Colonial Office should be consulted with regard to any communication on defence matters received from the Governments of Canadian Provinces or Australian States, or their Agents-General in London. But there is no objection to replying direct to communications received from such Agents-General in regard to contracts for stores.

85. The replies to all petitions to the King by individuals residing in the Dominions or the Colonies, should be returned to the petitioners through the Colonial Office.

88. On all matters involving questions of policy, the Colonial Office is the proper channel of communication between the War Office and the Irish Free State. All communications on such questions should be addressed to:—

The Under Secretary of State,
Colonial Office (Irish Branch),
38, Old Queen Street, S.W.1.

Matters of a purely routine nature, arising out of ordinary Departmental business, may be dealt with by direct communication with the High Commissioner for the Irish Free State in London, or the appropriate Ministry in Dublin. The High Commissioner's present (temporary) address is:—
Hotel Victoria, S.W.1.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 16th March, 1923.)

[Answered by No. 171.]

(No. 22.)

Governor-General's Office,

MY LORD DUKE,

Melbourne, 15th January, 1923.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch dated 12th October, 1920,* relative to the War Office Confidential "Memorandum on the subject of Loans, Attachments and Interchanges of and between officers of the Regular Army and officers of the Oversea Dominions," I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform Your Grace that the Commonwealth Government proposes that arrangements be made for the revival of the system of interchange by the exchange for a period of twelve months of one officer from Australia of the substantive rank of Captain or Major with an officer of equivalent rank from the United Kingdom and India respectively. The first interchange it is hoped to effect during the financial year July 1923—June 1924, and later it may be possible to develop the system.

The proposals concerning the interchange of an officer from Australia with an officer from India have been submitted to the Government of India—copy of despatch herewith.

With regard to the interchange of officers between Australia and the United Kingdom, it is considered essential that the officers interchanged should be assigned to a definite appointment and not merely "attached."

Dependent upon conditions prevailing at the time, it is desired to make preliminary arrangements to meet the following alternatives:—

(a) The despatch from Australia of an officer of the rank of Major for regimental employment with the Royal Field or Coast Artillery in exchange for an officer suitable to command a permanent Coast Artillery Unit.

(b) The despatch from Australia of an officer of the rank of Major for employment on the General Staff of a Command in exchange for an officer qualified for similar appointment.

The general financial conditions governing interchanges between the United Kingdom and Australia will be as defined in paragraph 4 (c) of the War Office Memorandum† on the subject of Loans, Attachments and Interchanges (amended to November, 1919). These are briefly as follows:—

"Interchanged officers should be paid by the Government to which they belong, which should also defray the passage to and fro of the officers and their families, travelling allowances and expenses (including all non-effective charges) as may be thought necessary. Travelling allowances and expenses within the United Kingdom or Dominions should be paid at local rates by the Government of the country in which he is serving."

The following local rates of travelling allowance obtain in Australia:—

Members receiving pay from	Daily Allowance.		Daily allowance after one week's residence in same place.		Weekly Allowance after two weeks' residence in same place.
	s.	d.	s.	d.	s.	d.
£310 to £500 per annum	14	6	12	6	45	0
£501 to £600 per annum	16	0	14	0	55	0
£601 to £750 per annum	18	6	16	6	62	6
Over £750 per annum	20	0	18	0	70	0

* No. 82 in Dominions No. 72.

† Enclosure in No. 77 in Dominions No. 72.

My Ministers would be glad if early information could be given as to the acceptance or otherwise of these proposals, in order that details regarding the officers nominated for interchange, the appointments to be held, and the dates on which the interchange will be effected may be arranged.

Enclosure in No. 170.

(23/47/1.)

MY LORD,

Melbourne, 15th January, 1923.

WITH reference to the War Office Confidential "Memorandum on the subject of Loans, Attachments and Interchanges of and between officers of the Regular Army and officers of the Oversea Dominions" dated 15th November, 1919, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Commonwealth Government proposes that arrangements be made for the interchange of one officer of the Staff Corps, Australian Military Forces, of the substantive rank of Captain or Major, with an officer of equivalent rank from India, the period of interchange to be for twelve months, and the first interchange to be effected during the financial year 1923-1924.

It is desired that the interchanged officer should be assigned to a definite appointment and not merely "attached."

Dependent upon conditions prevailing at the time, my Ministers would be glad if preliminary arrangements could be made to meet the following alternatives:—

(a) The despatch from Australia of an officer of the rank of Major and a graduate of the Staff College for regimental employment with Field Artillery in exchange for a p.s.c. graduate capable of instructing in military history and strategy at the Royal Military College.

(b) The despatch from Australia of an officer of the rank of Major for employment on the General Staff of a Formation or Command in exchange for an officer qualified for a similar appointment.

The general financial conditions governing these interchanges will be as defined in the above-quoted War Office Memorandum paragraph 4 (c). These are briefly as follows:—

"Interchanged officers should be paid by the Government to which they belong, which should also defray the passage to and fro of the officers and their families, travelling allowances and expenses (including all non-effective charges) as may be thought necessary."

With regard to travelling allowance and expenses within Australia or India, it is proposed that these should be paid by the Government of the country in which the interchanged officer is serving as follows:—

(a) Interchanged officers from Australia whilst in India should receive travelling allowances in accordance with Scale B, paragraph 29, Army Regulations, India, Volume X.

(b) Interchanged officers from India whilst in Australia should receive travelling allowances at the undermentioned local rates obtaining in Australia or in accordance with a scale of allowances mutually agreed upon by the Governments concerned.

I should be glad if early information could be given as to the acceptance or otherwise of these proposals by the Government of India in order that details regarding the officers nominated for interchange, the appointments to be held, and the dates on which the interchange will be effected may be arranged.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL,
COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

(ARMY DEPARTMENT.)

Simla,
17th July, 1923.

Interchange of an officer between India and Australia.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to refer to the correspondence resting with my telegram No. 590 dated the 16th July, 1923, regarding the interchange of Military officers between India and Australia.

2. In your Lordship's despatch No. 23/47/I, dated the 15th January, 1923,‡ you proposed that arrangements should be made for the interchange, annually, of one officer of the Staff Corps, Australian Military Forces, of the substantive rank of Captain or Major, with an officer of equivalent rank from India, the first interchange to be effected during the financial year 1923-24. In this connexion, your Lordship suggested the following alternatives:—

* No. 170. † No. 171. ‡ Enclosure in No. 170.

(a) The despatch from Australia of an officer of the rank of Major and a graduate of the Staff College for regimental employment with Field Artillery in exchange for a p.s.c. graduate capable of instructing in military history at the Royal Military College.

(b) The despatch from Australia of an officer of the rank of Major for employment on the General Staff of a Formation or Command in exchange for an officer qualified for a similar appointment.

With regard to travelling allowance and expenses within Australia and India, you suggested that these should be paid by the Government of the country in which the interchanged officer was serving, as follows:—

(i) Interchanged officers from Australia, whilst in India, should receive travelling allowances in accordance with scale B, paragraph 29, Army Regulations, India, Volume X.

(ii) Interchanged officers from India, whilst in Australia, should receive travelling allowances at the undermentioned local rates obtaining in Australia, or in accordance with a scale of allowances mutually agreed upon by the Governments concerned.

Travelling Allowances in Australia.

Members receiving pay from	Daily Allowance.	Daily allowance after one week's residence in same place.	Weekly allowance after two weeks' residence in same place.
	s. d.	s. d.	s. d.
£810 to £500 per annum ...	14 6	12 6	45 0
£501 to £600 per annum ...	16 0	14 0	55 0
£601 to £750 per annum ...	18 6	16 6	62 6
Over £750 per annum ...	20 0	18 0	70 0

3. My Government have carefully examined the two main proposals put forward by your Lordship and have decided to accept the alternative described under (b) in paragraph 2 above, on the understanding that the pay of the interchanged officers and the cost of their passage to and fro will be defrayed by their respective Governments. They also agree that the officer from Australia, while in India, should receive travelling allowance in accordance with scale B, paragraph 29, Army Regulations, India, Volume X.

With regard to the alternative proposals mentioned in paragraph 2 (ii) above, my Government agree that the interchanged officer from India should receive, while in Australia, travelling allowances at the local rates which are quoted in your Excellency's letter and are reproduced in the table in paragraph 2 above.

4. The officer selected to proceed from India is Brevet-Major W. H. G. Baker, D.S.O., (p.s.c.), 31st Duke of Connaught's Own Lancers.

Major Baker received his first commission in January, 1909. He served with the British Expeditionary Force in France from 1914 to 1917, and during the last year of this period, he commanded an Infantry Battalion. He was subsequently employed as an instructor at the Cavalry School, Saugor. He passed out of the Staff College, Quetta, in 1921, and since August, 1922, has held the appointment of General Staff Officer, 2nd Grade, at the Headquarters of the Southern Command, Poona.

5. With reference to your Lordship's telegram dated 21st June, 1923, my Government agree that the period of exchange should be for two years, but consider that it would be more suitable if the exchange took place about the beginning of October, which marks the beginning of the training season and of the cold weather in this country. In that case, the selected officers would sail from India and Australia, respectively, about the 15th September.

Memorandum for:

The Secretary,

Prime Minister's Department,

1. As the result of the conversations between the Senior Military Representative with the High Commissioner for Australia in England and the War Office, London, the following suggestions have been made with regard to the interchange of officers between the United Kingdom and Australia:—

- (a) That arrangements be made for the interchange of an officer of the rank of Major for employment on the Staff of the War Office; and
 - (b) That two officers who have graduated from the Staff College should proceed to England for employment on the Staff of the War Office or in commands without replacement in Australia.
2. With regard to the above it is desired that the following proposals be submitted to the Secretary of State for the Colonies:—
- (i) Owing to the paucity of suitable officers in Australia, the suggestion contained in sub-paragraph (b) above cannot be adopted at present.
 - (ii) With regard to sub-paragraph (a) above, it is proposed that an officer of the Australian Staff Corps who is a Staff College graduate of the substantive rank of Major be employed in a 2nd Grade appointment on the General Staff at the War Office, London, for a period of two years in exchange for an officer of the Regular Army in England of equal rank and qualifications who will be employed on the General Staff at Army Headquarters in Australia.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Government House, Ottawa, 30th June, 1924.

WITH reference to Lord Milner's Confidential despatch of the 17th December, 1919,* I have the honour to enclose, herewith, copies of an approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada setting forth that the Government of Canada are in general accord with, and accept, the principles and provisions contained in, the "Memorandum on the subject of Loans, Attachments and Interchanges between individuals belonging to the Military Forces of the Empire," a copy of which was transmitted with the despatch under reference.

I have, &c.,

BYNG OF VIMY.

Enclosure in No. 177.

MINUTE OF A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 27TH JUNE, 1924.

(P.C. 1085.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 23rd June, 1924, from the Minister of National Defence, submitting that he has had under consideration a copy of a "Memorandum on the subject of Loans, Attachments and Interchanges between individuals belonging to the Military Forces of the Empire" (amended to 1919) which was received under cover of Colonial Office despatch dated 17th December, 1919.

The Minister states that this Memorandum differs only in principle in the following respects from the original Memorandum subscribed to by the Canadian Government in 1911:

* No. 77 in Dominions No. 72.

- (i) The system of loans, attachments and interchanges is extended to non-commissioned officers and men as well as to officers;
- (ii) The Dominion Section at the War Office is to be abolished as it is considered that such a system contributed to work being carried out in water-tight compartments and debarred the officers selected for the appointment from obtaining first-hand information regarding the work of the Army as a whole. Officers selected will in future be attached to all the Departments of the Military Members of the Army Council.

There are no changes as regards the incidence of costs.

The Committee, on the recommendation of the Minister of National Defence, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to inform the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies that Your Excellency's Ministers are in general accord with and accept the principles and provisions contained in, the Memorandum received under Colonial Office despatch, dated 17th December, 1919, above referred to.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

E. J. LEMAIRE,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

Secretariat Note.—Arrangements were subsequently made in the course of 1924 for the exchange of certain officers between the War Office and Canada and Australia, and between India and Australia and New Zealand, the details being settled by direct correspondence.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

[Answered by No. 180.]

(No. 197.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 13th May, 1922.

I HAVE the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that, as the result of applications from officers resident in Australia and holding commissions in the British Army to be granted commissions in the Citizen Forces of the Commonwealth, the question has arisen whether it is desirable that an officer should hold His Majesty's Commission in the British Army concurrently with a commission in the Commonwealth Forces under the Defence Act.

The holding of the two commissions concurrently does not appear to the Commonwealth Minister for Defence to be desirable, and it is thought advisable, except in the case of any officers of the Regular Army granted local rank, that an officer before being granted a commission in the Commonwealth Forces should be required to resign his commission in the British Army. I shall be glad to be enabled to acquaint the Minister for Defence with the opinion of the Army Council on this matter.

I shall also be glad to know the views of the Army Council on the question of the disposal, in the event of the outbreak of war, of officers holding commissions in the British or Indian Army who are then resident in Australia; and whether these officers should be returned to duty with their regiments or their services utilized locally.

In this connexion I desire to point out that sections 59 and 60 of the Commonwealth Defence Act, 1903-18, provide for the compulsory calling up in time of war of all male inhabitants of Australia between the ages of eighteen and sixty, but in the event of these sections of the Defence Act being brought into operation by proclamation, the latter section will allow of officers holding commissions in the British or Indian Army being temporarily exempted from service, and this course could be followed should the return of these officers for duty with their regiments be decided upon.

I have, &c.,

AND GOVERNOR.

(Canada No. 520.)
(New Zealand No. 225.)
(Newfoundland No. 123.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 30th October, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the Army Council have recently had under consideration the position in the event of war of officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers and men of the Army Reserve who are domiciled in the Dominions.

2. Subject to paragraph 3 of this despatch, the Army Council have no objection to an officer holding a commission in the Forces of a self-governing Dominion concurrently with his commission in the British Army. The Army Council would probably wish in the event of war to recall for services with the British Army a certain limited number of officers who are in receipt of retired pay, whose names would be communicated to your Government in advance, but, subject to this, they are prepared to surrender to the [Canadian] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] Government the first call on the services of officers of the Reserve of Officers who are permanently resident in [the Dominion] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] should the [Canadian] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] Government desire to utilize the services of these officers.

3. In the event of the decision of your Government on this question being in the affirmative, the Army Council are of the opinion that only those officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers domiciled in [the Dominion] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] who are in receipt of retired pay from the United Kingdom funds should remain in the Regular Army Reserve of Officers. Steps would consequently be taken to inform all those officers otherwise situated, that they will relinquish their British Army commissions.

4. The Council would make any reduction of retired pay of officers employed by the [Canadian] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] Government conform to the Regulations in force for officers recalled for service with the British Army, and in no case would any service performed with [Canadian] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] Forces count towards increase of pension gratuity or any other advantages that might be given from United Kingdom funds for service with the British Army.

To enable the Army Council to carry out this proposal they would be glad if arrangements can be made to notify them of the dates on which such officers commence and cease to draw pay from Dominion funds.

5. The Army Council would also inform all officers in receipt of retired pay who are residing or intend to reside permanently in [the Dominion] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] [To Canada and New Zealand only: of their liability for service in the [Canadian] [New Zealand] Forces, and the financial consequences so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned. For this purpose, I should be glad if you would request your Ministers to furnish a detailed statement regarding this liability of service, should your Government desire to utilize the services of these officers.] [To Newfoundland only: should your Ministers so desire, that their services would be at the disposal of the Newfoundland Government in the event of war, and that the financial consequences, so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned, would be as set out in paragraph 4 above.]

6. The above arrangements would apply only to officers domiciled in [Canada] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] and you should invite the attention of your Ministers to the fact that the Army Council desire that all officers who are temporarily resident but not domiciled in [the Dominion] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] should be liable to recall by the War Office.

7. A further communication will be addressed to you with regard to officers of the Territorial Army and officers of the Indian Army.

8. I should be glad if you would also inform your Ministers that as regards men of the Army Reserve who are domiciled in [the Dominion] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] the position is as follows:—

Prior to the 11th November, 1919, Army Reservists were permitted to reside abroad permanently, and if resident in a Dominion or Colony in which there was an Imperial Garrison drew their Reserve pay. From the 11th November, 1919, Reservists wishing to reside outside the United Kingdom have been discharged, and such men have no military obligation, so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned. It has recently been decided, however, that a Reservist who wishes to reside permanently outside the United Kingdom is not to be discharged but is to be given leave without pay during the period of such residence abroad. While so resident, such a Reservist will not be recalled to the Colours, but should he return to this country before his reserve service expires, he will receive reserve pay and will be liable to recall to the Colours. A copy of Army Order No. 451 of November, 1922,* setting forth this arrangement is enclosed.

9. As it is not intended to enforce any reserve liability in the case of an Army Reservist granted permission to reside permanently outside the United Kingdom, the Army Council will have no objection to any such Reservist who may be domiciled in [the Dominion] [New Zealand] [Newfoundland] and being utilized in [the Dominion] [the New Zealand and Defence Forces] [Newfoundland] if his services are required.

10. The foregoing paragraphs with regard to men of the Army Reserve do not apply to those who obtain permission to proceed outside the United Kingdom as a temporary measure. In such cases, provided that the period outside the United Kingdom does not exceed twelve months, reserve pay is issued and liability to instant recall to the Colours continues.

11. I should be glad to be informed whether your Ministers concur in the above proposals of the Army Council.

I have, &c.,

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 30th October, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the Army Council have given careful consideration to your despatch No. 197 of the 13th May, 1922,† regarding the position of officers holding commissions in the British Army who are domiciled in the Commonwealth of Australia, and that, subject to the considerations set out in paragraph 3 of this despatch, they see no objection to an officer holding a commission in the Commonwealth Forces concurrently with his commission in the British Army.

2. With regard to the disposal of such officers in the event of war the Army Council would probably wish to recall for service with the British Army a certain limited number of officers who are in receipt of retired pay, whose names would be communicated to your Government in advance, but subject to this they are prepared to surrender to the Commonwealth Government the first call on the services of officers of the Reserve of Officers who are permanently resident in Australia, should your Government consider that the services of these officers would be of value to the Commonwealth.

* Not printed here. † No. 178.

3. In the event of the decision of your Government on this question being in the affirmative, the Army Council are of the opinion that only those officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers domiciled in the Commonwealth who are in receipt of retired pay from United Kingdom funds, should remain in the Regular Army Reserve of Officers. Steps would consequently be taken to inform all those officers otherwise situated that they will relinquish their British Army commissions.

4. The Council would make any reduction of retired pay of officers called up by the Commonwealth Government conform to the regulations in force for officers recalled for service with the British Army, and in no case would any service performed with the Commonwealth Forces count towards increase of pension, gratuity, or any other advantages that might be given from United Kingdom funds for service with the British Army.

To enable the Army Council to carry out this proposal they would be glad if arrangements can be made to notify them of the dates on which such officers commence and cease to draw pay from Commonwealth funds.

5. The Army Council would also inform all officers in receipt of retired pay, who are residing or intend to reside permanently in the Commonwealth, of their liability for service in the Commonwealth Forces, and the financial consequences so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned. For this purpose I should be glad if you would request your Ministers to furnish a detailed statement regarding this liability of service.

6. The above arrangements would apply only to officers domiciled in the Commonwealth, and you should invite the attention of your Ministers to the fact that the Army Council desire that all officers who are temporarily resident but not domiciled in the Commonwealth should be liable to recall by the War Office.

7. A further communication will be addressed to you with regard to officers of the Territorial Army and officers of the Indian Army.

8. I should be glad if you would also inform your Ministers that as regards men of the Army Reserve who are domiciled in the Commonwealth, the position is as follows:—

Prior to the 11th November, 1919, Army Reservists were permitted to reside abroad permanently, and if resident in a Dominion or Colony in which there was an Imperial Garrison, drew their reserve pay. From the 11th November, 1919, Reservists wishing to reside outside the United Kingdom have been discharged and such men have no military obligation so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned. It has recently been decided, however, that a Reservist who wishes to reside permanently outside the United Kingdom is not to be discharged, but is to be given leave without pay during the period of such residence abroad. While so resident, such Reservists will not be recalled to the Colours, but should he return to this country before his reserve service expires he will receive reserve pay and will be liable to recall to the Colours. A copy of Army Order No. 451 of November, 1922,* setting forth this arrangement is enclosed.

9. As it is not intended to enforce any reserve liability in the case of an Army Reservist granted permission to reside permanently outside the United Kingdom, the Army Council will have no objection to any such Reservist who may be domiciled in the Commonwealth being utilized in the Commonwealth Forces, if his services are required.

10. The foregoing paragraphs with regard to men of the Army Reserve do not apply to those who obtain permission to proceed outside the United Kingdom as a temporary measure. In such cases, provided that the period outside the United Kingdom does not exceed twelve months, reserve pay is issued and liability to instant recall to the Colours continues.

11. I should be glad to be informed whether your Ministers concur in the above proposals of the Army Council.

I have, &c.,

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 183.]

(No. 280.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 30th October, 1923.

WITH reference to Your Royal Highness's despatch No. 523 of the 23rd September, 1922,* I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Army Council have given careful consideration to the position of officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers and men of the Army Reserve who are domiciled in the Union of South Africa.

2. The Army Council agree that in time of war the services of officers of this category may be utilized by the Union Government for the defence of the Union, or for service in the prevention and suppression of internal disorder, on the understanding that the Minister of Defence will agree to the recall by the Army Council of any officers drawing retired pay from United Kingdom funds who may be required for service with the British Army. The Council will not, however, recall any such officers domiciled in the Union unless the Union Government has previously been informed that the services of these officers will be required, and has granted them exemption in accordance with paragraph 6 of Minister's minute enclosed with your despatch under reference. As desired by your Government, a list of officers likely to be required will be prepared and forwarded to you shortly. The Council understand, however, that this arrangement will not apply to officers who are temporarily resident and not domiciled in the Union, and that all these will remain liable to recall without prior reference to your Government.

3. Any reduction of the retired pay of officers called up for service by the Union Government in accordance with the preceding paragraph will conform to the Regulations in force for officers recalled for service with the British Army, and in no case will any service performed with the Union Forces count towards increase of pension and gratuity or any advantages that might be given from United Kingdom funds for service with the British Army.

To enable the Army Council to make any reduction in retired pay which may be necessary, they would be glad if arrangements could be made to notify them of the dates on which such officers commence and cease to draw pay from Union funds.

4. All officers on retired pay who are resident in South Africa or intend to reside there will be informed that they are liable to render military service in the Union Defence Forces in the event of war, or for the prevention and suppression of internal disorder, and of the financial consequences in so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned.

5. I should be glad if you would also inform your Ministers that the Army Council have decided that no citizen of the Union of South Africa will in future be appointed to a commission in the Regular Army Reserve of Officers, and that all officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers, domiciled in the Union who are not in receipt of retired pay from British Army funds, will be informed that they will relinquish their British Army commissions.

6. As regards men of the Army Reserve, the Army Council state that prior to the 11th of November, 1919, Army Reservists were permitted to reside abroad permanently, and, if resident in a Dominion or Colony in which there was an Imperial Garrison, drew their reserve pay. From the 11th November, 1919, Reservists wishing to reside outside the United Kingdom have been discharged and such men have no military obligation so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned. It has recently been decided, however, that a Reservist who wishes to reside permanently outside the United Kingdom is not to be discharged but is to be given leave without pay during the period of such residence abroad. While so resident, he will not be recalled to the Colours, but should he return to this country before his reserve service expires, he will receive reserve pay and will be liable to recall to the Colours. A copy of Army Order No. 451 of November, 1922,† setting forth this arrangement is enclosed.

* No. 68 in Dominions No. 82.

7. As it is not intended to enforce any reserve liability in the case of an Army Reservist granted permission to reside permanently outside the United Kingdom, the Army Council will have no objection to any such Reservist who may be domiciled in the Union being utilized in the Union Defence Forces, if his services are required.

8. The foregoing paragraphs with regard to men of the Army Reserve do not apply to those who obtain permission to proceed outside the United Kingdom as a temporary measure. In such cases, provided that the period outside the United Kingdom does not exceed twelve months, reserve pay is issued and liability to instant recall to the Colours continues.

9. A further communication will be addressed to you with regard to officers of the Indian Army and of the Territorial Army. It would appear that officers of the latter Forces are the only members of His Majesty's Auxiliary Military Forces who are likely to be domiciled in the Union in any appreciable numbers.

10. I should be glad to be informed whether your Ministers concur in the above proposals of the Army Council.

[MY LORD.] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 18th January, 1924.

WITH reference to my despatch [No. 520,] [413,†] [225,] [280,‡] [123,*] of the 30th of October, [To Australia only: and to Your Excellency's despatch No. 197 of the 13th of May, 1922,§] regarding the position of officers holding commissions in the British Army who are domiciled in [Canada,] [the Commonwealth of Australia,] [New Zealand,] [the Union of South Africa,] [Newfoundland,] I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that I have now consulted the Secretary of State for India on the subject of the position of British officers of the Indian Army resident in the Dominions.

2. With regard to officers of the Indian Army on leave from India and temporarily resident in the Dominions at the outbreak of war, it is proposed that orders should be issued to such officers to rejoin their units or appointments forthwith. It is also proposed that the Government of India should have the first call on the services of officers of the Army in India Reserve of Officers who may be on leave from India and temporarily resident in the Dominions.

3. With regard to officers who have retired on pension from the Indian Army and are permanently resident in the Dominions at the outbreak of war, it is desired that the services of these officers should, in view of the special nature of the training required for service with the Indian Army, be placed at the disposal of the Government of India in the first instance. This arrangement would not apply to the junior officers of the Indian Army who have been retired with gratuities as "surplus" under the Royal Warrants of the 25th April, 1922, and the 25th April, 1923, as these officers are not in any circumstances under any liability for further service in the Indian Army.

4. The services of officers of the Army in India Reserve of Officers who may be residing permanently in the Dominions at the outbreak of war, would be at the disposal of the Dominion Governments, and there would be no objection to such officers being granted commissions in Dominion Forces, though it is considered that in that event they should relinquish their commissions in the Army in India Reserve of Officers.

* No. 179. † No. 180. ‡ No. 181. § No. 178.

5. The position with regard to the retired pay or pension of any retired officer of the Indian Service who might be employed by a Dominion Government, would be the same as if the officer had been recalled for service with the Indian Army except that any service performed with the Dominion Forces would not count towards any increase of pension or retired pay, gratuity or any other advantages which might be given from Indian funds to officers recalled for service with the Indian Army.

6. I should be glad to be informed whether your Ministers concur in the above proposals.

7. A similar despatch is being addressed to the Governor-General of [Canada,] [the Commonwealth of Australia,] [New Zealand,] [the Union of South Africa,] [the Governor of Newfoundland.]

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 31st January, 1924.

WITH reference to the Duke of Devonshire's despatch No. 280 of the 30th October,* I have the honour to transmit to you, herewith, a copy of a minute from my Ministers regarding the position of officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers and men of the Army Reserve who are domiciled in the Union of South Africa.

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 183.

Prime Minister's Office, 26th January, 1924.

MINUTE 52.

MINISTERS have the honour to state, with reference to His Royal Highness the Governor-General's minute No. 1/1369 dated 23rd November, 1923, transmitting despatch No. 280 from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, that they concur in the proposals of the Army Council on the subject of the position of officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers and men of the Army Reserve who are domiciled in the Union of South Africa.

With particular reference to paragraph 5 of the despatch, Ministers would be glad if those officers concerned could be advised that it is open to them to apply for commissions in the Union Defence Forces Reserve of Officers on relinquishing their British Army commissions. Formal applications for appointment should be addressed to the Adjutant-General, Union Defence Forces, Defence Headquarters, Pretoria.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 17th March, 1924.)

(No. 13.)

SIR,

Government House, Wellington, 1st February, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the Duke of Devonshire's despatch No. 225 of the 30th October, 1923,* concerning the position, in the event of war, of officers and men of the Regular Army Reserve.

2. My Ministers note, with satisfaction, the decision of the Army Council to allow certain officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers and certain other ranks of the Army Reserve domiciled in New Zealand to serve in the New Zealand Forces.

3. In the event of war in which New Zealand becomes involved on a large scale, my Government would be glad to accept the services of the officers and other ranks referred to, in so far as they could be absorbed. It is considered there would be difficulty in absorbing officers of senior rank, but no difficulty is anticipated in absorbing all who may be available in ranks not higher than Major in the Infantry or Captain in other arms of the service, but no guarantee could be given in this respect.

4. Arrangements will be made, as requested in paragraph 4 of the despatch under reply, to notify the Army Council of the dates on which officers concerned commence and cease to draw pay from Dominion funds.

5. The liability to serve in the New Zealand Forces is as follows:

(i) Under the provisions of the New Zealand Defence Act, all males between the ages of 17 and 55 years, who have resided in New Zealand for six months, are liable to be called up, in case of emergency, for service within New Zealand only, unless they have previously volunteered to serve abroad.

Retired officers of His Majesty's Naval or Military Forces cannot, however, be called upon to serve in a lower rank than they held in such service.

The New Zealand Permanent Forces are liable to serve abroad.

It is presumed that the liability of officers of the Regular Army Reserve of Officers to be called up for service in any part of the world will still apply to such officers domiciled in New Zealand, and that the War Office could, in time of emergency, order such officers to serve in the New Zealand Forces either in New Zealand or abroad.

(ii) If, in the event of another war, a Military Service Act, making service abroad universal and compulsory, is again enacted, as was done in the War of 1914-19, Reservists would, under such legislation, be liable to serve with the New Zealand Forces abroad.

(iii) The officers concerned would not be liable to be called up for training except on mobilization, unless they belong to or are attached to the New Zealand Reserve of Officers, in which case they would be liable to one annual training of eleven days in camp every third year.

In this connexion, my Government suggests:

(a) That the War Office instruct all officers concerned, that in the event of war they should report in writing to Defence General Headquarters, Wellington, for instructions;

(b) That the New Zealand Government be authorized to employ such of these officers as may be found convenient, with the exception of those referred to in paragraph 2 of the Duke of Devonshire's despatch, whom the War Office wishes to recall, and

(c) That with regard to the remainder, the New Zealand Government should communicate with the War Office as to their disposal.

6. It is thought that it will not be necessary to grant a commission in the New Zealand Forces to officers concerned, as they could be attached and serve by virtue of their original commission.

* No. 179.

7. The reference to the liability to recall, by the War Office, of officers temporarily domiciled in New Zealand, and the remarks concerning men of the Army Reserve, are noted by my Government.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 31st March, 1924.)

(No. 34.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 22nd February, 1924.

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch dated 30th October, 1923, No. 413,† regarding the position of officers holding commissions in the British Army who are domiciled in Australia, I have the honour to inform you that the Commonwealth Government concurs in the Army Council's proposals contained in that despatch.

With regard to the grant of commissions in the Australian Military Forces to officers who are not in receipt of retired pay, the Commonwealth Military Board would inform such officers at the time, as suggested in paragraph 3 of the despatch under reference, that it would be necessary for them to relinquish their commissions in the British Army. The Military Board would also take steps to communicate to the Army Council the names of officers appointed to the Commonwealth Forces subject to the fulfilment of this condition.

In connexion with the statement in paragraph 4 of the Duke of Devonshire's despatch, that the Army Council would make any reduction of retired pay of officers called up by the Commonwealth Government conform to the Regulations in force for officers recalled for service with the British Army, the Minister for Defence presumes that no reduction would operate by reason of employment in peace training in the Australian Citizen Forces for non-continuous periods, amounting under the present Act approximately to sixteen days per annum. I should be glad to learn whether this view is correct. Arrangements would be made to inform the Army Council of the dates on which officers commence and cease to draw pay from Commonwealth funds.

With reference to the Army Council's request to be furnished with a detailed statement regarding liability for service in Australia, I forward, herewith, a copy of the Commonwealth Defence Act, 1903-18,‡ and would invite attention to Sections 125(c), 125(d) and 127 (I) (c) thereof; and in respect of a time of war, to Sections 46 and 47 for members of the Citizen Forces, and to 59 and 60 for non-members. Attention is also invited to the remote liability prescribed in Section 51. It is noted that a further communication will be addressed to me respecting officers of the Territorial Army and officers of the Indian Army.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 2nd June, 1924.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 15th April, 1924.
WITH reference to your predecessor's despatches dated 18th January, 1924, No. 27,* and 30th October, 1923, No. 413,† regarding the position of officers of the Indian Army and the British Army respectively, who are domiciled in Australia, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that the Commonwealth Government would be glad if arrangements could be made whereby officers of the British Army and the Indian Army, not on the Active List, and permanently resident in Australia, need not be required to relinquish their commissions in the respective armies on being granted a commission in the Commonwealth Citizen Military Forces. The services of officers with experience in the British and Indian Armies are of value in the training of the Citizen Forces, but these officers, though otherwise willing to do so, are reluctant to offer themselves for service in the Commonwealth Citizen Forces when the relinquishment of their former commissions is made a necessary condition.

My Prime Minister informs me that the retention of their former commissions by officers of the British Army and the Indian Army, who are permanently resident in Australia and are granted commissions in the Commonwealth Citizen Forces, would not affect the question of the Commonwealth Government's concurrence in placing at the disposal of the British Army and the Indian Army, respectively, on the outbreak of war, those officers whose services are so requested in the two despatches mentioned above. If it should be necessary, arrangements could be made to grant only temporary commissions to those officers who are permitted to retain their commissions in the British or the Indian Army, but in many respects it is desirable that the commissions granted should not be temporary.

The officers granted commissions in the Commonwealth Citizen Forces would receive the pay of their rank for the number of days of the annual training performed by them.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that the Army Council have had under consideration the rules governing alliances between regiments of the Local Forces of the self-governing Dominions and regiments of the Regular Army and the Territorial Army.

2. These rules, which were drawn up in 1910 on the basis of Colonial Defence Committee Memorandum, No. 408 M, of the 21st of July, 1909, copies of which were enclosed in Lord Crewe's Confidential despatch of the 16th December, 1909,‡ are as follows:—

(I) Applications for alliances made through the Dominion Governments should only be encouraged between Units of the same arm having some common associations.

(II) Only one Unit of the Forces of each self-governing Dominion should, as a rule, be allied to the same regiment, facilities being given to officers and men of the Dominion Unit who visit the station of the allied Unit to be attached to and trained with that Unit.

3. Owing to the altered conditions resulting from the Great War and the reorganization of the various Dominion Forces, the Army Council consider that the rules governing alliances should be amended in so far that the restriction of only one Unit of the Forces of each Dominion being allied to the same regiment should be removed, and that if a Dominion Regiment wishes to be allied to more than one Imperial Regiment, or vice versa, such alliances should be sanctioned.

MY LORD, Downing Street, 6th May, 1924.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's despatch No. 214 of the 16th of August, 1923,* and to my telegram of the 11th of April,† regarding alliances between regiments of the New Zealand Military Forces and Imperial Units, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Army Council have had under consideration the general question of the rules governing alliances between regiments of the Local Forces of the self-governing Dominions and regiments of the Regular Army and Territorial Army.

2. These rules, which were drawn up in 1910 on the basis of Colonial Defence Committee Memorandum No. 408 M, of 21st July, 1909, copies of which were enclosed in Lord Crewe's Confidential despatch of the 16th December, 1909,‡ are as follows:—

(I) Applications for alliances made through the Dominion Governments should only be encouraged between Units of the same arm having some common associations.

(II) Only one Unit of the Forces of each self-governing Dominion, should, as a rule, be allied to the same regiment, facilities being given to officers and men of the Dominion Unit who visit the station of the allied Unit to be attached to and trained with that Unit.

3. In connexion with the request that the alliance of the Wiltshire Regiment to the 10th (North Otago) Regiment may be annulled, as this regiment has been merged into the Otago Regiment which is already affiliated to the East Surrey Regiment, the Army Council state that on informing the Colonel of the Wiltshire Regiment of this request this officer has replied that all ranks of his regiment regret that it has been found necessary to cancel this affiliation, and also that he considers that such affiliations may render great help in the question of mutual assistance to emigrating soldiers of the Imperial Army to the Dominions.

4. In view of the above considerations and of the altered conditions resulting from the Great War and the reorganization of the various Dominion Forces, the Council consider that the rules governing alliances should be amended in so far that the restriction of only one Unit of the Forces of each Dominion being allied to the same regiment should be removed, and that if a Dominion Regiment wishes to be allied to more than one Imperial Regiment, or vice versa, such alliances should be sanctioned.

* 47652/23: not printed; it contains certain proposals as to alliances of particular regiments.

5. I should be glad to receive an expression of the views of your Ministers on the suggested amendment of the rules.

6. In view of these proposals the questions raised in your despatch under reply will be held in abeyance until a decision has been reached concerning alliances in general.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 202.]

(No. 465.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 4th August, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to state that His Majesty's Government are desirous of arriving at certain decisions in regard to the future position of Naval and Military Reservists resident in the Irish Free State; and to request that you will lay the following considerations before your Ministers.

2. The category of Naval Reservists in respect of whom it is desired to come to an understanding with your Government is that of men of the Royal Naval Reserve. Until recently, local officers of the Board of Trade and the Board of Customs and Excise acted as Registrars of the Royal Naval Reserve in Free State territory; their duties comprised the recruiting of eligible men for the reserve, the examination, enrolment, and re-enrolment of candidates, the despatch of men for periodical training, their mobilization for active service when called out by Proclamation, the keeping of records, and the payment of retainers in accordance with the Regulations.

3. Since the transfer to your Government of the powers of the Board of Trade and Board of Customs and Excise, it has, of course, not been possible for these functions to be exercised by the local officers of those Departments; and, unless some equivalent arrangement can be made, the hitherto existing organization of the Royal Naval Reserve in the Free State must inevitably lapse. Your Ministers will no doubt agree that such a result is to be deprecated, both from the point of view of the efficiency of the Navy, and in the interests of the men themselves whom the disbandment of the Royal Naval Reserve would involve in some pecuniary loss.

4. His Majesty's Government will accordingly be glad to learn whether your Ministers can see their way to co-operate in a scheme whereby the functions described in paragraph 2 above should be undertaken by those officers who are now performing the duties previously exercised by the personnel of the British Departments appointed as Registrars of the Royal Naval Reserve. Should your Ministers find themselves able to agree to the principle suggested, details of the scheme could be elaborated in subsequent correspondence.

5. A somewhat analogous position exists in relation to British Army Reservists resident in the Free State. There are at present about 2,200 such Reservists, and their aggregate Reserve pay amounts to about £40,000 a year. They are liable in law to re-join the Colours when called out for permanent service on emergency, and they are also liable to be called up for annual training. If they fail to make good either liability, they are in law guilty of desertion, and of absence without leave, respectively.

6. It is obvious that, whilst a large number of these Reservists would no doubt be willing to fulfil their obligations spontaneously, His Majesty's Government will now have to depend for the machinery of calling them up, and for enforcing the law against any recalcitrants, upon the goodwill and co-operation of your Ministers. I shall be glad to be informed whether your Ministers are prepared to give an assurance of their willingness to co-operate, and whether, in their opinion, any legislation on the part of your Government will be necessary to empower them to take the necessary measures.

I have, &c.,
DEVONSHIRE.

IRISH FREE STATE.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 14th May, 1924.)

[Answered by No. 203.]

(No. 184.)

SIR,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 13th May, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to refer to the Duke of Devonshire's despatch No. 465 of the 4th August last* and subsequent correspondence relative to the future position of British Naval and Military Reservists resident in the Irish Free State, and to express regret for any inconvenience caused to His Majesty's Government by the delay in replying thereto.

2. In view of the altered conditions following the enactment of the Constitution of the Free State, my Ministers consider that, under any scheme in connexion with the matter, arrangements should be made whereby existing Reservists would be given the option of withdrawing from their obligations as such or of intimating their desire to continue them.

3. As regards Royal Naval Reservists, my Ministers are prepared to co-operate in a scheme instituting arrangements similar to those referred to in paragraph 2 of His Grace's despatch. They would propose, however, that the regulations governing these Reservists should be such as to permit their absorption, if desired, into such Force, if any, as it might be decided to raise for coastal defence on the termination of the period of five years specified in Article 6 of the Treaty of the 6th December, 1921. It would be desirable therefore that any arrangements that may be made in regard to these Reservists should be subject to review at the end of that period.

* No. 201.

4. My Ministers are also prepared to consider favourably a scheme for the setting up of machinery for the purpose of calling up Naval and Military Reservists when required. As regards the enforcement of the law against recalcitrants, my Ministers would suggest that the apprehension of such persons would best be effected by the police forces of the Free State, who would arrange to hand them over to the proper authorities of His Majesty's Government.

5. As to the necessity for my Ministers seeking legislative power to enable them to take any action that may be required in connexion with the desired co-operation, they will not be in a position to arrive at an opinion until the details of the scheme mentioned above have been settled.

I have, &c.,
T. M. HEALY.

(No. 526.)

SIR, Downing Street, 5th September, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to state, for the information of Your Excellency's Ministers, that the views expressed in your despatch No. 184 of the 13th May,* in regard to the position of British Naval and Military Reservists resident in the Irish Free State have been communicated to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty and the Army Council, and have also been brought to the attention of the Air Council.

2. The Army Council's observations on the question are embodied in a Memorandum of which a copy is enclosed. They further state that they have noted with much satisfaction the willingness of the Irish Free State Government to assist them in calling up the British Military Reservists on emergency, and desire to express their thanks for the attitude adopted by your Ministers in the matter.

3. I shall address a further communication to you on receipt of the Admiralty's views in regard to Naval Reservists. In the meantime your Ministers may wish to give their consideration to the points raised by the Army Council in the accompanying Memorandum.

I have, &c.,
(For the Secretary of State),
HENRY LAMBERT.

Enclosure in No. 203.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING SUGGESTED ARRANGEMENTS TO BE MADE FOR CALLING UP BRITISH MILITARY RESERVISTS RESIDENT IN THE IRISH FREE STATE.

1. It appears desirable to the Army Council that the normal arrangements in force in the case of Reservists resident in this country should be adhered to, so far as possible, in the case of Reservists resident in the Irish Free State especially in view of the fact that, owing to the proximity of the Free State, there are no physical difficulties in the way of applying this system. Under these arrangements, names and addresses of all Reservists, including those resident in the Free State, are kept by the officers in charge of (Regimental) Records in this country, and it is the duty of these officers, when general or partial mobilization is ordered, to send by post to each Reservist, in a special envelope, the official "notice to join."

2. This notice, in the case of a partial mobilization, is accompanied (a) by a travelling warrant, which the Reservist presents at the railway station in order to obtain a ticket to the place of joining, and (b) by a money order which he can cash at a post office in order to obtain funds for the incidental expenses of his journey.

3. In the case of a general mobilization, the travelling warrant and money order are not sent with the notice to join, but the man holds, in peace, with his identity certificate, similar forms which he can in that case use in the same way. Further, in the case of general mobilization, although the notice to join is sent, the man (who is in possession of standing instructions as to his place of joining on emergency) is expected to act at once, not on this individual notice, but on press notices and posters exhibited at police stations, post offices, etc.

4. It will be seen that under these arrangements the matter lies almost entirely between the military authorities in this country and the individual Reservist, and that in the case of a willing Reservist the civil authorities have only to co-operate by understanding and using a few simple forms. In the case of an unwilling Reservist, or of one whose joining might possibly be interfered with by his neighbours, the civil authorities and particularly the police might have more trouble, so that it might be desirable to conceal as far as possible the nature of the instructions sent, e.g., by the use of an ordinary plain envelope to enclose the notice. In this connexion, the Council would observe that they concur with President Cosgrave's Government in thinking that recalcitrants should be arrested by the Irish Free State police and handed over by them to the authorities of His Majesty's Government.

5. The Council will be glad to have the advantage of the observations of the Irish Free State Government on the above, with suggestions for any modifications of the normal procedure which may be recommended. In particular they desire to learn whether the Free State Government consider that, in the special conditions which obtain at present in the Free State, the posters could be displayed there when necessary, and if displayed would help and not hinder the mobilization process. In other parts of the British Isles the arrangements for the display of posters are in the hands of the police. Posters are used only in connexion with general, not partial mobilization.

6. In making the above proposals, the Council have assumed that the post offices in the Irish Free State will cash money orders issued by the General Post Office, and that the Railway Companies will accept the travelling warrants referred to, or that it will be possible to make some arrangements to overcome any difficulty which may arise in this respect.

7. With regard to the question of giving existing Army Reservists resident in Ireland the option of release from their obligations, the Council feel bound to say that they would prefer not to offer them this option. It would be difficult to do so in the case of existing Reservists without giving the same option to all Reservists resident in the Irish Free State hereafter. It is already the practice to discharge automatically any Reservist who joins the Irish Free State Army, and the Council, as at present advised, would prefer to make no change.

8. In any event, the Council do not think that under present conditions it is possible to offer an effective option, since no means yet exist of effectively enforcing the Reservist's liability. The fact therefore that a man had declined the option of discharge, and had thereby remained qualified to draw his reserve pay, would at present be no guarantee that he really intended to join on emergency.

MY LORD,

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying summary of the proceedings of a Conference concerning air training and organization, between [the Chief of the General Staff, Canada,] [the Technical Advisers of the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia]

[the Naval Adviser to the New Zealand Delegation] and the Air Staff, which took place during the course of the recent Imperial Conference.

2. The Air Council would be glad to learn whether your Ministers concur in the recommendations prepared at the Conference.

(Secret.)

Enclosure in No. 204 (as sent to Canada).

A CONFERENCE of the Air Staff, Royal Air Force, and the Chief of the General Staff, Canada, was held at the Air Ministry on 31st October, 1923.

The Conference considered in detail proposals for the Organization of the Air Force of Canada and best means by which Canada and home Royal Air Force could render each other mutual assistance to develop and build up the Air Forces of both countries so as to ensure their effective co-operation in the event of war.

The following recommendations were put forward:—

(1) That as far as possible the Royal Canadian Air Force should as a minimum be able to produce in the event of war the following units with types of aeroplanes similar, as far as practicable, to those of the home Royal Air Force:

- 2 Army Co-operation Squadrons.
- 1 Bombing and Reconnaissance Squadron.
- 1 Fighter Squadron.
- 1 Flying Boats or Amphibian Squadron.
- 1 Flight for Cruisers.

The Air Force Staff expressed the opinion that it is more efficient and economical to keep service squadrons and employ them on civil work than it is to have civil squadrons and use them for service purposes when required.

(2) The Royal Canadian Air Force should endeavour to send cadets to be trained at Cranwell, who, after being trained and serving for four years in the Royal Air Force, would return to the Royal Canadian Air Force.

(3) (a) The Royal Canadian Air Force should, if practicable, send boys, airmen and non-commissioned officers to Halton or Cranwell for training who, after being trained, would return to the Royal Canadian Air Force.

(b) That boys and airmen should be enlisted by the home Royal Air Force for the Royal Canadian Air Force, who, after being trained, would be sent out to Canada.

(4) That some Royal Canadian Air Force officers should be sent to the home Royal Air Force to attend courses.

(5) That Canada should, if possible, send suitable candidates to the home Royal Air Force for short service commissions, i.e., for five years, who would, after serving in this country, return to Canada and be taken into the Royal Canadian Air Force reserve (or active list, if desired).

(6) That Canada and the home Royal Air Force should adopt as far as feasible the system of exchange of officers on the same basis as exchanges have been undertaken between that Dominion and the home Army, i.e., by

- Loans,
- Attachments,
- Interchange of Officers.

(7) That the home Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force should keep each other informed by means of periodical letters of all particulars which would be of value to the two Services.

(8) In order to keep the home Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force in closer touch, that when practicable a Senior Officer from home should be sent out to Canada to study the Royal Canadian Air Force and similarly Senior Officers from Canada should be sent to Great Britain to study the home Royal Air Force.

As regards (1) the Air Ministry undertook to keep the Royal Canadian Air Force informed as regards the types of machines in use or in contemplation with the home Royal Air Force.

As regards (2), (3), (5) and (6), the Air Ministry undertook to draw up a paper setting out the proposed schemes with the financial details.

The Chief of the General Staff, Canada, expressed the opinion that he believed the Canadian Government would gladly adopt the recommendations expressed in paragraphs (4), (6), (7) and (8), and that as far as practicable would endeavour to conform with the remaining recommendations.

(Secret.)

Enclosure in No. 204 (as sent to Australia).

A CONFERENCE of the Air Staff, Royal Air Force, the First Naval Member Designate of the Royal Australian Naval Board, the Australian Representative on the Imperial General Staff at the War Office and Wing Commander Williams, Member of the Air Board, Melbourne, was held at the Air Ministry on 1st November, 1923.

The Conference considered in detail proposals for the organization of the Royal Australian Air Force and the best means by which Australia and the home Royal Air Force could render each other mutual assistance to develop and build up the Air Forces of both countries so as to ensure their effective co-operation in the event of war:

The following recommendations were put forward:—

(1) That officers should be selected in Australia for short service commissions and trained there for one year and then be sent to serve with the Royal Air Force at home for four years, after which service they would return to Australia for service in the Royal Australian Air Force Active List or Reserve.

(2) In order to maintain equal standards of proficiency it is desirable that the system of reserve training should be organized on the same lines throughout the Empire.

(3) That the Royal Air Force should give facilities to the Royal Australian Air Force for the training of officers at specialist and other courses.

(4) That Australia should, if possible, send suitable candidates to be trained at Cranwell and serve for two or three years with the Royal Air Force, after which they would return to the Royal Australian Air Force.

(5) That Australia and the home Royal Air Force should adopt, as far as feasible, the system of exchange of officers on the same basis as exchanges have been undertaken between that Dominion and the Home Army, or between that Dominion and the Royal Navy.

(6) That the home Royal Air Force and the Royal Australian Air Force should keep each other informed by means of periodical personal letters of all particulars which would be of value to the two services.

As regards paragraphs (1), (3), (4), (5), the Air Staff will draw up a paper setting out the proposed schemes with financial details for the consideration of the Australian authorities.

Enclosure in No. 204 (as sent to New Zealand).

(Secret.)

A CONFERENCE of the Air Staff, Royal Air Force and the Naval Adviser to the New Zealand Delegation was held at the Air Ministry on 7th November, 1923.

(1) The Conference considered in detail proposals for organization of the Air Force of New Zealand and the best means by which the New Zealand and the home Air Force could render each other mutual assistance to develop and build up the Air Forces of both countries so as to ensure their effective co-operation in the event of war. It was decided to recommend that New Zealand should aim at building up an Air Force, as far as and when possible, so as to be able to produce as a minimum in the event of war the following units with types of aeroplanes similar, as far as practicable, to those of the home Royal Air Force:

- 1 Squadron for Army Co-operation.
- 1 Squadron for Long-Distance Bombing and Reconnaissance.
- 1 Squadron Flying Boats or Amphibians.

(2) As regards the training of personnel, it was decided to recommend that, in order to enable New Zealand to start her Air Force, a Royal Air Force officer should be sent over from home to New Zealand to help and advise in Air Force matters.

(3) The Air Force Staff informed the Naval Adviser to the New Zealand Delegation that should the New Zealand Government at a later date wish to send officers, non-commissioned officers or men to this country for training they would afford every facility for this to be done and would be pleased to furnish schemes giving the financial details for the consideration of the New Zealand Government.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(Secret.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 16th January, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the consideration of your Ministers, a copy of a memorandum containing proposals for the co-operation of the British and South African Air Forces in matters of Training and Organization, which were communicated by the Chief of the Air Staff to the Prime Minister of the Union of South Africa in the course of the recent Imperial Conference.

2. The Air Council would be glad to learn whether your Ministers approve these proposals, and if so, what action is proposed in regard to them.

3. The financial and other particulars referred to in the two final paragraphs of the memorandum will be forwarded as soon as available.

I have, &c.,

DEVONSHIRE.

(Secret.)

Enclosure in No. 205.

THE following recommendations are put forward for the organization of the South African Air Force as being the best means by which South Africa and the home Royal Air Force could render each other mutual assistance to develop and build up the Air Forces of both countries as to ensure their effective co-operation in the event of war.

(1) That so far as possible the South African Air Force should as a minimum be able to produce in the event of war the following units with types of aeroplanes similar, as far as practicable, to those of the home Royal Air Force:

- 1 Squadron for Army Co-operation.
- 2 Squadrons for Long Distance Reconnaissance and Bombing.
- 2 Flights Float-planes, Flying Boats or Amphibians.

(2) That the South African Air Force should endeavour to send cadets from South Africa to be trained at Cranwell, who would do two or three years with the home Royal Air Force, and then return to the South African Air Force.

Or if desired,

That the Royal Air Force should endeavour to obtain cadets for the South African Air Force and train them at Cranwell. They would then do two or three years in the home Royal Air Force, and then would be sent out to the South African Air Force.

(3) That the South African Air Force should send, if possible, candidates to the home Royal Air Force for short service commissions, i.e., for five years, who would, after serving at home, return to South Africa and be taken into the South African Air Force reserve or active list.

Or if desired,

That the South African Government should nominate candidates from this country for short service commissions to the home Royal Air Force, i.e., five years. The candidates would have to give an undertaking that after serving they would go to South Africa and be taken into the South African Air Force reserve or active list.

(4) That some South African Air Force officers should be sent to the home Royal Air Force to attend courses of instruction.

(5) That the South African Air Force should if practicable send boys, airmen and non-commissioned officers to Halton or Cranwell for training, who after being trained would return to the South African Air Force.

Or that, if possible the Royal Air Force would enlist boys and airmen in this country for the South African Air Force, who after training would be sent to South Africa.

(6) That South Africa and the home Royal Air Force should adopt as far as feasible the system of exchange of officers on the same basis as exchanges have been undertaken between that Dominion and the home Army, i.e., by Loans, Attachments, Interchange of Officers.

(7) That the home Royal Air Force and the South African Air Force should keep each other informed by means of periodical personal letters of all particulars which would be of value to the two services.

(8) In order that both countries may obtain the best personal assistance, that the principle of a senior officer being sent out from this country to South Africa by invitation should be recognized. Similarly that senior officers should be sent to Great Britain.

(The object of this paragraph is to recognize this as a normal procedure, and to prevent any possibility of rumours of war being spread if a senior officer from this country visits South Africa, or a South African officer this country.)

In connexion with paragraph (1), the Air Ministry will keep the South African Air Force informed as regards the types of machines in use or in contemplation with the home Royal Air Force.

As regards paragraphs (2), (3), (5) and (6), the Royal Air Force will draw up a paper setting out the proposed schemes with the financial details.

Paragraph (4). The Air Ministry will supply the dates and duration of courses.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 30th September, 1924.

WITH reference to paragraph 3 of my predecessor's Secret despatch of the 16th of January,* relating to air training and organization in the Commonwealth, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the consideration of your Ministers, a copy of a Memorandum† by the Air Council on the subject of co-operation between the Royal Air Force and the Royal Australian Air Force in the matter of personnel.

2. The schemes outlined in the Memorandum were discussed by representatives of the Air Council with Brigadier-General T. A. Blamey, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., who submitted an alternative to scheme (1). He suggested that the short-service officers to be recruited in Australia should be granted Royal Air Force and not Royal Australian Air Force commissions, and that, after five years' service on the active list (one year under training in Australia, and four years with the Royal Air Force), they should return to Australia as Royal Air Force and not Royal Australian Air Force Reserve officers, and should be made available for service on the mobilization either of the Royal Air Force, or the Royal Australian Air Force. Their retaining fees would be paid by the Imperial Government, while the Australian Government would undertake their reserve training, and would be prepared to accept a reasonable arrangement as regards division of the cost of the whole scheme.

* No. 204.

† Not printed here.

‡ Not printed.

General Blamey suggested, further, that ordinary Royal Air Force Reserve officers who migrated to Australia should be given reserve training by the Australian Government on repayment by the Imperial Government, remaining in the Royal Air Force Reserve and receiving their retaining fees from Air Ministry funds. It appears that the main advantage to Australia under this proposal would be that reserve officers recruited in Australia under scheme (1) could be given reserve training under the same regulations as reserve officers who had been recruited in England under the ordinary short-service scheme of the Royal Air Force, and had, subsequent to transfer to the Royal Air Force Reserve, migrated to Australia.

3. The Air Council have carefully considered General Blamey's scheme but regret that they do not see their way to accept it as it would appear to contemplate the establishment of a section of the Royal Air Force Reserve in Australia, a proposal which, on account of the distance from the probable scene of mobilization, is not regarded as satisfactory. They note with appreciation the suggestion that the Australian Government should undertake on their behalf the training of ordinary reserve officers migrating to Australia, but as this is a matter affecting all the Dominions, they are unable to reach a decision at present and will give it further consideration. In their view, however, the number of ordinary reserve officers migrating to any one Dominion would always be small, and they would prefer that the question of their training should be kept separate from the larger problem dealt with in scheme (1). They state that the few Royal Air Force Reserve officers now in Australia are in Class C of the reserve, and receive neither retaining fee nor training.

4. The conference then turned from the discussion of General Blamey's alternative to the discussion of scheme (1) as put forward by the Air Council. It is understood that General Blamey saw objection to the proposal that Australia should be responsible for the cost of passages from and to Australia, and suggested that this should be divided between the two Governments. The Council regret that they are unable to accept this suggestion as it is inconsistent with the financial basis of their proposal, namely, that Air Votes should bear the same charge as they would for an officer recruited in England, in respect of each year's effective Air Force service. They consider that this basis is very favourable to Australia, since they do not claim for the Imperial Exchequer any part of the saving which is likely to accrue from the combination of Royal Air Force active list service with Royal Australian Air Force reserve service, and the consequent increase of total service obtained from each officer taught to fly. The Council believe that the advantage will be realized after a full study of their proposals viewed as a whole. The proposals under scheme (1) (b) have been remodelled and presented in a somewhat simpler form so as to disclose more clearly the basis of the division of cost. In this connexion the Council state that it will be observed that, in accordance with the financial basis explained above, the cost of training in England is taken for the purpose of calculating the sum payable to Australia for giving a complete course of flying training, and they add that General Blamey was of the opinion that the Commonwealth Government, in considering the advantages of the scheme, would be prepared to assume that the same sum represented the cost of giving the equivalent training in Australia, in the present absence of figures showing the actual cost.

5. Certain amendments, which the Air Council do not think it necessary to explain in detail, have been made to schemes 2-6, as a result of the conference with General Blamey, and a note has been inserted in the Memorandum regarding the amended periods of service under scheme (2), with which he agreed.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's Secret despatch of the 10th April,† and to the last paragraph of the Duke of Devonshire's Secret despatch of the 16th of January,‡ I have the honour to transmit to you, for the consideration of your Ministers, the accompanying copies of memoranda§ on co-operation between the Royal Air Force and the South African Air Force as regards personnel, which have been received from the Air Council.

2. These memoranda develop concrete schemes for giving effect to the Air Council's proposals so far as personal co-operation is concerned, and follow closely parallel proposals made for co-operation with the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Royal Australian Air Force. No schemes are included to give effect to the alternative proposals at (2) (3) and (5) of the memorandum enclosed in the Duke of Devonshire's despatch referred to above, as the Air Council would desire to await information as to the wishes of the Union Government before putting these into concrete form. Should the Union Government so desire the Council will be happy to suggest definite schemes to implement the alternative proposals.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [Your Royal Highness,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of an extract from the House of Commons Official Report of the 26th of June, containing a statement by the Prime Minister in regard to the Air Policy of His Majesty's Government.

Enclosure in No. 211.

EXTRACT FROM THE HOUSE OF COMMONS OFFICIAL REPORT, DATED 26TH JUNE, 1923.

MR. J. RAMSAY MACDONALD (by Private Notice) asked the Prime Minister whether he is now in a position to make his promised statement in regard to the Government's air policy.

THE PRIME MINISTER: The Government have come to the following conclusions with reference to British air power:

In addition to meeting the essential air power requirements of the Navy, Army, Indian and Overseas commitments, British air power must include a Home Defence Air Force of sufficient strength adequately to protect us against air attack by the strongest air force within striking distance of this country.

It should be organized in part on a regular and permanent military basis, and in part on a territorial or reserve basis, but so arranged as to ensure that sufficient strength will be immediately available for purposes of defence. The fullest possible use to be made of civilian labour and facilities.

In the first instance, the Home Defence Force should consist of 52 squadrons, to be created with as little delay as possible, and the Secretary of State for Air has been instructed forthwith to take the preliminary steps for carrying this decision into effect. The result of this proposal will be to add 34 squadrons to the authorized strength of the Royal Air Force. The details of the organization will be arranged with a view to the possibility of subsequent expansion, but before any further development is put in hand the question should be re-examined in the light of the then air strength of foreign Powers.

In conformity with our obligation under the Covenant of the League of Nations, His Majesty's Government would gladly co-operate with other Governments in limiting the strength of air armaments on lines similar to the Treaty of Washington, in the case of the Navy, and any such arrangement, it is needless to say, would govern the policy of air expansion set out in this statement.

MR. MACDONALD: Have the Government considered how this statement is to receive consideration? Is it proposed to move the Adjournment one day, or are any other facilities to be given for discussion?

THE PRIME MINISTER: I thought it was only right that the moment the decision was taken the House should be made acquainted with the fact, but, of course, the details have not been wholly worked out. I think that before long my right honourable friend the Secretary of State for Air will be in a position to discuss them fully and in detail, when the Air Estimates are put down. Later in the year—I am afraid not this Session—there will also be a Supplementary Estimate for certain expenditure which will have to be incurred in the current year, and on that occasion full discussion can take place.

MR. LAMBERT: Can the right honourable gentleman give us an approximate estimate of the expenditure to be incurred by this expansion of the Air Force?

SIR S. HOARE: It is difficult to give an exact estimate of the expenditure, but I think I shall be within the mark if I say that the expenditure involved this year will not exceed £500,000, and that the average expenditure for this expansion, including both capital and maintenance, will not be more than £5,500,000. That expenditure will not be reached until probably three years. Within the next year and the year following the expenditure will be considerably less than the full average expenditure of £5,500,000. These figures are somewhat in the nature of a rough estimate. I shall be able to give a more detailed and accurate estimate when the Supplementary Estimate comes to be considered.

Secretariat Note.—The following despatches were sent to the Dominions and Southern Rhodesia on the subject during 1924:—

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 16th February, 1923.

WITH reference to my Secret despatch Dominions No. 425 of the 16th of December last,* covering a draft revised scheme of cable and radio-telegraphic censorship, I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, copies as marked in the margin of a Report† on Postal Censorship during the Great War. This document is of great value and must be the indispensable basis for any scheme of postal censorship in future emergency. In view, however, of the difficulties referred to in paragraph 17 of the Report, further research would undoubtedly lead to some minor modifications on points of fact, and His Majesty's Government cannot accept responsibility for all the statements made in it, especially when they refer to the work of particular Departments or Governments.

In the Great War, methods of postal censorship had to be improvised; and experience showed that the difficulties, particularly in connexion with international relationships, were far more serious than in the case of cable censorship. Under the direction of the Committee of Imperial Defence, anxious consideration has been given to the numerous points which arose, some of which cannot be said to have been satisfactorily settled even at the end of the war, and the enclosed draft "Regulations‡ for Postal Censorship in Time of War or Emergency" and "Memoranda‡ on the action to be taken by His Majesty's Government" embody the results which have been arrived at. A few doubtful points still remain unsettled, and these documents have not yet received the final approval of His Majesty's Government. It would, however, facilitate further progress if your Government would be good enough to give the draft regulations their early consideration and would forward to me any suggestions they desire to make for their amendment together with an expression of their general agreement if, as I trust, the proposed scheme meets with their approval.

2. Ministers observe, however, that there is no mention of the Radio-Telegraphic Installation at Apia. This omission may be intentional, but as Western Samoa is mandated territory under the administration of New Zealand they are of the opinion that the control of the radio-telegraphic station in war time or emergency should be clearly defined and included in these regulations.

3. Ministers add that the Naval War Plans of New Zealand will provide for the appointment of special radio censors for duty at the stations considered to be of particular importance, and these censors, appointed by the Naval Department, should be able to take up their duties immediately on the receipt of the censorship telegram, with perhaps the exception of Apia, where a slight delay might be involved.

MINUTE No. 374.

MINISTERS have the honour to refer to His Royal Highness the Governor-General's Secret Minutes No. 1/1342 dated the 17th January, 1923, and No. 1/1348 dated the 16th March, 1923, on the subject of the censorship of cable, land line, radio-telegraph and postal communications, and to state that the draft regulations and memoranda submitted by the Colonial Office have been carefully considered, and as a result Ministers find themselves generally in agreement with the principles enunciated therein and have no hesitation in giving His Majesty's Government the assurance that steps will be taken at once to give effect to the revised regulations in the dossiers for preparation for war of the Union of South Africa. In this connexion Ministers will be glad if His Royal Highness will inquire from His Majesty's Government whether the provisional nature of the arrangements outlined in the Secret Minute of the Committee for Imperial Defence No. E.12 of the 13th May, 1921 (War Book), have in any way been varied, or accepted as final.

His Majesty's Government is, of course, aware that Section 92 of the South Africa Defence Act, 1912, empowers the Governor-General to establish a censorship in time of war, and the enforcement of the regulations can, therefore, take place by Proclamation.

With regard to the notification to the International Telegraph Bureau (paragraph 12 of Part I of C.C. (c) 72) Ministers are agreed that in order to secure uniformity it is desirable that all notifications to the Bureau relating to the modification of censorship within the Empire should be made by the Imperial Government.

Ministers note that it is proposed that the Army Council will exercise the general control over cable and postal censorship, and, in consultation with the Admiralty, over radio-telegraph censorship throughout the British Empire. They assume that, in regard to this Dominion, all duties relating to censorship will be exercised by the Chief Censor at Capetown, and that the District Intelligence Officer at Capetown, upon the outbreak of war, will be granted a warrant by the Governor-General appointing him Naval Adviser to the Chief Censor in the Union.

The arrangements outlined in regard to Staffs and duties as set forth in C.C. (c) 72 and C.C. (c) 4, pages 62 and 71 et seq. respectively have been noted and Ministers will make provision accordingly.

Ministers will be grateful if additional copies of the regulations and memoranda of action to be taken can be furnished them, or, if His Majesty's Government has decided not to issue further copies of the provisional drafts, if this request may be borne in mind when the regulations and memoranda are finally approved.

telegraphic censorship for use in time of war or emergency, I have the honour to inform you that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the Commonwealth Government concurs in the "Regulations for Censorship in time of war or emergency of Cable, Land Lines and certain Radio-telegraphic Communication" as set out in "C.C. (c) 4" and "C.C. (c)—72," both revised to 1st July, 1922.

It is desired, however, that the particulars shown on pages 67, 68 and 69 of "C.C. (c) 4" and pages 58, 59 and 60 of "C.C. (c)—72" be amended by the substitution of "Amalgamated Wireless (Australasia) Limited" for "Navy Department" wherever the latter appears against "Radio Installations" and that the letters "D.N.I." for "D. of I." be substituted in the postal address opposite "Melbourne" on page 36 of "C.C. (c)—72."

MY LORD DUKE,

Government House, St. John's, 18th December, 1923.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch Dominions No. 425, Secret, of the 16th December, 1922,* on the subject of a draft revised scheme of cable and radio-telegraphic censorship for use in time of war or emergency, which has been prepared by the Committee of Imperial Defence.

2. My Ministers are in general agreement with the scheme as revised, and have no suggestions to offer regarding its amendment. The memoranda on the action to be taken by His Majesty's Government will be of assistance to my Ministers in connexion with censorship in this Colony in time of war or emergency.

3. In looking through the documents it has been noticed that there are one or two items needing correction, and a memorandum† setting forth the alterations necessary is enclosed herewith for greater accuracy. To this memorandum is attached a list of cables leaving Newfoundland and crossing the North Atlantic, as well as those which go to St. Pierre, the Dominion of Canada and the United States of America.

SIR,

Government House, St. John's, 29th March, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 50, Secret, of the 16th February, 1923,* on the subject of postal censorship during the Great War and to inform you that the Report, Regulations and Memorandum were forwarded to the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs for his consideration. My Ministers are now in receipt of a Report from that official intimating that his Department has no suggestions to offer in connexion with the proposed scheme and Regulations. As this Department considers that the Report would be of special value to them in their work, copy of No. 127 has been retained by them in a secure place so that its contents may be kept secret, being disclosed only to those officers whose duties it affects.

2. My Ministers are in general agreement with the proposals as outlined in the despatch under acknowledgement and have no objection or amendment to offer in respect of the draft Regulations.

I have, &c.,

W. L. ALLARDYCE.
